Rowe Kicks Off School Board Campaign

Jamie Rowe

By Mike Steely
steelm@knoxfocus.com

Although she has been involved with her community, schools, and volunteering for several years, Jamie Rowe has never sought public office. Until now.

Tomorrow, at 5 p.m., Rowe will kick off her campaign for the Second District Seat of the Knox County School Board at the Fountain City Lion's Club Community Building.

Rowe, a resident of Fountain City, is married to Holland Rowe, a retired pharmacist. Both of their sons attended Shannondale Elementary, Gresham Middle and Central High Schools.

She has volunteered at Gresham and Shannondale and was awarded a Bicentennial Award for her work at Gresham. She wrote 120 environmental education activities that integrated science with other academic subjects; created outdoor trails, and, with the help and support of several teachers, started Gresham Environmental Center.

Rowe is active in various organizations such as the American Cancer Society. She currently serves on the board of directors of Fountain City Town Hall.

The Focus presented a series of questions to her last week:

Focus: How would you have voted on the additional one-year extension of Superintendent McIntyre's contract?

Rowe: I would not have voted for it. There was no logical reason to extend for another year up to 2017 and commit to another $222,000 of taxpayer money when it wasn't necessary.

Focus: How do you feel about the 5 Year Plan recently adopted by the school board?

Rowe: "There were several things in it that bothered me. The top two things, aside from the ones the teachers brought up, are the Principal Handbook, where they would be told what decisions they could make and what decisions would be

The Knox County Commission will have a special call meeting today, September 8, to elect a chair and vice-chair. Appointments to various commissions and boards will also be made to fill spots left by the four previous commissioners.

Committees to be named today include the Cable TV Committee, Court Subcommittee, Finance Committee, Insolvency Board, and Rules Committee.

UTK Not Amused By City Tax

By Dan Andrews

On August 25, the Knox County Commission made the decision to repeal the county's portion of the "amusement tax," a tax that is applied only to ticket sales for University of Tennessee (UT) football and men's and women's basketball home games. The 5.0% tax on tickets sold to UT games at Neyland Stadium and Thompson-Boling Arena has been divided between the City of Knoxville (4.5%) and Knox County (0.5%). Now that the county no longer has this tax, much attention has now become focused on whether the City of

The Knox County School Board of Education had two back to back meetings last week, with the Sept. 2 Work Session meeting followed by the Sept. 3 Regular monthly meeting.

Two new board members and two returning board members were sworn in by Juvenile Court Judge Tim Irwin in a ceremony immediately before the Work Session meeting.

Returning members Gloria Deathridge (District 1) and Lynne Fugate (District 4) were joined by Terry Hill (District 6) and Amber Rountree (District 9). Also sworn in was Adam Hasan (Bearden High School), appointed student representative to the Board.

Interim District 2 member John Fugate was appointed by the County Commission on August 25, and will serve until the results of the November election are certified.

Board member-elect Patti Bounds was out of the country on a long-planned trip, and will be sworn in before the next work session on September 29.

Another new face at the BOE meetings last week was Bud Armstrong, County Law Director. David Sanders will continue working with the school system, but Bud will be attending meetings to provide more immediate answers to procedural questions that arise.

In his Superintendent's Report, Dr. McIntyre said the ACT results were in, and Knox County overall showed an improvement from an average composite score of 20.2 in 2013 to an average of 20.4 in 2014. This is above the state average of 19.1.

McIntyre didn't mention that in 2011 the Knox County average composite score was 20.4 and in 2012, the average was 20.6. So KCS ACT scores are back to where they were in 2011. Progress?

Several items on the agenda received robust discussion last Tuesday, including an amendment to Board Policy EBH "Community Use of School Facilities," the collection of Trustee's fees, and the settlement of mixed drink tax revenues as proposed by the Town of Farragut.

A local organization sued KCS for "nominal damages" - approximately $900 for the cost of rescheduling the events as well as compensation for legal fees - after the district cancelled their after-hours reservation at Farragut High School due to concerns about the content of the meeting.

Law director Bud Armstrong advised the school made downtown. That shows either a distrust of their employees or a lack of confidence, or a power control. The other big problem I have is the Parent's Resource Center. To me you've got to have housing and employees. That's just more money being spent on things that can be done at their local school."

"It's just more money not going for the education of the children."

Focus: How do you feel about Common Core?

Rowe: "I've read some about it; I'd like to learn more. I'm kind of concerned about the number of steps you have to go through to get to an answer and how it's marked wrong if you don't. Tennessee is one of eleven states that dropped out of the consortium to align their assignments with Common Core. I have questions about that (Common Core) more than I have answers."

Focus: How about the number of teacher evaluations?

Rowe: "The thing that bothers me most is that it's not always apples to apples. It may be grapes to tomatoes because you might have a music teacher evaluating a PE teacher or a math teacher being evaluated by a social studies teacher. You need to have a same subject person doing the evaluation."

Focus: How do you feel about the interim appointment of John Fugate to the school board?

Rowe: "I wouldn't have had any input on that. To me it's a short term thing, I don't think anybody can accomplish a whole lot in four or five meetings."

Focus: Do you have any thoughts on the endorsement of Tracie Sanger by Indya Kincannon?

Rowe: "I don't know why Indya chose her. I didn't ask for her support or endorsement."

Focus: Can you comment on the cooperation between the school board and the county commission?

Rowe: "That's where I feel I have an advantage. I have worked on issues closely with county commission in the past and can build on those relationships. Most school board members, except for Mike McMillan, may not know any of the commissioners personally. Also, in my time on Town Hall we've worked on many community issues."

"I've always done my own research, I don't just take the word of the powers that be and at my own expense I've hired experts to give me a fair, accurate, and unbiased opinion about issues."

Focus: Anything you'd like to add?

Rowe: "I feel that reading is very important. I just love books and I want to donate 20% of my salary to purchase books for first and second graders in all the schools in the 2nd district so they can have those books and take them home with them. They can begin a library of their own. Lots of children do not have a book, maybe it will inspire them to learn to read. If children don't learn to read well by the end of the third grade they are four times more likely to drop out of high school. Beginning with the fourth grade you shouldn't be learning to read, you should be reading to learn."

board to amend Policy EBH regarding use of public facilities by community groups because the current policy was "constitutionally suspect." The board voted to adopt the resolution, which includes the following amendment:

"Approval for use of school buildings and property will not be withheld based upon the content of the message or viewpoint of the applicant; but Knox County Schools may reject applications if it is reasonably foreseeable based upon specific articulable facts that the event will include or promote unlawful activity, including but not limited to violence or threats of violence, property damage, or obscenity. Knox County Schools also reserves the right to reject applications if it is reasonably foreseeable based upon specific articulable facts that the event will interfere with other school-related activities, such as by excessive noise or overcrowding."

The Board also approved a motion for the Law Director to proceed with settlement of the lawsuit.

The Board took no action on further pursuit of collection of Trustee Fees. Former MetroPulse publisher Joe Sullivan claims the Knox County taxpayers owe fees totaling $10M to KCS. Law Director Armstrong issued a legal opinion on July 8 disputing this claim.

BOE member Karen Carson went to great lengths to dispute the legal opinion of the Law Director.

Armstrong said that his is an "advisory opinion," and the BOE can take whatever action on that advisory they want, but if they sue, the odds of winning are "slim to zero to none." Even Carson acknowledges such action would incur "tremendous legal costs."

The Board voted to accept a settlement on delinquent mixed drink taxes by the Town of Farragut. The offer is $1.1M to be paid in installments over three years. The BOE originally asked for $1.3M and considered asking for interest as well. Dr. McIntyre pointed out that Farragut has since remitted the mixed drink taxes on schedule.

There was robust debate at the Work Meeting about the August vote on the 2020 Strategic Plan. Armstrong said that because the Board violated its own policy in declaring an "emergency," the plan approved during the August 6 meeting is void.

Carson asked if the BOE can ignore the legal opinion. Armstrong said yes, but added, "Your own procedure nullifies the vote. That is not the opinion of the law director." Armstrong added that the version of the plan approved at the July 2 meeting stands.

At Wednesday's meeting, Mike McMillan asked if the BOE can take up the BOE approved plan at any point and amend it. Armstrong said, "If the procedures are followed, it is up to this Board how you want to implement and enact your plans and processes."

Carson interjected a point of order, saying "This board has not accepted that we have voided the vote in August. That is the opinion of the law director. I do concede that the vote in August has been voided."

McMillan asked Carson, "If you're not going to accept the law director, who are you going to accept?"

Carson replied, "I respect the Law Director... but this Board is under no obligation to accept the opinion of any legal director... I was not put here by my constituents to sit here and say this is the King or the Pope or whatever you call it."

Armstrong clarified that

Pensions, Girl Scout's rezoning and Demolition Delay

By Mike Steely
steelm@knoxfocus.com

Several proposed pension changes for city employees received final approval Tuesday evening by the Knoxville City Council and will now appear on the November ballot for voters to approve or disapprove. The five changes to the retirement system, if approved, will affect the interest rates of refunded money, control lump-sum payments, allow near-retiring employees to opt for a less risky investment plan, restrict beneficiaries to a spouse or other person approved by the Pension Board and City Council, and create two new "non-employee" positions on the Pension Board.

Also during Tuesday's meeting, the council turned away an appeal by Frank Slagle to stop a 246-unit apartment project at Northshore Town Center. Slagle and his neighbors have fought the project, headed by Flournoy Development, for more than year.

Slagle called the project "too big" for the 10 acres at Thunderhead Road and Northshore. He said it constitutes "spot zoning" and violates the sector plan there. He said the large development, of 4- and 5-story buildings, also violates the Scenic Highway guidelines.

Attorney Arthur Seymour, for Flournoy, said the plans for the development have been revised several times for neighborhood concerns and the project is exempt from the Scenic Highway laws. He said that Flournoy is "fully compliant."

Councilman Nick Della Volpe sided with Slagle and moved to approve his appeal, saying, "We're trying to shoehorn a lot of units into 10 acres." He said the apartments would change the nature of the area. The appeal, however, failed on a 6-3 vote as only councilmen Mark Campen and Daniel Brown sided with Della Volpe.

Now it looks like Slagle will take the issue to Chancery Court.

In another rezoning matter, the council was considering to change the zoning of a vacant lot along Merchant Drive near Wilkerson Road from agricultural to planned residential. Seymour, representing the Tanasi Girl Scout Council which owns the lot, asked the council to send the matter back to the planning commission so that the neighborhood and the owners could work something out.

Seymour said a meeting last Monday between the two factions made some headway and added, "There has been some discussion. There may be some uses of that property that are better than others." The council concurred and passed the matter back to the planners.

The council also granted approval of a 60-day delay in any request for the demolition of a structure built before 1865. Kim Trent, executive director of Knox Heritage, fully endorsed the idea as a useful tool and said it was like calling a "time out."

The purchase of 40 traffic controller units from Precision Traffic and Safety Systems got approval with the idea of beginning an overhaul of the city's traffic light system. Jim Hagerman, Director of City Engineering, told the council that the current system is so old that it uses a "DOS" computer control. He said that the 40 controllers are only 10% of the city's traffic lights and that some of these 400 traffic lights are "held together by duct tape."

The council authorized $79,400 for the new controllers from Precision Traffic and Safety Systems.

Council also approved $98,500 to do a market and feasibility study of the Civic Auditorium and Coliseum.

BOE Votes to Suspend Rules, Delays Reorganization Vote

By Sally Absher
sallyabsher@gmail.com

At the end of last Wednesday's Regular Meeting, the BOE took up the reorganization of the Board. Eight of nine members were present. (Member-elect Patti Lou Bounds is on an extended trip overseas, and does not return until September 8).

John Fugate nominated Mike McMillan, Amber Rountree seconded.

Karen Carson nominated Lynne Fugate, but she declined the nomination. Ms. Fugate said, "I feel that over the last year, I am somehow viewed as a divisive figure in Knox County... I think it's in the best interest of our school system if we as a Board can unite around a candidate who would be a unifier..."

Gloria Deathridge nominated Doug Harris, seconded by Ms. Carson.

A roll call vote was taken, and the vote, not surprisingly, was 4-4. Karen Carson asked each of the candidates to give a short statement on their vision and why they wanted the position.

McMillan said he wants the BOE to be "more accommodating to our teachers." He mentioned the number of tests, and the fear and concern of teachers. He suggested the individual BOE members have input in the selection of the members of the Teacher Advisory Council.

Harris said he wants to "unify the Board." He brought up increased funding and said he wants a "closer relationship with the superintendent," and to "listen closely to teachers." He said he has "some ideas to work with the superintendent behind closed doors."

Gloria Deathridge asked how Harris and McMillan felt about the time commitment and visibility throughout the District. Harris said "The time is a hard thing to swallow, but I am willing to do whatever it takes." McMillan said "I'm retired. I have a lot of time. I have certain obligations, but I will be around."

A second vote was taken and again, the roll call vote was 4-4.

Populace Versus Elitists

By Steve Hunley, Publisher
publisher@knoxfocus.com

I can't help myself, but I have been thoroughly amused by the uproar about the "side" agreement between the superintendent of schools and the Knox County Board of Education. The Focus was writing about this two and a half years ago. Mike McMillan was the only member of the Board who protested the portions of the agreement even the Knoxville News Sentinel labeled "un-American," words McMillan used first. Yet, never once did the Sentinel, nor any radio station nor any TV station run the first report about McMillan's objections to an agreement that stinks to high heaven. Were it not for WBIR reporter Mike Donila, the TV stations would never have gotten it right even at this late date.

For any of those of you who doubt my contention that Jim McIntyre has been protected by much of the local news media, this should make you think. The establishment has plenty of spokespersons in this town. The Sentinel of course; Hallerlin Hilton Hill on WIVK radio; and even some of the folks who pretend to be unbiased observers participating on the "talking head" shows, some of whom actually earn their livings as paid lobbyists and certainly don't bother to disclose their clients while pontificating on politics and current events. Yet, I have an agenda.

The Sentinel recently published an editorial talking about protecting the rights of the minority on the board of education. This is the surest sign the establishment expects to lose control of the board.

Attempts by McIntyre and his pack of pet circus poodles to stifle dissent has been going on for months, if not years. Certainly, Mike McMillan has been McIntyre's biggest detractor on the Board and many of the votes were 8-1. Yet when did the Sentinel ever once cry out about protecting the minority for the three years Mike McMillan was trampled in the dirt? When did the Sentinel declare its outrage when board chair Lynne Fugate refused to allow a student a single minute more to speak, while allowing pro-McIntyre principals to drone on?

As to settling political scores on the board of education, where was the Sentinel editorial expressing horror when Indya Kincannon attempted to bludgeon Mike McMillan with a bogus ethics complaint for following state law?

Where was the Sentinel's mighty morals when Karen Carson just happened to find a rule that helped to stifle the voices of teachers?

Only now, that the pro-McIntyre droids appear to be in the minority, does the Sentinel have an acute case of the worries for the rights of the minority.

It was a virtual Declaration of Hypocrisy.

Yet, other voices are beginning to be heard.

The Rude Awakening radio show is making an impact in our community, making Hallerlin Hill's own show seem about as interesting as cold mashed potatoes. In the past, those who have raised their voices to question the establishment elite in this town have been discounted, diminished and ridiculed as malcontents or having some sort of unsavory agenda. This, to put it politely, is just not true. The truth is that the elitists want to do all the picking and choosing while we pay the tab. They are for an appointed superintendent; I am for an elected superintendent. If they had their way, just about every official short of the county mayor would be appointed, precisely because they think they would be able to do the picking. Make no mistake about it, these folks have their own agenda. They simply attribute their own motives and actions as being above reproach. This, to put it politely, is just not true. Jim McIntyre's record as superintendent is a sorry one. How could any rational person think everything is hunky dory when more than 70% of our teachers say that Knox County is no longer a good place to work or learn? Our preparation rates — those rates that indicate how many of our students are prepared to go on and further their educations or get a job — are truly abysmal at only 21%.

McIntyre's arrogance has poisoned his relationship with Mayor Burchett and the County Commission.

What McIntyre has been good at is a never ending flow of glittering generalities and mighty few specifics. McIntyre spent $1 million for the notorious report from the Parthenon Group, which nobody thinks is worth air in a jug. McIntyre has excelled at spending more and more money and wanting even more to spend. McIntyre has an exemplary record at expanding and creating new layers of bureaucracy; he had hired scores of "coaches", not for new teachers, but veteran teachers. His strategic plan calls for yet another layer of bureaucracy to do the same thing for veteran principals. Anyone but a pluperfect bureaucrat could have accomplished addressing changes through a series of in-service meetings, but McIntyre prefers hiring full-time employees for this sort of thing.

Of course the elitists have little choice but to support McIntyre to the very last; after all, he was their pick from the beginning and to do otherwise is to admit they just aren't that good at picking and choosing. These folks like to be horrified by some of the choices made by average voters, but their own track record of picking and choosing is just horrible.

As a populist, I will always put my confidence in "we the people" instead of a chosen few.

Public forum speaker finds problems with 2020 Strategic Plan

One of the features of BOE meetings is public forum — when any citizen can come and speak for up to 5 minutes about issues that concern them. Every once in a while, a speaker are all wondering why? Your strategic plan is only a vision, it is only a high-level capture of what you plan to do going forward.

This plan contains no meat... no facts... no details. You like to throw out your "accomplishments" in the meetings you have with the community. What I find interesting is you always like to refer to the increased graduation rates, but you never put data behind it.

Kids have to graduate. Otherwise they get restricted drivers licenses. How much did that contribute?

You used our keywords from all of our feedback sessions: bussing, school improvements, teacher satisfaction, balanced calendar... You used all the key words, yet we're still in the dark.

I'm an operational manager. My job is strategic planning for an international company. Strategic planning is only your vision. We're looking for the details...When are you going to discuss it with the community?

These are not the forums for those discussions. These are your business meetings, and that's understandable. However, one year of coming out to find out what key words to include in your strategic plan, are not our voice, and they are not our vision.

After spending multiple hours digging through your data, what I find is that you've come up with budgets for the next five years.

Adrienne Burnett Elementary improvements were included in the capital improvement plan suggested in 2012, yet you have it in the budget for 2018, after two middle school builds.

I'm all for the middle school builds, but why are we delaying Adrienne Burnett another six years from the 2012 goal, when we've not even completed the studies for the middle schools?

We don't even know what the recommendations are going to be... When are they going to be done? How are you going to evaluate the results?

You have technology and security in the budget. Parents at my school... want to know why we don't do background checks on chaperones before they're with our kids on field trips? It costs too much money, yet we're willing to spend a large chunk of our budget on putting video surveillance systems in our school.

Technology — did we get the grant? What is the grant going to do? What is the ratio going to be, and how do you plan on doing the software upgrades that are required for all that technology?

We can't even get a standard where our schools publish their websites with like data. Some parents get more information, some parents get none.

TCAP. You promised us communications when the TCAP scores didn't make it out. Communications never came. I called for three months to get my children's before I finally found someone to give them to me.

Some of this information may be delivered though these sessions but you're not communicating with us. You're not communicating with the teachers. You're not communicating with the community... Give us the details before you come here to make your decision. You want us to support you? We need transparency.

There was an interesting conversation on the radio about the Law Director and

Change Is Coming

By Steve Hunley, Publisher
publisher@knoxfocus.com

The Knox County Board of Education, as expected, deadlocked while attempting to elect a new Chair. Incumbent Chairwoman Lynne Fugate announced she would not be a candidate for reelection as she had recently come to the conclusion she had become a divisive figure. The allies of superintendent Jim McIntyre rallied behind Doug "High Tax" Harris, while the independents backed Mike McMillan.

The contrast between the two candidates is as wide a gulf as can be.

Harris has loudly advocated more and higher taxes to support the schools. In fact, Harris has repeatedly gone on record as saying the school system should have a virtually unlimited budget. Harris has regularly supported just about anything and everything advocated by McIntyre.

McMillan, on the other hand, has spent most of his three years on the board of education as the lone voice of dissent. McMillan, a former county commissioner, been the champion of teachers on the board and has been critical of McIntyre's frequently dictatorial approach to running the school system.

Both candidates were asked by board member Karen Carson to elaborate on their respective philosophies. Harris promptly bragged that he enjoyed a warm relationship with McIntyre and could resolve differences "behind closed doors." The pro-McIntyre crowd seems to agree they can get a lot done behind closed doors. At least three of the four McIntyre acolytes — Lynne Fugate, Gloria Deathridge, and High Tax Harris — have all talked about just how much they can get done outside the public view.

McMillan supports real change.

The "side" agreement between the superintendent and the board that has been roundly condemned by just about everybody was quietly allowed to slip into the background precisely because Mike McMillan refused to go along. Unlike Harris, McMillan believes board members need to be careful stewards of the taxpayer's money. McMillan will have far more credibility with Mayor Tim Burchett and the county commission; should High Tax Harris become chairman of the board of education, his constant pleas for more and more money will certainly fall on deaf ears for the next four years.

McMillan has said everyone, friend or foe of the superintendent, should be treated alike. McMillan has said he is opposed to making any person, should he or she be parent, student, teacher or citizen, have to navigate a bureaucratic maze before being allowed to speak before the Board.

It is imperative to McIntyre that the chairman of the board be a rubber stamper. It won't be long before McIntyre is in a serious quandary as much of the money the board has been spending freely at his behest has come from the federal government and is running out. It is only a matter of time before the superintendent and Harris and the rest of that crowd start their warnings about an impending crisis unless the schools receive a lot more of your money. I think Mayor Burchett has the guts to tell McIntyre that the schools, like everybody else, have to live within their means.

High Tax Harris represents more of the same. Mike McMillan will usher in much needed change. The choice should be simple.

Commission to elect officers

Each will then pick the various chairs and vice chairs. Other committee appointments include the Retirement and Pension Board, the Codes Commission, the Arena Use Committee, Investment Committee, Audit Committee, Insurance Benefits Committee and the Development Corporation.

The commission meets next Monday for its workshop and agenda review meeting at 5 p.m. in the City-County Building. Items to be discussed during this September 15 agenda review will include honoring Glenn "Lefty" Miller for being named Meals on Wheels of America's American Volunteer, naming various members to the Board of Zoning Appeals and the Public Records Commission, and donating a grant of $85,000 to the school system for English Literacy.

Probably getting the most attention will be the discussion to approve a $1,307,714 construction contract to Whaley and Sons, Inc. for construction of the Karns Convenience Center and road improvements.

Other items include funds for the new Regional Forensic Center from the state of more than $4 million, funding of a contract with M. Salerno & Associates for worker's compensation nurse case management services, and passing along a grant of $283,300 for the health department's immunization services.

The commission will also discuss the agreement between the county and the city pertaining to the Metropolitan Planning Commission, at the request of Mayor Tim Burchett.

The approved agenda will go on to the commission's regular meeting on Monday, September 22.

BOE Votes to Suspend Rules, Delays Reorganization Vote

Chair Lynne Fugate asked, "Anybody think talking some more is going to change anything?" There was a unified response of "No."

She said that having "anticipated that we might have a close vote," she had reviewed the BOE policy, which says the board "shall reorganize in September." There is no mid-month meeting in September due to the TSBA meeting and Board Retreat.

Carson suggested suspending the rules and having the reorganization in November when all the permanent BOE members are in place.

Bud Armstrong confirmed that with a supermajority vote (6 votes) they could suspend the rules. He further clarified that the policy says the Board "shall reorganize at the first meeting in September." So the only option, given the stalemate, was to vote to suspend the rules.

Armstrong said that then a motion can be made to choose a new date, with the motion requiring only 5 votes to pass.

Fugate asked "Does that mean I have to keep serving until we figure this out?"

Carson moved to suspend the rules, Lynne Fugate seconded. Carson spoke to the motion, pointing out that there was no choice about suspending the rules, and that her motion had no alternative date attached.

Doug Harris asked if they could go on record that they would have the vote in November. He said "I'm going on record saying in public that I want the vote in November."

McMillan said, "Since we are discussing the particulars before we vote, since it says September, I think it should be done in September...I will not support postponing it until November.

Terry Hill said, "I think there would be some wisdom in having a new chair in place by our Board Retreat, either that or postpone the retreat also if we are talking about a new day and having new ideas under a new Board leadership."

McMillan asked what happens if there is also a 4-4 vote to suspend the rules? Fugate said "I'm still the Chair," but added, "I don't know that we ought to presuppose how people are going to vote about the date...I'm not sure I want to wait until November."

Harris said, "I'm fine with having a vote in September. Somebody's going to have to play their cards here, or we're going to sleep here tonight." Carson called the question on the motion on the floor, and the roll call vote was unanimous to suspend the rules.

Next the BOE took up the new date of the BOE. Carson clarified that Patti Bounds is scheduled to be sworn in on September 29, a Work Session Meeting. Carson made a motion to move the reorganization to the October 1 Regular meeting immediately following.

After more discussion, a roll call vote was taken, with all eight members present voting to delay the reorganization until October 1.

As far as the retreat...I hope this year, it's not at the Blackberry Lodge, seeing as we're reducing janitorial and other staffs, and there are plenty of other options for you to go and convene amongst yourselves.

UTK Not Amused By City Tax

Knoxville, should do the same.

According to a study released by the school, the University of Tennessee department of athletics (Tennessee Athletics) has an annual economic impact on Knoxville and the East Tennessee region of approximately $151 million. Also noted by the University are the following facts. Tennessee Athletics and its supporting fans encounter a tax burden faced by no other intercollegiate athletics program or fan base in the nation. Taxes on tickets to UT football and basketball games are at the current tax rate at a combined 14.25%, including a 9.25% state and local sales tax and the "amusement tax" that is 4.5% for the City of Knoxville and, before the repeal, 0.5% to Knox County. At least four SEC athletic programs are not subject to sales tax, and furthermore, no other school in the SEC and the nation is subject to an amusement tax of this nature. The total tax burden for Tennessee Athletics is an SEC-high $4.3 million per year. No other University (or sports entity) in America is forced to pay the municipality a tax based on ticket sales for playing home games in their facilities.

In addition to the indirect financial benefits that the City of Knoxville receives, it also has direct financial benefits related to Tennessee Athletics. Prices for parking in city parking garages ranges from $5 to $30 for passenger cars to $50 for RV full hookup, depending on location and type of vehicle and service (see <http://www.cityofknoxville.org/events/utsports>.) Also Knoxville Area Transit runs a trolley charter service to and from the stadium. Charging $6 round trip for downtown service and $16 round trip for service going to the Farragut location. Also, the University recently acquired from the city roads surrounding stadium. Recently, the city turned over the streets to the university and maintenance of the roads. However, the city has lost the revenue from the parking meters that previously did exist.

Rogero's office was very open and transparent and the director of communications provided the following comment. "You probably know that this is not a new issue. City officials have had many conversations with UT officials about it over the years. We have no plans to revisit the issue. Knoxville benefits greatly from being home to UT-Knoxville, and the University also benefits from being in Knoxville. The city provides services including fire protection and emergency response to UT students and staff both on and off campus - not only on home game days, but certainly on those days in particular. UT is also a major landowner in the city, but by virtue of being a government entity, it pays no property taxes to help support city services. The $1.5 million a year generated by the amusement tax - much of which is paid by out-of-town visitors who also benefit from city services and infrastructure while they are here - is money that helps pay down our Convention Center debt. In its absence, city taxpayers would have to make up the difference."

For residents wishing to express their opinion on this matter to their elected city officials please visit <http://www.cityofknoxville.org/citycouncil/members/> or call 311 for more information about contacting your city representatives.

SHARP'S RIDGE

Knoxville's Forgotten Park

By Mike Steely
 steelym@knoxfocus.com

Bet you didn't know that probably the best view of Knoxville and the Smoky Mountains is from an almost forgotten city park high above the city.

Local television and radio stations discovered the peak years ago, and why they chose Sharp's Ridge for an antenna farm is obvious. At 1,391 feet above sea level, the peak rises 200 to 300 feet above Knoxville. Sharp's Ridge is the second highest peak in Knox County, with House Mountain reaching 1,422 feet and Brown's Mountain in South Knox County reaching 1,250 feet above sea level.

Almost anywhere you live in central Knox County you can look north or south and see part of Sharp's Ridge. It's actually about 7 miles long, cut twice by First and Second Creek. Sharp's Ridge extends from Western Avenue (Oak Ridge Highway) to Mill Road between Washington Pike and Millertown Pike. McAnnaly Ridge is more or less an extension of Sharp's Ridge and runs from the end of Sharp's to the Grainger County line.

The Sharp's Ridge Memorial Park section of the ridge has Inskip and Fountain City to the north and Lonsdale, Lincoln Park and Whittle Springs to the south. Sharp's Ridge Memorial Park, atop the winding drive, is dedicated to the area's war dead.

The 111-acre park has several unpaved walking trails and is maintained by the city. It is quite the popular place for bird watchers, especially the Knoxville Ornithological Society. The park offers a couple of covered picnic areas at the summit and several places to pull off the narrow road.

The entry to the park is just off Broadway (south of I-640), onto Ludlow Avenue and then right onto the Sharp's Ridge Memorial Road. The park is on both sides and eventually you'll come to the end of the road at the Comcast tower.

All along you road you'll see signs about using the park and about police observation there. There are rules prohibiting alcohol, firearms, open fires, motorized vehicles off the roads, horseback riding, etc. One of the oddest is "No hitting golf balls anywhere in the park." Also, animals must be on a leash and "you must be respectful of others." The park is open dawn until dusk, unless otherwise posted.

The Appalachian Mountain Bike Club is currently building trails on the south side of Sharp's Ridge in connection with Legacy Parks. Luke Grieve is a member of the club and says there has always been old trails there that are open to hikers and mountain bikers, but "We are adding to that."

"Currently there is about 3 miles of trail on the south side with more to come and we have permission to build on the north side of the ridge as well," Grieve told The Focus.

"Having 8 to 10 miles of trails on the ridge will help to change the park's usage and perception and make it an outdoor destination," he said.

OAKWOOD AND LINCOLN PARK

Immediately south of Sharp's Ridge is the large neighborhood of Oakwood-Lincoln Park. The neighborhood stretches from the ridge down to Woodland Avenue and is bounded on the east by Broadway and to the west by I-275. It is an older but active neighborhood, and the neighborhood association was formed in 1979 to deal with traffic, lack of city services and crime.

The developing neighborhood became a street-car community and was annexed into Knoxville in 1917. Trolleys served the many homes that developed there. The streets have sidewalks and its location near downtown made it an ideal place for workers to live. The neighborhood is the location of several churches, the Christenberry School, Fulton High School, Steven's Mortuary, Fountain Lanes, Physicians Regional Medical Center and AYSO Soccer Region 275.

A recent boost to Oakwood and Lincoln Park was the sale of the old Oakwood Elementary School to Family Pride Corporation. Today the large school, which closed in 1995, is being renovated to become an assisted living facility. Located at 916 Shamrock Avenue, the large building will add new residents to the historic neighborhood as it becomes the Oakwood Senior Living facility, which will focus on assisted living and memory care.

Family Pride has renovated many old schools and other buildings to repurpose them. The corporation is also working to do the same to the Old Knoxville High School further downtown.

The Oakwood facility should house up to 62 senior citizens and employ about 30 health care workers.

The Oakwood-Lincoln Park Neighborhood Association is headed by Bill Hutton and meets the third Thursday every month in the Neighborhood Club House behind the Christenberry Elementary School at 916 Shamrock. The Club House was built in 1939, and Hutton said says the association is looking for ways to use it more for the benefit of the neighborhood.

"We reconstructed our board of directors and we're talking about ways we can be more involved in the community. Christenberry Elementary has become a community school and we're talking about helping with tutoring," Hutton told The Focus.

The association is active in protecting and preserving the area and annually promotes its Neighbors Night Out at the Christenberry Ball Field.

New and younger board members are joining the association and bringing more to the table for discussion at meetings.

Hutton said they are in talks with Emerald Youth Foundation about projects and may possibly partner on some house rehab projects as the number of vacant houses in the neighborhood has increased over the years.

Another project for the future might include painting a mural where the back of a building is exposed after an old business was demolished at the corner of Woodland and Central.

You can reach the Oakwood-Lincoln Park Association at 219-3584 or at olp\_clubhouse@yahoo.com.

Pellissippi State holds informational sessions for Tennessee Promise

In September and October, Pellissippi State Community College invites students who will enter college in fall 2015 to attend informational sessions about the Tennessee Promise.

The Tennessee Promise is a last-dollar scholarship that will cover tuition and fees for community college students across the state, essentially giving high school graduates the opportunity to attend college for free, beginning with incoming freshmen in fall 2015. Although students won't be eligible to receive funding until they begin school next fall, the deadline to apply for Tennessee Promise is Nov. 1, 2014.

"It's extremely important that students understand that they must meet this deadline to qualify to receive Tennessee Promise funding. If a student misses this deadline, there will not be another opportunity to take advantage of the Promise scholarship," said Rebecca Ashford, vice president of Student Affairs at Pellissippi State.

Informational sessions at Pellissippi State will share details about program requirements and deadlines and highlight the educational offerings at Pellissippi State. Sessions will be offered at all five Pellissippi State campuses, from 6-7 p.m. each night:

Sept. 8: Hardin Valley, Goins Building Auditorium
Sept. 11: Strawberry Plains, Lobby

Sept. 15: Hardin Valley, Goins Building Auditorium

Sept. 18: Blount County, West Chevrolet Auditorium

Sept. 22: Hardin Valley, Goins Building Auditorium
Sept. 25: Division Street, Educational Resources Center

Sept. 29: Hardin Valley, Goins Building Auditorium
Oct. 2: Magnolia Avenue, Lobby

Oct. 6: Hardin Valley, Goins Building Auditorium

"The Tennessee Promise is an excellent opportunity for students throughout the state," said Leigh Anne Touzeau, assistant vice president of Enrollment Services. "We hope the students in our region will take advantage of this scholarship at Pellissippi State."

Amy and I moved into our house in December 1978. This year, for the first time, I put out tomato plants. The funny thing is I'm not that much in love with them, but in the summer the produce does taste good. I've babied the plants and staked them and then tied them up. To date, about 6-7 green orbs are hanging on the vine, and I'm in hopes they turn red and are ready to eat before rabbits or insects devour them.

All this leads to my missing the foods that Mother used to "fix" when I was a boy. She had a green thumb with all sorts of plants, and maybe she was more successful with them because she stuck them in the dirt, tamped them in with her tennis shoe, and left the alone. Whatever the reason, she used the bounty from Mother Nature to make some of the best tasting things I've ever had.

Every summer, she loaded us boys up, and we traveled to one of several blackberry fields. For some time we picked berries and suffered sticks and scratches from briars. The juice stained our fingers, and unfortunately, chiggers burrowed under our skin. At home, Mother washed the berries and then took most of them and began the process of boiling the juice out to make jelly.

She kept a few back to make cobbler. It arrived to the table from the oven and disappeared quickly.

By Joe Rector
joerector@comcast.net

In the back yard we had several grape vines. Mother would send us out early in the morning to pick grapes. We dodged wasps that dive-bombed us and grudgingly carried out the chore. Of course, after delivering the grapes, we were more than willing to eat the grape jelly that she made.

We also had a cherry tree, peach tree, pear tree, and apple trees. Mother took the fruits from all those trees and made pies and jelly. She made the dough and layered fruit with butter, brown sugar, and spices before topping the pies with more dough. Then she placed 4-6 pies into an oversized oven, and the aroma filled the house.

Mother's garden was filled with vegetables for canning or freezing. She picked beans until her back and hands ached. We'd sit outside or in front of the television and break beans by the bushels. Then she would wash them and sterilized dozens of Mason jars before stuffing them with "half-runners" or "bush beans." If the garden didn't produce enough, she'd make a trip to the market on Dale Avenue for a couple of bushels. Ears of corn were picked and shucked. Kernels were cut from the cobs and packaged into bags before being placed into a freezer that looked too much like a giant coffin.

Other things were prepared as well. Green peppers were cut and frozen; hot peppers were sewn on strings and hung for future use. Potatoes were grubbed, scrubbed, and stored on the ledges in the basement. Squash was also gathered and frozen.

Cucumbers were plentiful. Mother cut many for supper, but I never ate them. My father-in-law said that they were the only thing that a hog wouldn't eat, and I agreed with the assessment. However, many of them were gathered and put into jars. Then what I call "pickle water" was boiled and poured over them, and the jars were sealed. Dozens lined a shelf in the basement until they were properly aged. I had no problems eating those.

Heads of cabbage were chopped, and Mother prepared the stuff in some way before filling a five-gallon crock. The entire thing was set outside under our bedroom window and allowed to "perk." Jim and I sneaked to the crock and lifted the lid, an unfortunate action that allowed the foul odor to escape from what would at some point be kraut.

All of the food that Mother prepared was eaten during the winter months. By the time the next spring arrived, the freezer was nearly bare, and empty jars cluttered the basement. One of the certain things in life was replenishing of those foods would occur each year.

Mother passed in 1996, and for nearly 20 years, I've longed for a jar of blackberry jelly and a Dutch apple pie, and a cherry cobbler. When the time comes when I leave this world, I hope to meet up with her and ask her to fix some of those wonderful foods once again.

The Triumph and Tragedy of Woodrow Wilson

Part One

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill
rayhill865@gmail.com

Woodrow Wilson was the first Democrat to be reelected to a second consecutive term since Andrew Jackson. He had campaigned on the slogan, "He Kept Us Out of War" in 1916 and the President faced a serious opponent in the person of Charles Evans Hughes. Hughes is the only person in American history to leave a seat on the United States Supreme Court to accept a presidential nomination. A former governor of New York, Charles Evans Hughes was a majestic-looking man with a formidable white beard. Hughes, more than one noted, looked rather like what might imagine Jove to look like. Not an especially warm person publicly, former president Theodore Roosevelt grumbled about the "bearded iceberg".

The 1916 presidential election was quite close. Both Wilson and Hughes were able orators and both campaigned hard. Hughes swept the east coast, even carrying Wilson's adopted state of New Jersey where he had been governor before being elected president in 1912. The Electoral College came down to California and Hughes had made a mistake that would cost him the presidency. Perhaps the most popular elected official in California was Governor Hiram W. Johnson, who was running for the United States Senate in 1916. Both Hughes and Governor Johnson happened to be staying at the same hotel during the campaign, although apparently Hughes did not realize it. Johnson, naturally, expected to receive either a visit or a call from the presidential candidate of his own party, but he was disappointed. That particular oversight allowed California to slip into Woodrow Wilson's column by just over 3,000 votes.

The election remained uncertain for a few days and when a reporter telephoned Charles Evans Hughes's home, he was abruptly told that President Hughes could not be disturbed. The reporter replied, "Well, when he wakes up, tell him he's no longer the president."

Despite his narrow loss of the presidency in 1916, Charles Evans Hughes would go on to have a distinguished career and, remarkably, make a return to the Supreme Court of the United States. Hughes would become Secretary of State under Presidents Warren Harding and Calvin Coolidge. Hughes would return to the Supreme Court following the death of William Howard Taft, who had also been beaten in a presidential election by Woodrow Wilson and who had originally appointed Hughes to the high court. Taft, the only former president to serve on the Supreme Court, and as Chief Justice, was succeeded by Hughes.

President Wilson lost his own Secretary of State as America crept closer to war. Wilson had appointed William Jennings Bryan to serve as Secretary of State. Bryan was perhaps the most personally popular Democrat in the country, having been nominated for the presidency by his party no less than three times and having lost three times. Bryan had been instrumental in helping Woodrow Wilson win the 1912 Democratic presidential nomination over the favorite, Speaker of the House Champ Clark of Missouri. In fact, Clark actually climbed to claim a majority of the delegates, but party rules required a nomination be made by two-thirds of the voting delegates. Bryan, who had won election to the Democratic National Convention pledged to vote for Champ Clark, but he accused the Speaker of being supported by the Tammany Hall organization in New York and helped create momentum for Wilson. Speaker Clark's son, Senator Bennett Champ Clark, would make it his mission in life to change the two-thirds requirement to nominate a Democrat for president and he succeeded.

Bryan, a renowned fundamentalist and Christian layman, horrified many diplomats by refusing to serve alcohol while entertaining officially. Bryan was also a pacifist and routinely cautioned the president about trespasses against the American government and her citizens by the British Empire. Secretary Bryan insisted on a policy of strict neutrality and as the United States was drawn into the conflict, he could not in good conscience continue serving in the Wilson administration. He resigned his office and was succeeded by Robert Lansing, who would, in time, run afoul of Edith Wilson.

Wilson's pledge to keep America out of the First World War soon crumbled, especially with the aggressive submarine campaign waged by the German Empire. Numerous American lives were lost at sea when ships were torpedoed by German submarines. American passengers had been duly warned about booking passage on ships carrying supplies and munitions to Germany's enemies. Some Americans were eager to engage in the European conflict, not the least of whom was former President Theodore Roosevelt. TR glorified war and accused the bookish Wilson of being a coward. When Wilson made a speech and claimed there was such a thing as being "too proud to fight", Roosevelt nearly had a stroke. Even

FROM THE AUTHOR'S PERSONAL COLLECTION.

President & Mrs. Wilson in happier days, 1916 before the 1916 election, Roosevelt had pressed for American entry in the World War. When the luxury liner the Lusitania was sunk on May 7, 1915, Roosevelt later made a memorable speech, referring to the one hundred and twenty-three Americans who had died. Roosevelt's speech mentioned President Wilson's vacation home, Shadow Lawn.

"There should be shadows at Shadow Lawn; the shadows of the men, women and children who have risen from the ooze of the ocean bottom and from graves in foreign lands; the shadows of the helpless whom Mr. Wilson did not dare protect lest he might have to face danger; the shadows of babies gasping pitifully as they sank under the waves...Those are the shadows proper for Shadow Lawn; the shadows of deeds that were never done; the shadows of lofty words that were followed by no action; the shadows of the tortured dead."

In spite of his venomous criticism of President Wilson, Theodore Roosevelt had no compunction about petitioning his rival to form a division and go to Europe to join the fighting. Badly aging prematurely, frequently quite ill, blind in one eye and seriously overweight, TR's dream of fighting in the World War was hardly realistic. President Wilson received Roosevelt cordially and tried to let his predecessor down as gently as possible.

All of the Roosevelt sons fought in the war and by all accounts, quite bravely. All were wounded; some severely. Unfortunately, one was killed. Theodore Roosevelt's glorification of war came at a high cost. Quentin Roosevelt, the youngest of the former president's children, was an aviator and shot down over German lines. He was buried with honor and dignity by the Germans. Yet, cruelty in politics and people existed even then and a photograph of TR's dead son, his head shattered by bullets, was sent to the former president.

With Quentin's death, something went out of Theodore Roosevelt. His health began to deteriorate further and some felt the "little boy" in the boisterous man that was

TR had died with his slain son. Haunted by Quentin's death, Theodore Roosevelt's ambition burned as brightly as ever and when he died in January of 1919, he was planning to run for president again and would have been the likely Republican nominee and winner of the 1920 presidential election. Death came for Theodore Roosevelt while he was sleeping and as one friend said, death had to sneak up on the former president unawares, otherwise there would have been a fight.

Woodrow Wilson managed to avoid the increasing pressure for America to participate in the World War until even he decided war was inevitable. With the British, French, Russians and Italians fighting the German and Austro-Hungarian Empires, the fighting had reached a virtual stalemate. The arrival of American troops tipped the balance to the side of the Allies and assured the defeat of the Central Powers. The German Emperor, Kaiser Wilhelm II, was forced from his throne, as was the Austrian Emperor. With the conclusion of the World War, the very face of Europe changed. The dismantling of Empires created autonomy for new nations and self rule. Dynasties which had ruled countries for centuries evaporated over night.

Tsar Nicholas II was forced to abdicate his own throne and sent into exile in Siberia. Yet a worse fate awaited the last of the Romanov emperors; he and his family were taken to a basement room of the house where they were held and executed by the Bolsheviks who had seized power in Russia. A firing squad mowed down the Tsar and his family; some, including the Tsar's daughters survived the first volley. As the acrid smoke began to clear, the Bolsheviks savagely bayoneted the Grand Duchesses to death. The chief executioner noticed the thirteen-year old son and heir of the Tsar weakly moving on the blood soaked floor. He bent over and fired two shots into the Tsarevich's head, behind the ear. The birth of a new Europe was born out of blood.

Woodrow Wilson arrived in Europe to help settle the peace and write a document that would ensure that same peace for future generations. Wilson visited England, Italy and France and his welcome could hardly be imagined today. Wilson was greeted not by thousands or even hundreds of thousands, but millions who screamed his name rapturously. Likely no American president has ever received such an outpouring of adulation before or since. Even school children were enthralled by President Wilson. One little girl noted Wilson had no beard, leaving more room on his face for kisses. Another little boy sighed he wished President Wilson would live forever.

Wilson finally settled in Paris to take his place amongst the statesmen of Europe. Unlike most of his contemporaries who were prime ministers, Woodrow Wilson was actually a head of state. Wilson began the difficult negotiations, struggling to traverse the complicated labyrinth of European politics. Wilson soon grew exasperated with the demands of his allies, whom he felt were petty, greedy, irrational, and vengeful. Wilson, working endlessly, soon began to feel ill. Accompanied by his personal physician, Admiral Cary Grayson, and his wife, Edith, Wilson became increasingly gaunt and his coloring had become a dull gray. Wilson's digestion became impaired and he began suffering violent diarrhea. The president also contracted a serious case of what was thought to be influenza, which confined him to his bed. Considering the changes in the president's mood and behavior, there is significant reason to believe he had suffered a thrombosis of the brain.

Even through his illness, Wilson had insisted upon working, but the president finally became so sick Dr. Grayson insisted he cease working.

During Woodrow Wilson's stay in Paris, there were signs of the final illness that would virtually incapacitate him later. It began with an involuntary twitch in one eye and soon one entire side of the president's face would twitch. Wilson's demeanor also changed and he became highly irritable and oftentimes irrational. His disgust with his allies made him short tempered and when he felt his colleagues were not negotiating in good faith, he threatened to leave the conference and return home to America. Wilson's constant threats caused the French prime minister, Georges Clemenceau, to grumble that Wilson was rather like the cook who kept her bags perpetually packed.

President Wilson's behavior finally became just downright bizarre. He had been quite suspicious of the household staff serving him and he told his associates they were all spies, reporting every word he said to the French government. Wilson then decided the furniture in his rooms was badly arranged and the president enlisted the help of Dr. Grayson in rearranging the furniture over and over again.

Wilson never carried out his threat to desert the peace conference and finally helped to hammer out the Versailles Treaty and endorse Wilson's dream of the League of Nations. Ironically, it would be the harsh terms of the Versailles Treaty that would help to bring Adolf Hitler to power in Germany and set off the spark that became World War Two, making a mockery of the League of Nations, which Wilson passionately believed would end war for all time.

President Wilson's popularity at home was sagging. He had actually issued a call for the American people to elect a Democratic Congress in 1918 and was stunned and disappointed when the elections resulted in Republican majorities. The man hailed as a savior in Europe was beginning to be viewed with suspicion in his own country.

It was Woodrow Wilson who changed the tradition first set by Thomas Jefferson of sending his State of the Union message to the Congress, which was read by a clerk. Wilson came to Capitol Hill to deliver his address in person. For all the acclaim he won in Europe, Woodrow Wilson came home to less than a tumultuous welcome.

Maryville Knocks Off West 31-16

By Alex Norman

One of these years the Maryville Rebels will struggle in District play.

Just don't count on this being that year.

On Thursday, September 4th, Maryville beat West 31-16 in Knoxville. It was their 93rd straight victory in District play. Maryville hasn't lost a District game since the 2000 season.

The game started in typical fashion for Maryville (3-0, 1-0 District 4-AAA), with a six play, 70 yard drive that ended with a 10 yard touchdown run from Jaylen Burgess. The key play to the drive was a 49 yard pass from Tyler Vaught to Brian Tillery, which got the football to the West 10.

Lightning in the area delayed than game for about 45 minutes, and when play resumed both defenses dominated the action, with few first downs available to either team over the next few drives.

Early in the second quarter Maryville's Kyle Withrow recovered a Christian Romines fumble, giving Maryville the football at the West 35.

Burgess converted on 4th and 1, to the West 24, and on third down from the 3, Vaught ran the play action to perfection, throwing to a wide open Tillery for the score, giving Maryville a 14-0 advantage with 6:01 remaining in the second quarter.

Even with that early adversity, West was not discouraged. On the next drive, quarterback Seth Marshall came up huge. Breaking five tackles and running 62 yards down the sideline for the score with 4:59 to go in the half.

The West defense forced Maryville in a three and out on the next possession. West got a 26 yard field goal from Joe Hanna on the final play of the second quarter, and West had the momentum heading to the locker room, only trailing 14-10.

On the opening kickoff of the second half, more great news for West. Nathan Cottrell caught the ball at his own 6 yard line, broke a couple of tackles, and ran 94 yards up the middle for the touchdown. The ensuing extra point was blocked, but suddenly West had a 16-14 lead.

Maryville however, did not panic. A six play, 68 yard drive, which only took 1:20 off the clock, was capped by a 1 yard touchdown run from Burgess, who would also finish the night with 152 rushing yards. Just like that, Maryville was back in front 21-16.

The Maryville defense prevented West (1-1, 0-1 in District 4-AAA) from getting a first down on their next possession.

When Maryville got the football back, they once again wasted little time putting points on the board. Vaught ran 77 yards to the West 11, and Dylan Shinsky ran it in from 5 yards out. With 8:10 to go in the third quarter, Maryville was on top 27-16.

Not content with that lead, Maryville coach George Quarles called for a surprise onside kick. Luke Orren kicked it forward, and fell on the football just past the necessary ten yards. A 34 yard field goal from Orren made it 31-16 with 5:49 to go in the third.

In the fourth quarter West had their best chance to get back in the game, but that opportunity was dashed when Cottrell fumbled at the Maryville 15. The football was recovered by Josh Yoakum. Maryville held the football for the final 5:23, and left Knox County with the 31-16 victory.

Maryville entered this game ranked #1 in the state in Class 6A. West entered the game ranked #1 in the state in Class 5A. It wouldn't be a surprise if both teams make serious runs at state championships again this year. Maryville is the defending 6A champion while West finished as the 5A runners-up a year ago.

Big fourth quarter lifts Farragut to victory

By Ken Lay

Farragut High school's football team scored 21 unanswered fourth-quarter points en route to its first victory of the 2014 season.

The Admirals got into the win column with a 49-17 victory over Lenoir City Friday night at Bill Clabo Field.

Farragut, which was shut out 13-0 at Oak Ridge in its last outing, made sure that it didn't have a repeat performance against the Panthers in the District 4-AAA opener for both schools. The Admirals (1-2 overall, 1-0 in the district) took an early 7-0 lead when junior quarterback Jacob Naumoff (who missed the Oak Ridge game with a foot injury) connected with Derek Williams on a 19-yard scoring strike with 11 minutes, 47 seconds remaining in the first quarter. The game's first touchdown was set up when Farragut's Ben Dunn recovered a Lenoir City fumble on the first play from scrimmage.

The Panthers (0-2, 0-1) would answer with a long drive. Lenoir City tied the game a short time later on a 3-yard touchdown plunge by Matt Scott.

LCHS then took a 10-7 lead late in the frame when Sergio Cornejo kicked a 30-yard field goal. The go-ahead score came after the Admirals fumbled.

Farragut coach Eddie Courtney was pleased with the win but said that it didn't score many style points.

"In the first half, we let them control things but in the third quarter our kids came out with a whole different attitude," Courtney said. "We made too many mistakes."

The Admirals pitched a shutout in the second quarter. Farragut had a pair of touchdowns in the frame.

Senior running back Jeremiah Partin scored a pair of touchdowns in a span of less than four minutes. The first came on a 2-yard run with 8:48 left that put the home team ahead for good.

Partin's second TD was a 9-yard scamper with 4:54

First two battles between Sooners and Volunteers were classics

Although it's been nearly a half of a century since the two have collided, Oklahoma and Tennessee do share a brief but exciting history in football. The Sooners and Volunteers will pick up where they left off this Saturday night in Norman.

By Steve Williams

The Vols outscored their opponents 293-16 that season. Bob Suftridge, a quick All-American guard out of Knoxville Central High School, anchored

With only a couple of minutes remaining in the game, Oklahoma gambled and tried to run out the clock, giving the ball to All-American Steve Owens on 4th-and-1 at its 43-yard line, but blitzing Vol linebackers Steve Kiner and Jack "Hacksaw" Reynolds stopped Owens short of the first down.

Karl Kremser, who I believe was Tennessee's first-ever soccer-style placekicker, lined up a potential game-winning 43-yard field goal with seven seconds to go, but his kick spun wide right and Oklahoma escaped with a 26-24 win.

"That was one of those games where I felt like I'm not sure the best team won," Dickey would say years later as UT's athletic director in the feature on the Vols' first 100 years of football. "We had a chance to win it. We were about five yards short of where we needed to be to kick that field goal."

Despite the bowl loss, the Vols, who also were led by quarterback Dewey Warren, center Bob Johnson, wingback Richmond Flowers and defensive back Albert Dorsey, were SEC champions and also were crowned their great defense. Halfback George Cafego and end Bowden Wyatt, who would later succeed Neyland as head coach in 1955, also were All-Americans on the '38 team.

Thirty years later, on Jan. 1, 1968, Tennessee and Oklahoma squared off again in the Orange Bowl in Miami. NBC televised the New Year's night battle and I still remember watching it as a teenager.

The Vols, then coached by Doug Dickey, entered the game 9-1 and ranked No. 2 in the nation by The Associated Press, while the Sooners were ranked No. 3. The only blemish on Tennessee's record was a season-opening 20-16 loss to UCLA in Los Angeles.

The Sooners jumped out to a 19-0 lead by halftime, but an interception return for a touchdown by Jimmy Glover sparked a rally and the Vols had a chance to win at the end.

into gear it dominated.

The Lady Admirals (22-1) were locked into a tight battle and were leading 8-6 when they took control. Farragut went ahead 9-6 on a side-out before Madi Howell served up four consecutive points to make the score 13-6.

The Lady Bulldogs pulled to within 13-8 before Farragut went on another big run. The Lady Admirals were sparked by the service game of Shelby Grace Rawls during the surge that all but put the first set out of reach.

From there, Farragut used a balanced hitting attack and a nearly flawless service game to pound the Lady Bulldogs into submission in a match that featured the last two district tournament champions.

Sophomore Anne Abernathy had 14 blocks while Raegan Grooms and Alexis Parker finished with 11 kills each. Emma Milstead added nine kills.

"We passed the ball well tonight and Anne had 14 blocks by herself," Davidson said. "I can't say enough about Emma and Raegan and our back row played well."

While Bearden's seemingly lackluster effort helped Farragut's cause, Davidson noted that she expected the Lady Bulldogs would bounce back quickly.

"[Bearden coach] Dave [McGinnis] does a great job," Davidson said. "Bearden is a very good team and they're young, I think, and national champions by Litkenhous.

Oklahoma will be a heavy favorite when the nationally ranked Sooners and young Vols renew the rivalry this weekend. It's wishful thinking, but maybe "the best team" won't win this time, either.

TOUGH LOSS: Football can be very rewarding. It also can be cruel. Jacob Gilliam knows that as well as anyone.

After working his way up from walk-on to starting left tackle in Tennessee's offensive line, Gilliam, a fifth-year senior out of Farragut High, got to enjoy the view from the top only briefly as he was sidelined with a knee injury in the Vols' opener against Utah State.

The day after UT's 38-7 victory, Coach Butch Jones announced Gilliam would be lost for the remainder of the season. That was crushing news.

Let's hope Jacob can take solace in the old saying that the journey is just as important as the destination. His journey can and should still be an inspiration to others, including Team 118.

they'll only get better.

"Maybe, they didn't have their best night." For his part, McGinnis was too distraught to comment on the match that lasted a little more than an hour.

The Lady Admirals cruised to easy wins in the final two sets and Davidson said her squad took care of business by doing the little things right.

"For us, it's about doing the little things," Davidson said. "If you do the little things, the big things will take care of themselves."

"I'm going to use a play on words. [University of Tennessee football coach] Butch Jones says brick by brick. For us, it's point by point."

Clinton sweeps Lady Bobcats in district opener

By Ken Lay

Central High School volleyball coach Heather Lovett has seen her team play four games. And she's already witnessed a troubling trend.

"We give up too easily," Lovett said after the Lady Bobcats dropped their District 3-AAA opener to Clinton in straight sets at home Tuesday night, 25-22, 25-15, 25-11. "We don't realize how good we are just yet and when we get down, we give up."

"I tell them to go out and give 110 percent and when they lose the first game, we don't know that we still have a chance to win."

Central (0-4 overall, 0-1 in the district) started fast and opened a 15-11 lead in the opening set only to see the Lady Dragons (4-10, 1-0) storm back and pull ahead 17-16. After that, Clinton never trailed again in the opening game. It was tied at 16 and 17 before the Lady Dragons, who have been ravaged by illness early this season, took the first set.

Clinton went ahead 19-18 on a side-out before it went up 20-18 on a service point by senior C.J. Duncan. Central pulled to within 23-22 before Clinton scored the final two points of the set.

Susan Zellner, the Lady Dragons' longtime head coach, said she was pleased with the way her squad responded to its early deficit.

"I was really surprised that we came back," she said. "This being our first district game, I think we played pretty well."

"We've been sick. We've had a stomach bug but tonight, we had everybody back and it was good to see all those players back."

Clinton fell behind 2-1 in the second set before it got a spark from Samantha Templin, another senior. The Lady Dragons knotted the game at 2 before Templin's service run that included an ace put the Lady Dragons up 6-2.

The Lady Bobcats then scored on a side-out to pull to within 6-3 before Megan Whaley served up two straight points to make the score 6-5.

The Lady Dragons then scored five of the next six points to open an 11-6 lead. The Lady Bobcats responded and actually took a 13-12 lead before Clinton scored 14 of the next 18 points to claim the game.

After that, the Lady Dragons dominated the third game. They opened a 5-0 lead in the third game thanks to a service run by Madison Cumbie.

"We felt defeated before we even started the third game," Lovett said.

Clinton took a 22-7 before the Lady Bobcats' Raylene Stone made things a bit more interesting with a late three-point run after a side-out made the score 22-8.

Cumbie scored 16 points (including five aces). She also had three kills, a dig and 16 assists. Bailey Martin scored 13 points and had three aces, five kills and a dig for the Lady Dragons.

Stone had five kills, two aces and 13 digs for the Lady Bobcats. Stone had five points, six blocks and 11 digs. She also scored five points and added both a kill and an assist for Central.

left in the second stanza and gave the Admirals the 21-10 lead they enjoyed at halftime.

FHS had a chance to extend its lead late in the half but a 73-yard touchdown by Tanner Thomas was negated by a holding penalty. On the next play, Thomas was whistled for a chop block that pushed Farragut further back.

The Admirals fumbled on the opening drive of the third quarter. But they rebounded to take a 28-10 lead on their next possession when Thomas scored from 19 yards out after Farragut's Evan Prislowsky intercepted a pass from Rashawn Tallent.

Farragut's defense forced the Panthers into five turnovers on the night. The Admirals scored 14 points off of Lenoir City's miscues.

The Panthers scored their final points of the game when Tallent threw a 9-yard scoring pass to Skyler McGinnis in the last minute of the third stanza.

Farragut went on to dominate the fourth quarter as it got touchdown runs from Tanner Thomas, Curtis Thomas and Amon Johnson. Curtis Thomas scored his touchdown after Tanner Mengel blocked an LCHS punt.

The Admirals overcame four turnovers of their own to win the game.

Farragut sweeps Bearden in volleyball

By Ken Lay

Entering Wednesday night's District 4-AAA opener, Farragut High's School's volleyball team did not want a five-set marathon against rival Bearden. But Lady Admirals coach Susan Davidson knew that was a possibility.

"We didn't want to go five," Davidson said. "But we were going to do what we had to do."

As it turned out, the Lady Admirals made quick work of the Lady Bulldogs in a 25-16, 25-9, 25-14 victory over the Lady Bulldogs at a very hot Lynn E. Sexton Gymnasium.

The match was competitive early but once Farragut, which downed Webb in a five-set thriller 24 hours earlier, clicked

Central to honor longtime Hall of Fame coach

By Ken Lay

Central High School will honor a Knox County coaching legend during its football team's home opener Friday night. Longtime coach Joel Helton will be honored when the Bobcats host Karns in a District 3-AAA show down at Dan Y. Boring Stadium according to athletic director J.D. Lambert.

Helton was Central's head coach from 1984-2010.

"When you think of Central football, you think of the Helton family and Joel he's the leader of that family," Lambert said. "Every part of the program has his stamp on it."

The evening begins with a reception at the field house and Helton, who was recently inducted into the Greater Knoxville Area Sports Hall of Fame, will be honored at halftime.

During his tenure at Central, Joel coached his son Zach and his nephews Todd and Rodney. His daughter Allison was a cheerleader at the school and the 2002 homecoming queen.

Zach was the starting quarterback for the Bobcats from 2002-2005. Todd Helton, who recently concluded a stellar baseball career with the Colorado Rockies, also played quarterback at Central before playing football and baseball at the University of Tennessee. Rodney, Todd's older brother, played football at the University of Alabama.

Joel Helton cast a deep shadow on the Central High football team. He also coached soccer and baseball at the school. He was also key to the building of the school's football field house.

"Central was one of the first places to have a field house and he was largely responsible for that," Lambert said. "He did a lot of work on it himself."

"He also did a lot of work on the [football] field's irrigation system."

The football field is named in his honor.

Catholic Lights up CAK 70-23

By David Klein

A blitzkrieg happened at Christian Academy of Knoxville on Friday night. Only this time, it wasn't the Warriors doing the blitzing on their home field, but the Catholic Fighting Irish. The Irish overcame a 17-7 early first quarter deficit, forced five turnovers, and held CAK scoreless in the second half, winning 70-23. Catholic would outscore CAK 63-6 from the middle of the second quarter till the end of the game and score 42 straight points.

Things did not get off to a smooth start for the Irish. Quarterback Zac Jancek threw an interception to the Warriors' Blake Shuler early in the first quarter. CAK converted the turnover into a touchdown when quarterback Cole Smith found Austin Pope, who made a one-handed catch in the right corner of the end zone for a 10-0 lead.

"Coach called a fade. I acted like I was running a slant, I just went up and got it," Pope said.

Catholic responded to the CAK touchdown. Despite fumbling a snap and losing 20 yards, the Irish converted a 4th-and-3. Three plays later, Logan Lacey scored the first Irish touchdown of the night, a 12-yard catch from Jancek, and the Irish cut the Warrior lead to 10-7.

The Warriors took back the momentum three plays later when running back Michael Thompson took a screen pass 74 yards for a touchdown, increasing CAK's lead to 17-7 at the end of the first quarter.

Catholic responded and again scored quickly, with Jancek running 39 yards for a turnovers began on CAK's ensuing possession. Thompson fumbled the ball, and the Irish recovered it. One play later, sophomore Amari Rodgers blazed past defenders for a 72-yard touchdown run, his first of three touchdowns on the night.

"They made that big hole. It was wide open," Rodgers said of his touchdown. "We just told each other not to quit," Rodgers said after Catholic was down 10 points.

"Amari is an outstanding player," Catholic Head Coach Steve Matthews said. "People forget he's 14 years old."

CAK briefly halted the Irish juggernaut with a 5-yard touchdown pass by Smith to Pope, but they missed the extra point and trailed 28-23.

Catholic shook off a block in the back that forced them into a 2nd and 18. Rodgers dazzled again, burning defenders for a 38-yard touchdown run and a 35-23 Irish lead.

The Warriors tried to get a score before halftime, but Augustus Fortune intercepted a Smith pass. Jancek would run for a 6-yard touchdown with 23 seconds left to make the score 42-23 Catholic. It was his second rushing touchdown to go with his two passing touchdowns in the first half.

"I had never rushed for that many touchdowns in my whole life," Jancek said.

The second half was all Catholic. Rodgers picked off Smith on CAK's first possession of the second half and returned the interception for a touchdown, his third of the game. CAK fumbled the ensuing kickoff, recording its fourth turnover. Jancek scampered for an 18-yard touchdown run, his third of the game, and Catholic had scored 14 straight points in a matter of minutes to break the game open and lead 56-23.

From there, CAK would have two straight three-and-outs on offense while Catholic's Logan Lacey ran for a touchdown, and Matt Carson also ran for a touchdown after the Warriors' fifth turnover. Carson's touchdown with 2:44 left in the game made the final score 70-23 Catholic.

"This is what we're capable of," Matthews said. "It's just putting drives together and not shooting ourselves in the foot."

Catholic improved to 3-0, 1-0 in District 4AA. CAK fell to 2-1, 0-1 in District 4AA. CAK plays at Webb Friday night while Catholic has a bye week.

Fulton sputters past rival Roadrunners, 56-6

By Steve Williams

Fulton High School's end zone-loving offense got outscored Friday night, but not by Austin-East.

Fulton's defense and special teams did it in a 56-6 win over the rival Roadrunners at Bob Black Field.

The below-par night for Fulton's offense dropped the team's scoring average for the season to 74.3 points per game.

Rob Black, Fulton head coach, wasn't surprised by the off night. The long-time rivalry between the two schools can cause distractions and keep the engine from humming.

"Emotions were running high," said Black. "I expected a drop off."

"But I'm proud of our guys and happy with the win. I'm ready to get back to work in practice. We're going to battle a good, strong Farragut team this week."

Fulton, which scored an astonishing 167 points in its first two games, is now 3-0 and gets its first road assignment this week. Farragut is expected to be one of the toughest tests for the Falcons in the regular season.

Austin-East (0-3) will be looking for its first win against visiting Sweetwater.

The Roadrunners stopped Fulton in the red zone twice in the early going, forcing the Falcons to settle for a pair of field goals by senior kicker Damon Lawson.

A-E also scored its first touchdown of the year, a 3-yard run by Diamond Cowan in the second quarter. The score was set up by Darius Harper's 71-yard slant pass to Victor Blair when Fulton had eight in the box.

A 62-yard bomb - Adam Diggs to Domonique Williams - quickly restored order, putting the Falcons up 28-6. Zach Winston's 3-yard TD run made it 35-6 at intermission.

"Austin-East came in here and got after us pretty good," said Black.

De'ontay Tate's 31-yard fumble return in the third quarter extended Fulton's lead to 42-6 and triggered the running clock.

Gage Seymour put the third defensive touchdown on the scoreboard in the final quarter with his 37-yard interception return. Kentel Williams' 35-yard punt return capped the scoring.

Fulton's first defensive score came on Jadarius Satterfield's 15-yard six pick in the second quarter. Satterfield had two interceptions in the game.

Diggs' 46-yard TD pass to Kentel Williams started the scoring for Fulton.

The Falcons' defense held A-E to 121 total yards, with a good chunk of it (71 yards) coming on the slant pass. The Fulton defenders also had 14 tackles for 69 yards in lost yardage. Junior linebacker Hayden Willard led Fulton with eight stops.

Beating West 'wasn't easy' says Maryville coach of the ball and returned one for a touchdown in the Cherokees' 41-14 win over Jefferson County last week.

SOLID DEFENSE: Barry Swafford's TSD Vikings were scheduled to play at Illinois Saturday, with hopes of posting their third straight win of the season. "We started off pretty good in our first two games," said Coach Swafford. "We still need to teach our 'complicated' offense to those two inexperienced freshmen players, but our defense looks so 'solid' with seasoned players. I believe we will improve immensely with more games being played later in this season."

COMING UP: South-Doyle goes to Hardin Valley Academy in a matchup of 2-0 teams this Friday night. Other top attractions involving local teams this week include Fulton at Farragut, CAK at Webb and Clinton at Gibbs.

By Steve Williams

George Quarles said Maryville High had to earn its latest football win.

"It wasn't easy for sure," said the highly successful Maryville coach after his team roared from behind in the second half for a 31-16 win over Knoxville West in a televised showdown at Bill Wilson Field Thursday night.

"Sometimes you're not going to win by three or four touchdowns."

The defending Class 6A state champions had "comfortable" leads at the end of their first two games of the season against Webb School and Alcoa.

"It wasn't that way tonight," said Quarles. "West is a hold-your-breath kind of team. They've got No. 5 (Nathan Cottrell) and No. 7 (Seth Marshall) who can take it the distance anytime. Those guys are scary."

West, Class 5A state runner-up last season, took a 16-14 lead when Cottrell returned the second half kickoff for a touchdown. Maryville responded by scoring 17 unanswered points.

"I thought our kids handled adversity extremely well and I did think we earned this one tonight," said Quarles.

The victory was Maryville's 81st in a row over Knox County teams, dating back to the 2000 season.

"That was the big hype going into the game this week," said Cottrell, the speedy West running back who has committed to Georgia Tech. "Maryville's a great team. You've got to give it to them. They do what they do."

"We tried to compete with them. We stayed with them for a little bit. Then we feel off a little bit and made too many mistakes."

Scott Cummings, West coach, added: "You can't make mistakes when you play those guys, not even one or two, and we made too many."

A fumble at the West 34-yard line in the second quarter gave Maryville a "short field" and led to its second touchdown, pointed out the West coach.

"It's a typical Maryville football team and their defensive box this year is the best they've had," added Cummings. "They're unreal."

West, now 1-1, will try to bounce back this week at Asheville, N.C.

BUSY BRODY: Not only did Brody Rollins direct South-Doyle's offense from his quarterback position, but he also had three interceptions on the defensive side

The Doctor is in a weekly column by

Dr. Jim Ferguson

The Search

I am not musically gifted, though I fancy that I sing “well” in the shower. I hum along or sing by ear, not by training. It’s fortunate that I sit next to my wife in church because she reads music and this allows me to follow her lead. I know I don’t do service to the beautiful Methodist hymns that I love, but they nonetheless move my spirit. To musical people the notes in the hymnal give detailed instructions regarding how the hymn should be sung. However, these cryptic musical notes are Greek to me.

I’ve come to understand that reading and playing music involves a significant component of mathematics which is especially true of composing. Music majors must be well versed in the mathematics of meter and must learn a new language of musical notes. However, experiencing and enjoying music – as well as singing in the shower – is less of science and more of soul.

Becky has tried to explain quarter notes and measures to me many times, and though I get an inkling of the perspective, it quickly fades, I guess it just doesn’t register deeply enough to stick. Becky has the same problem with historical perspectives that I have with musical notes and chords. I do know when something sounds good, perhaps because it resonates at that deeper and more primal level in my soul. The legendary Count Basie recognized this. He observed, “If it sounds good, it is.” And I say don’t let anyone tell you differently!

My grandson Oakley

is now talking a mile a minute, and is transitioning from a toddler to a little boy. His arms now swing when he walks and his body turns ever so slightly with each step mimicking the fluid gait of an adult. The stiffness of a toddler’s stride is giving way to that of a little boy. He is also learning to sing and he likes the Alphabet song. The musicality is not there yet, but as I listen I sense that it’s coming. Oakley actually taught me something last week. He was singing the Twinkle Twinkle Little Star song and, it dawned on me that it’s the same melody as the Alphabet song. How did I miss that in my education?

I believe Becky knows at least a thousand nursery songs. As she sings them to Oakley, I remember the tunes and rhymes she used to sing to our girls when they were children. The process of Oakley learning to sing fascinates me. We don’t come into this world singing. Apparently, it is learned and the nurture side of life’s equation must be operative. However, there must also be a genetic or nature component to singing because there are prodigies like Mozart and others like me who are less musically gifted.

Language has a rhythm just like music. If you doubt me, consider the rhythmic (musical) cadence of Italian. Our Burundi friends speak Kirundi and the cadence of their native tongue is readily apparent when they speak to us in English. I guess our Southern sounds odd to them as well. And I love to hear an Irishman, like the golf announcer David Feherty, speak. In his lyrical language each sentence ends on a high note rather than a downward inflection as we Englishmen do.

I love to watch base players in a band. They seem to be in a world of their own as they play the base line above which the melody floats. Drums are much the same and impart a visceral feeling in us. Perhaps we were wired to the rhythmic beating of drums. Our developing nervous system and ears must have registered and imprinted our mother’s heart beat as the baseline upon which the melody of our life would be played.

Fanny Crosby was the author of 8000 songs and hymns. This remarkable 19th century woman has touched uncountable lives with her musical gift. What is even more remarkable is that Ms. Crosby wrote all her poems and hymns despite being blind from infancy. Two of my favorite Crosby hymns are To God Be the Glory and Blessed Assurance. If you’re not familiar with these great hymns you should Google them and listen to words astride the beautiful melodies. Or I guess you could ride with me in my truck while I sing them for you. Be assured, this venue would be safer than my shower!

Hymns and music are important in the Methodist Church. Many of these melodious songs originated in camp meetings of spiritual revival so important in England and in 18th century America. John Wesley was an Anglican minister and Oxford scholar. He is credited as being the father of Methodism, the protestant denomination where Hillary Clinton, George W. Bush and Jim Ferguson worship. Wesley’s theology embraced both heart and mind; balancing these perspectives resonates with me. The doctrines of love and praise are preached throughout the Methodist hymnal in words and chords. The songs are reverential and worthy as worshipful aids.

The great 5th century church father St.

Augustine once wrote that “Our souls remain restless until they rest in thee, Oh Lord.” His point is that each of us has a basic need for The Spirit that can’t be replaced by the State or the idols of money, power, and prestige. There are lots of ways to experience God. I find that music aids me to “get in the zone to go to the throne!” This is my only rap!

Others may experience God through service, through contemplation, or reading the Bible or praying. My recommendation for physical and mental health is that you seek Him/Her/Spirit – God is after all not limited by the human notions of gender.

Some years ago as I stood with my brother on the deck of a ship watching Alaskan glaciers calve, a poem by Emily Dickinson came to mind. It is called “Some Keep the Sabbath;” you should read it. Though I stumbled through the words, we agreed that nature is a good place to begin seeking the Creator. And the most important journey of your life begins with a single step.

Hope for the church

The words given to two of the seven churches in Revelation are only words of encouragement and blessing. The churches are in the cities of Smyrna and Philadelphia. Smyrna boasted a large amphitheater that could hold twenty thousand people. The theater was dedicated to the Roman Emperor. John, the writer of Revelation, knew personally one of the elders and teachers at

By Mark Brackney,
Minister of the Arlington Church of Christ

that church, Polycarp, whom he mentored.

The churches of Smyrna and Philadelphia are going through terrible persecution and Jesus wants to remind them not to give up, but to hold firm to their faith. These two churches are very different from Ephesus and Laodicea who were known as churches of compromise, which just went along with whatever was popular. But now Jesus' tone is much softer because He is writing to churches that are faithfully following Him.

A phrase that you will find with all seven churches mentioned is "I know." We sometimes wonder if God really knows what is going on in our lives. He does. When we are hurting and need comfort, like the churches of Smyrna and Philadelphia, we are glad Jesus knows what is going on with us. But if we are like the churches at Ephesus and Laodicea, we would rather Jesus not know what is going on. "I know" can be good words or bad words.

Jesus says, "I know your afflictions and your poverty" (Rev. 2:9). The word "afflictions" comes from the Greek word "to crush." It means to squeeze with great pressure. This was the word used to describe what happened at the winepress to the fruit. Jesus says that this is what this church was feeling - pressed and crushed on every side.

In America, our trials pale compared to our brothers and sisters in Christ in other parts of the world. On this day, there are Christians who are meeting secretly because it is illegal to worship. There are thousands in North Korea who are in concentration camps where they will die. Christians in the Middle East and Africa are being murdered and their property burned or confiscated on a daily basis. These Christians might be wondering, "Does God know what is going on?" Jesus says, "I know." At Philadelphia, Jesus says, "I know that you have little strength, yet you have kept my word and have not denied my name" (Rev. 3:8). Jesus knows and He cares what we are going through.

Jesus said, "Be faithful, even to the point of death, and I will give you a crown of life" (Rev. 2:10). Polycarp, the great church leader at Smyrna, would hold on to these words. Later in life he will be burned to death in that great amphitheater because of his hope. When told to say "Caesar is Lord or die," Polycarp said, "He has been my God for eighty-six years and He has never betrayed me. How can I now betray my Lord and Savior?" Let us, like Polycarp, hold on to our hope.

Leaves of Grass

Rosie's World

I hear the men outside mowing my lawn. They come here three times a month, one with the mower, and one with a weed-whacker. As I watched the blades of grass tumble to the ground as on a swift journey, I recalled a book I have called, "Selections from Leaves of Grass" by Walt Whitman. Immediately the wheels started churning in my mind.

Walt was born on May 31, 1819 in West Hills, N.Y. into a family of modest means, the second of eight children. His father yanked him out of school at the age eleven to go to work. He found employment in the printing business. In 1855 he finally found the voice and style he was searching for and self-published a slim book of twelve poems. He grew up in a period of vast and rapid expansion in the United States. It was the era of the California gold rush, the Mexican war, the struggles for abolition and women's suffrage, the growth of factories and labor unions. All these subjects were reflected in his poetry.

As soon as I read his poem, "O Captain! My Captain!" an image came to mind. I could see Ethan Hawke standing on his desk protesting the unfair termination of his teacher in one of my favorite movies, "Dead Poet's Society". The movie where Robin Williams played a wayward teacher to the dismay of the stuffy old mentors who believed in doing everything "by the book". Eventually the whole class stood on their desks to salute the teacher who taught them to think for themselves, to stand up for what they believed.

"Oh, Captain! My Captain! Our fearful trip is done,

The ship has weathered every rack, the prize we sought is won.

The port is near, the bells I hear, the people all exulting,

While follow eyes the steady keel, the vessel grim and daring;

But O heart! heart! heart!

O the bleeding drops of red,

Where on the deck my captain lies

Fallen cold and dead."

This is the first verse of that melancholy poem. I also want to add the movie was one of Robin Williams' greatest portrayals of awesome acting. It will forever be a classic.

Walt suffered a stroke which left him partially paralyzed in 1873 but he continued to work on his Leaves of Grass until his death in 1892 and his work will be remembered forever.

Thought for the day: I have learned that to be with those I like is enough.

Walt Whitman

Tennessee Ernie Ford's Bristol Home

Aside from Dolly Parton, there may be no better known Tennessean than a Bristol native. Even people who are not country music fans know of "Tennessee Ernie Ford."

If you're up that way you should take a side trip into Bristol and visit one of our unique two-state cities. Both Virginia with several ideas about restoring the home and related displays.

The highly popular Bristol native wrestled with alcoholism for many, many years. Shortly after leaving a White House state dinner in 1991, he suffered severe liver failure and died. Ford is buried in Palo Alto, California.

Bristol promotes its self as the "Birthplace of Country Music" for the number of early recordings made there by country legends like the Carter Family and Jimmy Rogers. Attractions include The Country Music Hall of Fame, Bristol Caverns, the Bristol Motor Speedway, and a revitalized downtown.

Of course, you should also visit the Ernie Ford House there. The Bristol Historical Association restored the home completely. You can visit the home by contacting the association at (423)844-0627. The Bristol Chamber of Commerce can be reached at (423)989-4850.

The character became popular there and he moved to do a similar show in Pasadena and began doing country music tours. Under the employ of Capitol Records, he also appeared on local television shows and created the Tennessee Ernie Show for national radio syndication.

Ford had tremendous success in the 50s with over 50 country music hits. He soon hosted national shows and appeared in several episodes of the "I Love Lucy" show. In 1955 he recorded "Davy Crockett, King of the Wild Frontier" and also released "Sixteen Tons" that year which became a hit on both country and pop stations.

Ford was also a lover of Gospel and released several albums in the genre. From 1962 until 1965, he hosted a daytime national television show called "The Tennessee Ernie Ford Show." He received the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1984 and was inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1990.

That same year, 1990, the Bristol Historical Association was in need of a meeting place and storage space. They heard that the house was available and bought it from an absentee owner, unaware that Ford had been born there.

When they discovered the Ford connection, they contacted Ford and found him elated to hear of their intentions. He returned to Bristol for the grand opening of the Paramount Center for the Arts, and visited the house. He later called the association

Next weekend would be a great time to go to Bristol as the annual Rhythm & Foorts Reunion will be happening on State Street in the historic downtown area. This Americana music festival is held September 19-20 this year. Visit bristolrhythm.com to view the lineup and additional information.

While in Bristol, stomp your feet on the sidewalk anywhere so you can say you did the "Bristol Stomp." The popular 1950s song and dance wasn't actually created there, although many of us from Tennessee thought it was; "Bristol Stomp" was originally recorded by a group from Bristol, Pennsylvania. Still, if you're old enough, you'll remember it and have probably danced to it.
