Council postpones Gibbs Drive rezoning

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

The most contested of the various agenda items at Tuesday's meeting of the Knoxville City Council has been postponed until September 1. Smith-Lindsey Development, LLC., wants to build an office on the south side of Gibbs Drive and Broadway in Fountain City. To do so requires a change in the North City Sector Plan and a rezoning from R-1,

School Board Defers Non-Renewal Policy, Adopts New Superintendent Evaluation Tool

By Sally Absher sallyabsher@knoxfocus.com

The Knox County Board of Education decided last week to postpone further discussion and action on changes to Board Policy GBG, which would give the board the final say on nonrenewals and allow nontenured teachers to appeal a non-renewal decision and request a hearing with the

Last spring a number of teachers with good evaluation and professionalism scores (and no prior indication that there were any issues with their performance) received nonrenewal notices. and satisfactory evaluations who are non-renewed to appeal to the Superintendent or the Board.

Patti Bounds, concerned by the number of non-renewed and riffed (reduction in staff) teachers who were still looking for positions at the end of July, asked Knox County Law Director to draft revisions to Policy GBG to bring it in line with TCA statute.

The Board discussed the revised policy at Monday's work meeting, and seemed to agree that non-tenured teachers who have their contract non-renewed at the end of a school year should be given a reason why, and that principals need to thoroughly document any issues and discussions with the teacher.

But some board members thought the proposed revisions went too far. Doug Harris said, "It just seems ed several improvements that we'd be devaluing the to Policy GBG, including authority of our school prinadding a requirement to cipals...I just think this is micromanaging to the nth degree and the best way to rectify if we have a problem is to make sure our principals are trained properly

Norwood School gets $5,000 donation

The Graham Corporation's Tim Graham and Jana Neely presented a donation of $5,000 to the Greater Schools Partnership for Norwood Elementary Community School Tuesday. Karen Walker, Greater School's coordinator at Norwood, accepted the check. Walker is replacing Liz Thacker who is moving on to Northwest Middle School, a new Community School. The Graham Corporation operates The Expo Center near the Norwood School. On hand for the presentation were Oliver (Buzz) Thomas, President of Greater Schools Partnership; Mark Benson, Field Coordinator for Greater Schools; Casey Cutter, Assistant Principal; and City Councilwoman Brenda Palmer. The Norwood school will host a "meet and greet" Monday at 8 a.m. and School Board member Terry Hill will be there. Parents of students are invited to attend and learn about the Community School there.

Ninth District Commissioner not running again

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

"I have served 8 years on the Commission as part of 44 years of community service. It's time for me to step back and let someone else go at it," Mike Brown told The Focus recently.

Brown represents the Ninth Commission District, an area that encompasses the area of Knox County that stretches south of the Tennessee and French Broad Rivers down to Blount County. Brown prides himself as the "bulldog" on the commission. A former plan- is choosing not to run. ning commission member, he has also served on the Charter Commission, the Beautification Board, and the Seymour/South Doyle Chamber of Commerce. As the 9th District commissioner he has been a staunch critic of the policies of the Knox County School Board and Superintendent James McIntyre, Jr.

He was appointed to the commission in 2008 and then elected for a full term. His folksy humor and to-thepoint comments will be greatly missed. While he could serve another term, Brown

"I have a lot of things I have neglected that I want to do with my family but have not had the time. I also have a lot of work I need to do on the farm before I lose my health," Brown told The Focus, adding, "I have absolutely enjoyed every part of the service of being a commissioner and met many people who have helped to get good things done for our community and the county as a whole."

"I know I will miss it but it is time. I have had some great fun and good debates on issues and tried to be Brown said. a good watchdog of Knox County taxpayer's money. I just hope that it can be said when I am gone that I did some good along the way," the commissioner said.

Asked by The Focus about who might replace him on the commission, Brown said that Carson Dailey has expressed an interest.

"He has been active and a leader in our homeowners association for many years and has the best interest of our community at heart. He will be another bulldog like me, every group needs one!"

Last month Dailey named Bob Thompson as treasurer for his campaign.

"I love South Knoxville. Being raised in the Bonny Kate community is one of the highlights of my life. Memories of Doyle High and the family atmosphere is something I want to repay to South Knoxville," Dailey told The Focus.

"The biggest problem I see going forward is revenue income. Knox County is 700 million dollars in debt. Knox County schools are $300 million of the $700 million.

Mayor Burchett and Commissioner Brown both understand, as I do, that Knox County must improve its debt ratio so we can afford to have better schools and services," Dailey said.

"Mike is correct in saying I will be a bulldog for South Knox County," he said.

So far no one else has announced intent or named a treasurer for the 9th District seat but potential candidates can pick up nominating petitions beginning September 11 and must qualify by December 10. December 17 is the last day to withdraw.

These myths and lies have their origin in a 1983 report by the Reagan Administration - "A Nation at Risk." This report came at a time when America's education policymakers embraced the idea of tying school reform to "scientifically based research.'

But much of the "research" and reports redefining education today are little more than junk science. Education initiatives such as Valueadded measurement (VAM) including Tennessee Value Added Assessment System (TVAAS), TEAM/TAP evaluation models, and charter school research were presented in white papers with little educator input or peer Private "think tanks" at both the state and national level have significant influence in education policy discussions by producing an array of well-funded and slickly produced "research" and news releases. The myths and lies permeate the media. According to P.L. Thomas of Furman University, we are left with two truisms about education publications and education reform: (1) If "Education" is in the publication title, you better do your homework, comes that seem too good to be true, then they likely aren't true.

At the state level, pseudo news outlets include The Beacon Center, State Policy Network, Professional Educators of TN, StudentsFirst, and the State Collaborative on Reforming Education (SCORE). Is it any wonder that so many people have "bought the lies" about failing schools, failing teachers, and the need to privatize education?

But there are pro-public school allies at both the national and state level. Diane Ravitch is perhaps the best known, having served as Assistant Secretary of Education under Lamar Alexander; she is a historian, author, public education advocate and whistleblower. The author of the 2013 book "Reign of Error: The Hoax of the Privatization Movement and the Danger to America's Public Schools," she is the founder of the Network for Public Education (networkforpubliceducation.org) and blogs at dianeravitch.net. Another whistleblower with ties to the US Department of Education, Charlotte Iserbyt served as Senior Policy Advisor during the first Reagan administration. She wrote the landmark 1999 (2011) book "The Deliberate Dumbing Down of America," and

The Rise of Donald Trump and Bernie Sanders

By Steve Hunley, Publisher publisher@knoxfocus.com

Like it or not, the 2016 presidential contest is underway. The Republicans almost have more candidates than the Duggers have children and have already clashed in the first debate of the political season. Hillary Clinton has been the presumptive nominee for the Democrats for ages, yet her campaign already seems to be faltering and some believe Vice President Joe Biden may take the plunge and challenge her in the primaries.

anything but civil. Republicans seemed to have taken a hard turn to the right while mainstream Demotowards a brand of European socialism. The middle vanished. Some of the candidates have already been receiving intense scrutiny from the news media and former Florida governor Jeb Bush is disdained by some as being part of an American dynasty. Quite frequently, many of those who point to Jeb Bush as being a dynastic candidate fail to note the same thing about Hillary Clinton. Would Hillary Clinton have been elected to the U.S. Senate from New York had she not been married to Bill? Almost certainly not. Would Hillary more polarized than at any- she not been married to time since the Civil War Bill? Almost certainly not. and political discourse in Would Hillary Clinton have our country has become been appointed Secretary of State had she not been married to Bill? Almost certainly not. Political dynasties are hardly confined crats seem to be rushing to one political party. For that matter, both George W. Clinton's favorability ratings have continued to drop and her campaign obviously feels the need to try and humanize her with some warm and fuzzy ads.

The rise of Donald Trump and Bernie Sanders has puzzled more than a few to be unlikely for a presidential nomination, yet according to a new poll conducted by Monmouth University, the Donald has not only widened his lead in the Republican contest, but beats his nearest rival by two-to-one. Trump is obviously resonating with someone, just as Vermont senator Bernie Sanders is resonating with much of the far left of the Democratic party. Sanders is seventy-three and an avowed socialist, yet a campaign appearance in Arizona drew around 11,000 people. As Hillary Clinton's favorability ratings have plummeted, Bernie Sanders has risen in the polls to the point where Joe Biden has reassessed his own political plans. In the last poll I saw, Sanders was only behind Clinton by six percentage points.

The director of the Monmouth University poll, Clinton have been a viable observers and shocked Patrick Murray, issued a

Just before his announcement in June, Donald Trump's favorability rating was a mere 20% compared to 55% who saw him unfavorably.

Trump is a businessman and a showman and I suspect the Donald knows what who are hungering for he is doing. Both Trump and Sanders are channeling frustration and anger and people are responding. There are a lot of people who like the fact Trump says what others would not dare say.

Both Trump and Bernie Sanders have likely hit upon something. With the polarization of America, there are many people who see little difference in inflexibility of Republican reactionaries and the patronizing mentality of the far left.

Clearly, there are those change in America. Evidently, millions of Americans didn't like the change Barack Obama delivered and there are millions more who believe he did not change enough.

Civil Rights Leader Joanne Bland speaks at voting rights celebration

Joanne Bland was just 11 Aug. 6, 1965. years old when she joined the march across the Edmund Pettus Bridge in Selma., Ala., in 1965. She was the youngest marcher on the day that came to be known as "Bloody Sunday," and she witnessed firsthand the beatings and abuse of her fellow marchers, including her older sister.

Bland shared her experiences and civil rights advocacy to Knoxville last Thursday at the Beck Cultural Exchange Center as part of the City of Knoxville's celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Voting Rights Act, signed into law by President Lyndon B. Johnson on

Commission to appoint winner of 14th House Seat

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

The Knox County Commission isn't waiting for the general election to appoint the winner of the 14th State House Seat for a simple reason: there are only two candidates, both Republican, and one of them will win the primary on August 12. The winner cannot take the position until after the General Election. The election commission then certifies the general election results and the candidate becomes the state representative to complete the term of the former.

The only catch is that a write in during the primary could appear on the general election ballot, but that's very unlikely. If not, then only one name, the winning Republican candidate, will appear for the 14th House Seat in the September 29 General

Plans now are for the commission to name the primary winner to the seat to serve until the General Election results are certified in early October. That person will either be Karen Carson or Jason Zachary.

The public hearing on the appointment is set for Monday, August 17 at 6 p.m. or following the 5 p.m. commission work session. The actual appointment would take place during the commission's regular session on Monday, August 24.

As of Thursday fewer than 2,000 people had voted early in the state house race at all of the three poll locations: the City-County Building, Farragut High School and Downtown West. Polls closed for early voting

So, an appointee by the County Commission would serve until the October certification and then the same person would serve until next year's November state-wide general election, assuming they survive another primary.

The special election, which has been estimated to cost more than $175,000, is to replace former 14th District State Representative Ryan Haynes, who resigned to become Chairman of the Tennessee Republican Party.

Health officials speak at East Knoxville Community

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

Two Knox County Health Department officials spoke last Monday at the East Knoxville Community meeting at the Burlington Library and explained many of the programs. Quannah Washington, Outreach Coordinator, and Sarah Bounse, Public Health Educator, talked about the overall programs provided as well as efforts in the Five Points neighborhood.

Washington said the health department helps oversee TennCare for children from birth to age 21.

"There are 43,000 in Knox County on TennCare," Washington said. TennCare Kids provides free medical and dental services and behavioral health services. She said that Knox County children have "sad dental health" and added that children need to start dental care as early as one year

Washington also said that a child's health checkup examination should take longer than 30 minutes and that for the program there are two recognized providers: a physician who takes TennCare and the Health Department's Cherokee Pediatrics. She also spoke of the many immunizations that are required of children for public school and noted that students entering the 7th grade or college also require certain immuniza-

She briefly went over many of the services and focuses of the department: Air quality, HIV, AIDS and STDs, Communicable Diseases, Food Quality, Immunization Programs, Pediatrics, Social Services to Indigent People, Vital Records, WIC nutrition, Emergency Preparedness and the Women's Health Clinic.

She said the Health Department will take part in a Family Safety and Preparedness Fair September 26 at the World's Fair Park. The event, from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m., will also involve the Red Cross, the Knoxville-Knox County Emergency Management, KUB, and the University of Tennessee.

Bounse also spoke of the Health Department's efforts to stop tobacco use, especially among women while pregnant. She advised smokers to get involved with a Tennessee program and call 1-800-QUIT-NOW.

"Don't have a heart attack to make you quit," she warned.

Bounse is working with the Five Points community, which she said has a history of poor health, and the department is "forming relationships" there with organi-

Our Neighborhoods

Lindbergh Forest is coming back!

By Mike Steely stéelym@Knoxfocus.com

It has taken a while for the Lindbergh Forest neighborhood to get organized, but, now under new officers they are ready to kick-start their efforts and revitalize their territory.

"It's been several years," the new President of the Lindbergh Forest Neighborhood Association, Kelley DeLuca, told The Focus. She explained that the new group initially began last January and initially decided to include people living on both sides of Woodlawn Avenue and in the vicinity of Dogwood School.

Other officers include Amanda Morris as Vice President, Heather Ream as Secretary, Stephanie Greene as Treasurer, and Jewell Minnich as Neighborhood Watch Coordinator.

The historic neighborhood includes that portion east of Chapman Highway, enclosed by Moody Avenue, Woodlawn Pike and Chapman and including the streets of Chamberlain, Southwood, Glenhurst, Druid, Tall Oaks, Ellis, Tipton and Tiliwa. It includes a portion within the Historic District, which is on the National Register of Historic the National Register in 1998. Although the neighborhood is just off Chapman Highway it has lots of trees, nice streets, and is quiet and peaceful.

Named in honor of aviator Charles Lindbergh the initial neighborhood residents were Knoxville business owners, politicians, professors, TVA employees and at least one wealthy bootlegger.

It was the completion of the Henley Street Bridge and the creation of the Great Smoky Mountain National Park that really boosted the neighborhood. Residents there have since fought off commercial development.

The historic district has 38 houses and 10 garages so recognized. Streetscapes there and lamp posts have added to the historic designation. Many homes are Tudor Style along with Colonial Revival, Bungalow, and Modern. Two of the homes are "Lustrom" houses that were prefabricated and built to meet the growing housing shortage after World War II.

Among the homes recognized for their historic importance are 214, 240 and 244 Druid Drive, 229, 254, 301, 306 Chamberlain, 3419 and 3514 Southwood, 327 Winslow and 3510 Glenhurst Drive.

DeLuca said the neighborhood doesn't have a direct connection to a greenway or a community park, although Stanley Lippincott Ridge Park is nearby. She said the neighborhood often uses the fields and playgrounds at Dogwood Elementary for recreation.

She said the association has named a committee to look at an entrance sign and funds from the former association, raised from Christmas Home Tours there, are ear-marked for a sign. Another project involved "Painting the Pavement" there to identify the special neighborhood. Holiday socials are being discussed for Halloween and Christmas as well as getting some connection to nearby greenways and parks.

"We've expanded the former neighborhood boundary in order to get more people involved, including renters, landlords, the school or anybody who is interested," DeLuca said.

The Lindbergh Forest group meets at 6:30 p.m. on the third Wednesday of each month at Graystone Presbyterian Church at 139 Woodlawn Pike. You can reach Kelley DeLuca at (865)660-4728 or email her at kelleydeluca@gmail.com.

The neighborhood watch meets in conjunction with the new association and shares members.

"We have open meetings and everyone is invited. We have a policeman there who keeps us informed about any crime, but there's very little crime here,"

The effort of the new association is recognized by the Knoxville Office of Neighborhoods and the historic region South of the River is once again vital and moving

Flammang hinted that with the addition of the cold soft drink maker and packets, the size of the Green Mountain went public in 1993 and the word "Keurig" is Dutch for "excellence."

After being in the industrial and office coffee business for years, Keurig introduced the first home brewer in 2004 and, in 2008, opened its Knox County location.

Day-old bread

I sit down at the table to eat, I am thankful for the bounty which God has provided. I realize that too many in this country, the place supposedly where abundant food is available, go hungry every day. Though we never went without food, Mother and Daddy had to make some adjustments as we three boys and our appetites grew.

Mother made our lunches for school. She'd spread potted meat or egg salad on slices of white bread, and the only way to tell that anything was on them was by the pink or yellow tint. She'd also include crackers smeared with peanut butter. The lunches were meant to fill us without breaking the bank; they were much cheaper to serve than school lunches, which we ate only on special days when turkey and dressing were served. Like most every family in Ball Camp, we had a garden. The darn thing took up most of our back yard, and it was filled with standard vegetables: corn, potatoes, green beans, and onions. We boys pitched in to break beans under a shade tree in the back yard or around the kitchen table. My fingertips sometimes would be sore from the task. Mother cut corn from the cob and froze packages, and she canned dozens of jars of beans. She also canned tomatoes to use for soups in the cold weather months.

year. He installed an electric fence around a section of the back yard and put animals there to graze. We boys named them Blackie and Brownie, not necessarily creative names, but accurate enough to identify them. For some time, the calves grew and would come to us at the border of the fence. We'd give them clumps of hay and pats on lunch bags still frozen. We'd their heads.

One day, we arrived home from school to discover that Blackie and Brownie were gone. We ran to Daddy to find out where they were. He knew how fond we were of the two animals, so he let us down easy. He told us that he took them somewhere to trade them for an equal amount of frozen meat. The freezer was filled with packages of hamburger, roasts, and a few steaks. Over the months we feasted on the meat, never once realizing that what we consumed were our two former pets.

Every month, Daddy made a trip to the Merita Bread Store. He stocked up on "day-old bread." The store's stock consisted of the loaves that had been returned from grocery store shelves. It was a nicer name for the items than "stale bread." He'd bring home 10-12 big loaves of white bread and place them in the freezer. One by one, they were removed, thawed, and turned into sandwiches or ingredients

Daddy bought for such things as dresstwo calves one ing. Sometimes the stuff was dry and coarse, and I still can recall the taste of freezer-burned bread.

> Daddy also stocked up on other items from the Merita Store. He'd buy fruit pies, usually apple or cherry. We boys sometimes would sneak some out and try to eat them. They were harder than a brick and impossible to bite until they'd thawed just a bit. We also had raisin-cream cakes and devil's food cream cakes. Mother would toss them into our try to remove the wrappers at noon, only to watch the top layers of the cakes stick to the cellophane. Still, we were grateful for a treat like

> On occasion, I still like to drop by bread stores, and yes, I purchase cakes and pies. However, buying a loaf of that bread is a different matter. Besides, these days, nutritionists tell us that white bread isn't healthy for us. So, I pay a king's ransom for a loaf of whole wheat bread at the grocery store.

> I am thankful that my children have always had food to eat. Maybe we didn't serve steak every night (unless hotdogs are known as tube steaks), but Amy managed to serve good things that we all ate. I also am thankful that my parents loved us enough to make sure we had food on the table, even if it came from the garden out back or from the day-old bread

The Colonel: Luke Lea

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill rayhill865@gmail.com

the pages of Tennessee's history is littered with colorful characters, but the life of Luke Lea is one right out of a novel; handsome, urbane, highly intelligent and successful, Lea climbed to the heights of financial and political accomplishment. Lea would become one of the first publishing magnates and would be elected to the United States Senate. Luke Lea would also feel the sting of failure; his publishing empire would slip through his fingers, he would be defeated for reelection to the United States Senate, lose his fortune and go to prison.

Named for a great grandfather of the same name who had been a contemporary and supporter of Andrew Jackson, Luke Lea was born April 12, 1879. Young Luke attended local public schools and went to college at the University of the South in Sewanee, Tennessee. Not done with his education, Lea enrolled at Columbia University's law school and graduated with a degree in 1903. While Luke Lea would practice law for a while, the law was never as interesting to him as the realm of newspaper publishing and politics. By 1907, Lea had founded the Nashville Tennessean with the first edition appearing on the streets on May 12 of that year, which was a Sunday. Lea was not only the publisher of the Tennessean, but its first editor as well. The Tennessean would remain one of Luke Lea's passions for the remainder of his life.

The young publisher was deeply immersed in Tennessee's politics while running the Tennessean. In 1908 Tennessee Democrats were sharply divided, largely over the issue of prohibition. Governor Malcolm Rice Patterson was perceived to be willing to allow localities to determine their choices to spirits and alcoholic beverages by local option. A challenger to Governor Patterson emerged in former United States Senator Edward Ward Carmack. Carmack, a former newspaperman himself, had been a Congressman and senator, before losing his Senate seat in 1906. The rivalry between Governor Patterson and Senator Carmack was quite personal; Carmack had defeated Patterson's father, Colonel Josiah Patterson, to get to Congress in the first place.

E. W. Carmack, despite his facility with a pen, was also a good speaker, which was helpful in any campaign long before television made courthouse speeches obsolete. With a busy head of fiery red hair to match his temperament, Carmack was popular and able and represented a genuine threat to Patterson's continued tenure. Both Patterson and Carmack disliked one another intensely.

Lea backed Carmack in the 1908 gubernatorial campaign, which was hard fought. Carmack charged Patterson with being a tool of the liquor interests and despite an intense campaign, lost narrowly to the incumbent who carried the more urban areas of the state, while Carmack did well in the more rural areas. Following his defeat, E. W. Carmack received an offer from Luke Lea to become editor of the Nashville Tennessean. Carmack accepted Lea's offer and it was not long before he gleefully dipped his pen in vitriol and wrote scathing editorials bathing Governor Patterson and his friends in verbal acid.

Naturally, Governor Patterson disliked Carmack's editorials, but some his friends resented the same editorials even more bitterly. Colonel Duncan B. Cooper, once one of E. W. Carmack's patrons at the Nashville American newspaper (which eventually had been acquired by Luke Lea), had insisted the editor stop maligning him in print. Carmack ignored Cooper's demand and some of the former senator's friends were so worried, they begged him to carry a pistol whenever he went out. Carmack heeded the advice of his friends, although that same advice may well have cost him his life. According to an account printed in the New York Times just days following Carmack's death, the editor had been warned that Colonel Cooper was profoundly angry and had demanded in no uncertain terms Carmack never use his name in print again. Carmack loftily dismissed Colonel Cooper's complaint, saying, "You go tell Colonel Cooper for me that I have heard of his boasts and threats before, but neither of them affects me; I shall use his name whenever I think the occasion demands and as I think proper."

Senator Luke Lea with William Jennings Bryan (sitting) 1911.

On November 8, 1908, Carmack encountered an irate Colonel Cooper on a Nashville street, along with Cooper's son, Robin. Both Carmack and the younger Cooper were armed and evidently Carmack, fearing for his life, opened fire, slightly wounding Robin Cooper. The younger Cooper fired back and proved to be the better marksman, hitting Carmack several times and killing him. The former senator lay dead in a Nashville gutter.

The Coopers were tried for Carmack's murder and Colonel Cooper was convicted, while Robin Cooper was acquitted on a technicality. Governor Patterson enraged many Tennesseans when he pardoned the elder Cooper. Patterson's single act in pardoning Colonel Cooper was the lit match that ignited open warfare inside Tennessee's Democratic Party. The fight would become so bitter that it would cost the regular Democrats the governorship and both seats in the United States Senate. One of the prime beneficiaries of the discord inside Tennessee's Democratic Party would be none other than Luke

The public outcry following Carmack's assassination was fanned by Luke Lea's Tennessean, as well as other newspapers across the state. The outrage crippled Malcolm Patterson's administration and derailed his bid for a third term in 1910. The disarray inside the Democrat Party was such that not even Senator Robert Love Taylor could hold the governorship for the party of Andrew Jackson. The party split into two factions; one was "regular" Democrats and the other were "Independent" Democrats. The Independent Democrats were those opposed to Governor Patterson and his administration. When the Governor was still intent upon seeking yet another term, he fielded a slate of candidates for the Tennessee State Supreme Court.

Many of the incumbent justices were seeking reelection and offended, they announced they would run again as "Independent Democrats." Patterson, seeing the handwriting on the wall, withdrew as a candidate, but his allies running for the Supreme Court lost as the Independent Democrats had allied themselves with Tennessee Republicans. Thus was born the "Fusionist" movement in Tennessee politics. The Fusionists swept the elections in 1910 and a little known Republican from Newport, Tennessee, Ben W. Hooper, was elected governor over Bob Taylor. The Fusionists also won the Tennessee House of Representatives. The regular Democrats still dominated the State Senate, largely because not all of the seats were up for election that year.

At the time. United States senators were not elected by the people, but rather by the members of the General Assembly. Both of Tennessee's U.S. senators were to feel the bite of the Fusionist's wrath. Bob Taylor, long immensely popular in Tennessee, had lost his bid for a fourth term as governor. Taylor had not wanted to make the race in the first place, as he had worked hard for years to serve in the United States Senate. Still, he had been crushed by his defeat, hardly able to believe the people of Tennessee would reject him.

Tennessee's other United States senator was James Beriah Frazier, also a former governor. A tall, stately looking man who looked every inch the part of a senator, was up for reelection in 1911 and very much wanted to succeed himself. As the legislature convened and a Republican presided over the state government, Frazier's reelection prospects plummeted. Free for all commenced and when it became readily apparent to Senator Frazier that he could not be reelected, he withdrew. The

and Republicans then

combined to elect a dark horse, Luke Lea. Just over thirty-one years old, Luke Lea was the youngest member of the United States Senate.

Lea was soon joined in the U.S. Senate by a Republican. Newell Sanders, a patron of Governor Ben W. Hooper and wealthy manufacturer from Chattanooga, was appointed to the Senate when Senator Robert L. Taylor died unexpectedly following a surgical procedure. Sanders remained in the Senate for only a brief time and educator William "Old Sawney" Webb was elected by the legislature to serve the few remaining months of Senator Taylor's term, but it was a disturbing reminder to regular Democrats they were becoming increasingly irrelevant.

In 1913, the legislature was faced with filling Taylor's Senate seat for the full six-year term and once again the Fusionists were successful in electing their candidate. John Knight Shields, Chief Justice of the Tennessee Supreme Court and a leader of the Independent Democrats, was elected to the United States Senate. Governor Hooper had been reelected in 1912, defeating former governor Benton McMillin and the Fusionists yet again held the governor's office and both seats in the United States Senate. The domination of the Independent Democrats and Republicans was complete.

The politics of the United States had changed that same year as well. The Republicans had ruled the country since the election of Abraham Lincoln. In fact, the only successful Democrat to intrude upon the primacy of the Grand Old Party's power was Grover Cleveland, the only president in the history of the United States to serve two nonconsecutive terms in office. The Democrats had been successful in electing their candidate in the infamous election of 1876, but the Republicans were able to set aside the popular vote by manipulating the results from the Electoral College and install Rutherford B. Hayes as president.

The Republicans would quite likely have been successful in 1912 as well had it not been for a split inside the GOP. Incumbent President William Howard Taft was challenged for renomination by his predecessor, Theodore Roosevelt, who remained highly popular. When narrowly denied the Republican nomination. Roosevelt bolted the party and ran under the Progressive banner. Taft ran a poor third behind Roosevelt, who lost to New Jersey governor

Carson-Newman Couple Dedicated Years to Education

"Family---All because two people fell in love!" The beautiful wall art hangs just above the bay window in their home. There are traces of family everywhere I look: a piano, photos on the wall, a tree house in the backyard.

Bob and Janet Dagley met at Carson-Newman, both of them aspiring to become teachers. She became a science teacher; he taught physical education and coached. Much of their story has been told in earlier columns about the Gibbs Eagles' basketball team of 1964-65. That was when a young Dagley made his mark in the Knox County School system as he took a small, rural school's basketball team to a 31-2 season! "I went to 87 ballgames in one year," Janet told me. Even today, people talk about it everywhere I go. There are still many in the Gibbs Community and beyond who remember and witnessed those exciting times. The Dagleys spent years in education. Janet taught for 37 years, and Bob was a teacher and administrator for 38 years.

The Coach still remembers those games, the players, and the fans. He also remembers some other people who influenced his life as a young student and coach. Dagley pays tribute to three prominent men who once played vital roles in the Knox County School System and credits them in helping him become the person we know as a family man, coach, school administrator, and church leader. The next segment will feature Dagley's thoughts on those three men who influenced him so greatly: C. B. Chesney, W. E. Robertson, and R. E. Graham.

Peter tells his readers that they are part of God's elect and exiles (I Peter 1:1-2).

Peter calls followers of Christ exiles or foreigners. This is someone passing through. You are in a land that is not your home. Heaven is your home. When you look at this world through the lens that this is not home, it makes a big difference.

Peter goes on to say that your inheritance can't perish (I Peter 1:3-4). It doesn't erode with time. You are God's sons and daughters with an inheritance that is kept for you in heaven. If we can understand our true home, then we are able to have strength and persevere. When things

Peter then goes on to share how trials are temporary (I Peter 3:6-7). He talks about gold being refined in fire and compares this to the suffering that at times Christians will experience. Put your hope in Jesus who changes hearts. Put your hope in the eternal reward kept for us. Don't get confused about what kingdom you are living in. This world is not our home but one day soon we will be home.

Farragut Citizens holding Town Hall Meeting

Very recently people in board positions of various Farragut Homeowner Associations joined together to form a new citizen's group named Farragut Citizens for Responsible Growth and Development, also known as FCRGD. The need for this new group was caused by the attempt to rezone the open land on Smith Road near Kingston Pike for apartments.

FCRGD will hold a town meeting at the Farragut Town Hall Thursday, August 13 at 7:00 p.m. in the meeting room where early voting is held. The purpose of the meeting is to present the reasons for opposing the R6 rezoning for apartments as requested by Continental Properties, a Wisconsin company. Everyone is invited, especially the property owner Horne Properties, the rezoning applicant Continental Properties of Wisconsin, the Farragut Municipal Planning Commission, the Farragut Mayor and Board of Aldermen, and the Farragut Planning Division Staff. Most importantly, FCRGD wants the people of Farragut to learn about this rezoning.

In December 2012, eight of the nine current Farragut MPC members voted in favor of the Farragut Comprehensive Land Use Plan. Policy 1 of the plan identifies the actions to be taken should rezoning and development be inconsistent with the plan. The open land on Smith Road proposed for apartments, Parcel 142 069, is NOT consistent with the Farragut Comprehensive Land Use Plan.

GETTING READY

Senior Cole Skavara goes through a linebacker drill on a hot August day last week at West High School. The start of 2015 high school football season is less than two weeks away. The annual Knoxville Orthopedic Clinic Kick-Off Classic gets underway Thursday night, Aug. 13, at Central High School and continues Friday night at West High, with games beginning each night at 7. The regular season for local teams begins August 20-22.

Clinton enters 2015 'more confident'

CLINTON --- When Josh Kerr took over as Clinton High School's football coach he inherited a struggling program and for his first three years as head coach, the Dragons saw their problems continue.

But that all changed in 2014 as Clinton made the playoffs. Now, excitement prevails after the Dragons won seven games last season.

Season 119 gets underway on Rocky Top

By Ken Lay

The 119th season of Big Orange football is now underway. The Volunteers opened their training camp early last week and are now officially preparing for the 2015 campaign.

The Vols, who went 7-6 last year and posted their first winning season since 2009 and nabbed a bowl victory (their first since the Outback Bowl following the 2007 season), enter the 2015 campaign with Joshua Dobbs slated to be the starting quarterback.

Dobbs took over starting duties midway through last season and led Tennessee to a 45-28 victory over lowa in the TaxSlayer Bowl in Jacksonville on Jan. 2, 2015.

Dobbs is back and must stay healthy because UT head coach Butch Jones has yet to name a replacement should his talented junior field general go

Freshmen Quentin Dormady and Jauan Jennings are being groomed as backups. But the versatile Jennings, a Murfeesboro native and Blackman High School graduate may also be expected to play some snaps at wide receiver because injuries and other maladies have left the Volunteers with a lack of depth at the receiver spots.

"Jauan Jennings will continue to get reps at wide receiver and he'll also get work at quarterback," Jones said. "I was really impressed with the work that Dormady did during the spring.

"We have two deep at all five offensive line positions and this is the first time that we've had that here as a staff," Jones said. "We'll have some guys moving around up there and it will be competitive."

Competition will be a major theme as the Vols prepare for the upcoming campaign. Jones must find a punter to replace the graduated Matt Darr, a fulltime middle linebacker, as well as settle on a starting offensive front.

But Jones is excited about his third season.

"This is an exciting time because now, you're practicing and preparing for something that matters,"

Tennessee football coach Butch Jones addresses the media at last week's pre-camp press conference. Jones and the Volunteers have begun preparation for the 2015 season, which begins Sept. 5 against Bowling Green in Nashville.

Lady Spartans have eyes on State Tournament

By Ken Lay

As the 2015 high school soccer season looms Webb School of Knoxville coach Sonny Trotter has some lofty expectations.

"Our expectation is to get to state," said Trotter, who will soon begin his second season with the Lady Spartans. "We want to get to state but we're going to have to stay healthy."

Webb, which went 13-6-1 in 2014, was eliminated in the state sectional round before some key injuries spelled its demise.

The Lady Spartans have some key pieces back and are primed for a deep run.

Webb has eight returning starters and several other veterans who made significant contributions last tion and Darby scored all of Reagan Taylor (freshman,

That group of battle-tested and savvy veterans will comprise a talented core according to Trotter.

"We have togetherness and unity and our effort and attitude have been tremendous," Trotter said. "We had a great camp and a great Bullen (sophomore, defend-

Satterfield will see time between the goalposts and she'll also play in the field and she'll be a leader for the Lady Spartans.

"Our midfield will be solid with Evey, Maya Reeves, Emily Wyrick, Kaitlin Ramsey, Apple and Kaitlin Lee," Trotter said. "Evey is great in so many ways, whether she's in the goal or in the midfield.

"If we stay healthy and slated for 6 p.m.

keep playing and working hard, we'll have a chance."

Trotter said his team is also strong and solid up front and on defense."

In addition to a talented group of veterans, Webb has a crop of newcomers looking to make an immediate impact.

Trotter noted that he has been pleased with the Lady Spartans thus far. He lauded the efforts of Mamantov, Hill and Catlett.

Webb opens the 2015 campaign with a pair of key non-league matches. The Lady Spartans host Central on Monday, Aug. 17. They then entertain Powell on Thursday, Aug. 20.

Q&A with Mike Keith Voice of the Tennessee Titans

By Alex Norman

From time to time we like to catch up with one of the movers and shakers in the world of sports. This week we had the chance to ask a few questions to Mike Keith, the "Voice of the Tennessee Titans."

Alex Norman: So far Marcus Mariota has brought a lot of excitement to Tennessee fans. How has he adjusted to life as a professional?

Mike Keith: For Marcus Mariota, there is no adjustment to life as a professional. Because of who he is and where he played colprepared and polished to handle "the job" of being a professional quarterback. He has easily slid into the role of being "the face of the franchise" for that reason.

AN: How important was it to get the contract situation squared away before camp began? Or can that kind of thing be overblown...

MK: (Laughs) People were pretty torn up over it, wondering WHEN he was going to sign, IF he was going to sign, IF we might trade him to Philadelphia or somewhere else. I was shocked at how concerned people were about the contract. But I think that it shows how excited that our fans are about Marcus Mariota and how they just wanted to see him play as quickly as possible.

AN: Will Mariota's skill set require significant adjustments to what the Titans like to do on offense?

MK: While the Titans won't switch to Oregon's offense, the team will incorporate some things that he clearly does well from the Ducks' attack. For the most part, however, Mariota is learning Coach Ken Whisenhunt's offense---and learning it quickly. Bottom line is that an NFL quarterback must be able to throw from the pocket at some point to be successful and Mariota is already showing in training camp that he can do that. Combine that skill with his athleticism and Mariota has the potential to be scary.

AN: Is Bishop Sankey ready to take that next step Fasano is a steady tight in the Titans backfield?

MK: I think so and believe that he will be the most pleasant surprise of 2015. Sankey took a lot of criticism last year because he was unspectacular, but in re-watching the 16 games, he didn't have lots of chances. He's stronger, smarter and has more experience, plus the Titans lege football (Oregon), he better, I believe. Don't be a coach like Dick LeBeau arrived in Nashville fully- surprised if he breaks out around a defense in its this season.

> AN: There is a lot of youth in terms of the Titans safety position heading into training camp. Does this make the health status of Michael Griffin even more crucial?

MK: Certainly having for a really good fit? Griffin for all 16 games is important to our team, but ing up in Middle Tennesour staff is very confident in our young safeties---not just Da'Norris Searcy, but also Marqueston Huff, Daimion Stafford and Khalid Wooten. This is a position where the Titans feel that into "the boom" that it has they have a lot of young depth and talent.

working like a man who believes that he has something to prove. He is in great condition, has been sharp in every practice so far and is becoming much more of a vocal leader among the wideouts. Wright has been one of the most exciting players to watch so far in training camp.

AN: Who are some of the key off season pickups for the Titans? MK: Brian Orakpo at why I am very proud to say weakside (outside) linebacker is huge, as was resigning Derrick Morgan to play strongside (outside) linebacker. I already mentioned Da'Norris Searcy at safety, but you cannot overlook Perrish Cox at cornerback. On offense, Anthony end, Byron Bell may start at right tackle and Harry Douglas and Hakeem Nicks are bolstering our receiving corps. But to me, the biggest free agent pickup was Dick LeBeau, the Hall of Famer who will run our defense. Coach LeBeau already has Titans defenders flying around, excited to play---even excited to pracnew run scheme fits him tice! It is fantastic to have second year converting to

HVA 'hungry' for gridiron success

By Ken Lay

Throughout its sevenyear varsity program's history Hardin Valley Academy has enjoyed some modest success. The Hawks have made the playoffs in five of its first seven seasons.

But a postseason victory has eluded HVA and that doesn't really sit well with coach Wes Jones.

Expectations are high at HVA and that's nothing new. What's new for the Hawks, who went 6-5 last season, is that regional re-alignment has put them into a new league for the fourth time in school's brief history.

The Hawks have been in District 3-AAA, District 4-AAA and they'll play in Region 1-6A in 2015. They've had a six winning seasons but constant movement has prevented Hardin Valley from establishing a true rivalry game.

"We've been re-classified four times and that makes it hard when you're a new school," Jones said. "We haven't been able to establish a rival. First, it was Karns, then it was Bearden and then it was Farragut.

"We don't play Karns or Farragut this year."

Throughout the program's history, West High has been HVA's only constant opponent. The Hawks and Rebels will open the 2015 campaign on Thursday, Aug. 20 at HVA. The Hawks have never beaten West, the defending Class 5A State Champion.

Coaches say Kick-Off Classic is 'fun' and helps with 'game jitters'

By Steve Williams

Over the years, the Knoxville high school football jamboree has been called "a glorified scrimmage" by some and a "dress rehearsal" by others.

For many years, it was played at Neyland Stadium on the University of Tennessee campus - a once in a lifetime opportunity for many high school players to experience the thrill of playing in a Division 1 The Knoxville Orthopedic Clinic Kick-Off

Davenport brings some needed good news Powell's way

By Steve Williams

Maybe it's fitting Jagwone Davenport will be wearing jersey No. 5 for Powell High's football team in 2015. It can be a reminder that the school is starting a fifth straight season with a new head football coach. Rodney Ellison is No. 5 in the line of coaches. Davenport's exciting running ability could help bring an end to the dubious distinction. Ellison said he has been a "pleasant surprise" this preseason. Powell has been needing good news like "He's a very explosive back and a very strong kid," said Ellison, describing the 5-8, 185-pound senior. "He's got breakspecial things for us." Davenport, according to the coach, also will be running behind a tough offensive line.

"The offensive line has been a great surprise with how they're blowing people away speed and he's going to do some off the ball in the preseason," said Ellison. "They're very physical." Will Hoyle, a 6-1, 245-pound junior, will start at left tackle, and has been called

"strong as an ox."

Brown has been Sepesi's favorite target in the preseason. "I think those two are going to hook up quite a few times this year," said Ellison, who was offensive coordinator last season at Clinton.

The offensive system Ellison brings to Powell is a "spread, no huddle, up tempo ... We'll throw the ball a lot. We broke passing and receiving records at both Wartburg and Clinton, but we also ran the ball well at both schools. That's the thing people get fooled by. They think we're just a pass-happy offense. only one win in 2014, the Panthers are in a good frame of mind. "They're very positive," said Ellison.

"We're still trying to instill a good work ethic in them, but they have worked hard all season. Starting in January, they've come to work hard every day. "They're teenagers, so we've got to help drive them sometimes and point them in the right direction, but they take coaching well. They bought into this system pretty fast. I couldn't have asked for more. I've got a great bunch of seniors that are leading the way and doing a tremendous job for us. I'm very proud to be

Weddings and Rituals

Rituals give structure to life, and while we should not become slaves to our customs, we shouldn't needlessly discard them. Just as children need boundaries, patterns of living make us feel comfortable. And while rebels are sometimes lauded from a safe distance - a civil society is made possible by a measure of conformity. Some might argue that those we see living on the street are rebellious non-conformists - modern day James Deans. Unfortunately, most of these poor souls are actually driven by their demons of mental illness and drugs.

I remain fascinated by the Exodus story in the Bible, where more than 1.5 million Hebrews were suddenly liberated from Egyptian slavery, and found themselves wandering in the desert without water, provisions or much in the way of even basic laws. The "back to Egypt" cabal quickly challenged Moses and God's leadership, stating they would be better off living as slaves in Egypt rather than dying in the desert. Well, most know the rest of the story how God provided food and water for his throng of exiles. He even gave them "speed limits" for living together, the Ten Commandments and other rules to supplant the laws of Egypt.

A wedding is a ritual which I believe remains very important. In some cultures women have few rights even when married, but in post-modern western culture this is not the case. Though I'm no legalbeagle, our culture even recognizes common-law marriages. These "marriages" were especially important on the American frontier. My point is that marriage is more in the minds and hearts of two people rather than any piece of paper sanctioned by the institutions of man. (I'll not rehash the odious redefinition of marriage by SCOTUS.)

Arguably, the wedding day belongs to the bride, even though the wedding ritual imparts a foundation of lifetime commitment to both. There is something about standing in the presence of friends and God, and reciting the traditional wedding vows, established by nature and convention, that is meaningful to the couple and the witnesses. Many times I've contemplated my own wedding vows as I've watched others swear faithfulness and steadfastness to each other. Sure, you can run down to City Hall and get married or use a "wedding chapel" in Vegas or Gatlinburg, but anticipation and planning, and finally "standing in the Presence," adds solemnity, foundation and gravitas to life-long commitment.

Becky and I have resisted offering advice to our daughter, Emily, and future son-in-law, Matt. The witness of our marriage of forty years means far more than any platitudes we might voice. However, while waiting for our women one day I did share with Matt "Ferguson's rule #9": Never leave the building before your wife. If you do so you'll find yourself waiting in the car, getting frustrated and wondering what's she's doing. Women are the glue of our society, and they never leave before everything and everyone are taken care of.

I don't remember much about the planning of my own wedding four decades ago. Perhaps I deferred to Becky who worked for years as a wedding coordinator. Perhaps I was focused on finishing medical school. And it was different then. I've observed that Matt and Emily are equally participating in their wedding plans and responsibilities. Lots of details go into a formal wedding, and if Emily and Matt approach the rest of their lives with this degree of sharing their marriage will be successful.

As Mother of the Bride, Becky has a big part in the "wedding of the century." I play a supportive role, though I do have three principle responsibilities: write a lot of checks, don't say anything stupid and don't stumble during the father-daughter dance.

By the time you read this essay Emily will be married and the last stage of my daughter's "launch sequence" will have occurred - and hopefully my three responsibilities accomplished. As the new couple soared into their future amidst toasts, the father-writer-philosopher couldn't resist one piece of advice for a successful marriage. It was based on Ecclesiastes 4:12 and braiding the hair of little girls.

My toast was short and poignant. It needed to be short as tears filled my eyes, and ended on a light hearted note, "So, here's to love and laughter, and happy ever afters!" And I didn't stumble at the father's final hurdle.

City, NFPA Offer Safety Tips For Lightning Storms

You're grilling hamburgers on the backyard patio. As you flip them over, you notice that the sky is getting dark. Next, you see a flash of lightning. Then you hear a clap of thunder. What should you do? What precautions should you take?

In late summer, thunder and lightning storms are fairly common occurrences. But it's important to realize just how dangerous lightning can be and the damage it can do.

Lightning strikes can kill people caught outside and exposed, and they also can cause fires. While deaths and injuries from lightningstarted fires are infrequent, the dollar loss totals more than $400 million per year.

"There are simple precautions that we urge people to take during a lightning storm that can save lives and decrease the chances of injury and damage," says Greg Taylor, the City's Electrical Inspections Chief.

The National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) and the City of Knoxville Electrical Inspections Unit recommend these safety steps:

- Unplug appliances and other electrical items, such as computers, and turn off air conditioners. If you are unable to unplug them, turn them off.
- Follow the 30-30 rule: When you see lightning, count 30 seconds until you hear thunder. If that time is 30 seconds or less, the thunderstorm is within six miles and is dangerous. Seek shelter immediately. The threat of lightning continues longer than most people realize. Wait at least 30 minutes after the last sound of thunder before leaving your shelter.
- · If you can hear thunder, you are within striking distance of lightning. Seek shelter immediately.
- Stop outdoor activities at the first clap of thunder and get inside a house, a large building or a hard-topped vehi-

- · When inside, stay off corded phones, computers and other electronic equipment that put you in direct contact with electricity. Also, avoid washing your hands, showering, bathing, doing laundry or washing dishes, which put you in contact with plumbing.
- If you are in open water, go to land and seek shelter immediately.
- If you feel your hair stand on end, indicating that lightning is about to strike, squat low to the ground on the balls of your feet. Place your hands over your head between your knees. Make yourself the smallest target possible and minimize your contact with the ground. Do not lie flat on the ground. This is a last resort when a building or hard-topped vehicle is not available.

· If a person is struck by lightning, call 9-1-1 and get medical care immediately. Lightning strike victims carry no electrical charge; attend to them immediately. Check the person's breathing, heartbeat and pulse.

A Brown Bag Lecture by Dr. Aaron Astor

August 20, Dr. Aaron Astor will discuss his new book, "The Civil War Along Tennessee's Cumberland Plateau." The Cumberland Plateau played host to some of the most dramatic military maneuvering of the Civil War. Straddling the entire state of Tennessee, the formidable tableland proved to be a maze of topographical pitfalls and a morass of divided loyalties. As Federal forces sought to capitalize on the early capture of Nashville, they moved into a region split by the most vicious guerrilla warfare outside Missouri, including the colorful and intensely violent rivalry between Confederate Champ Ferguson and Unionist Tinker Dave Beaty. The bitter conflict affected thousands of ordinary men and women struggling to survive in the face of a remorseless war

In a Brown Bag Lecture on of attrition, and its legacy continues to be felt today. Aaron Astor is an associate professor of history at Maryville College and has written numerous articles, conference papers, and books on the Civil War era, focusing especially on the Upper and Border South. Books will be available for Dr. Astor to sign following the lecture.

The program is sponsored by 21st Mortgage and is free and open to the public. The lecture will begin at noon at the East Tennessee History Center, 601 S. Gay Street, Knoxville. Guests are invited to bring a "Brown Bag" lunch and enjoy the lecture. Soft drinks will be available. For more information on the lecture, exhibitions, or museum hours, call 865-215-8824 or visit the website at www.EastTNHistory.
