The first step is to identify the key components of the system. This involves understanding the hardware and software requirements, as well as the data flow and processing logic. Once the components are identified, the next step is to design the system architecture. This includes defining the overall structure of the system, the roles of the various components, and the interfaces between them. The design phase is critical, as it determines the feasibility and performance of the system.

The Journal of Management is an international, peer-reviewed journal covering all aspects of management practice and theory. The journal is published by the International Association of Management Journals (IAMJ), which is a member of the International Association of Business Schools (IABS).
