Paul Michael "Mike" Beeler

November 23, 1953 -August 26, 2015

Paul Michael (Mike) Beeler, age 61 of Corryton, passed away unexpectedly the morning of August 26, 2015. Though the Beeler family and friends mourn the loss of their beloved husband, father, papaw, brother, and friend, they are secure and comforted in the knowledge that as a man of faith and acceptance, he is now in the presence of our Lord and Savior.

A hardworking man, he took great pride in providing for his family. Nothing brought him greater joy than being surrounded by family and friends to enjoy a good meal, singing or listening to the great old gospel hymns, watching his precious grandbabies playing at his feet, attending every sporting event in which his children participated, or a quiet weekend getaway with Becky in

But most of all, Mike loved his family and the comfort of home. He and Becky hosted countless family get-togethers filled with laughter, music, good food, and always love.

Mike leaves behind many loved ones to cherish memories of him until they meet again. Loving and faithful wife of 40 years Becky Beeler; daughter (his "baby girl") Ashley and husband Christopher Foster and grandsons Jack and Ryder; beloved son Christopher (Chris) and wife Carrie and granddaughter Chloe; sisters Teresa (Bob) Garland, Karen (Alan) Beal, Brenda (Jeff) Taylor, Susie Cox, and Velma (Claude) Killion; brothers Loy Dunsmore, Hollis (Mary) Dunsmore, Bob (Blanche) Dunsmore, James (Sandy) Dunsmore, and Ray Dunsmore; sisters-in-law Annette Moore, Judy (Bob) Buchanan, Sandra (Ron) Tilley, and Brenda Dunsmore; brothers-in-law Doug (Dana) Moore and Blaine Cupp along with many special nieces, nephews, aunts, uncles, and cousins.

No Strikes and You're Out?

In the quiet of July 4th week, parent and former president of the Bearden Softball Booster Club Randy Susong addressed the Board of Education about the forced resignation of Bearden High School softball coach Leonard Sams.

sallyabsher@ knoxfocus.com

Sams was asked to resign on June 4 after seven years of coaching at BHS. Susong said, "This forced resignation is baffling to everyone in the softball community, especially to those still in the program." Susong asked the Board to not accept the resignation, and to let Sams continue as BHS softball coach.

Susong explained, "We don't have a coach, nor do we have a team. We built an indoor practice facility on (school) property last spring, which helped bring this team to the State tournament. The indoor practice facility currently has zero funds." Susong and Adam McKenry, Booster Club treasurer, signed the note for the building construction, and are now personally making the $750/mo payments. There is still $44,000 owed on the building, which was to be paid through fundraising efforts of the Boost-

When the Softball program, funded by the Booster Club, lost Coach Sams they lost their summer and fall fundraisers, which "led to lost revenue of approximately $21,000 for a summer camp, UT concession revenue, and a fall golf tournament," according to parent Cheryl McKenry.

Booster Club Officers met with Dr. McIntyre on July 20 to ask for the reinstatement of Sams. McIntyre said he would speak with BHS principal Dr. Bartlett and make a decision within two weeks. On July 27, BHS Athletic Director Nathan Lynn announced Angelica McClerkin had been hired as the new head coach of the BHS Softball program.

On July 28, the Booster Club officers received a letter from McIntyre stating, "I believe that Dr. Bartlett made a reasonable decision regarding the softball students." The Booster Club is still searching for answers. On what facts was this "reasonable decision" made? How is the current situation in the "best interests" of these students, since none of tacted prior to Sams' dismissal? Eleven of the 14 returning players have indicated they will not be playing for Bearden now that Coach Sams is gone. Two more are on the fence. Most plan to play for Sams on a spring travel team, forgoing their High School college softball. Dr. Bartlett spoke with several players on June 9. After the meeting, freshman pitcher Kaylor Susong told her parents, "If I can't trust these guys to have my best interest in my athletics, how can I trust them to have my best interest in my education?"

Booster Club officers were con-

Per TSSAA rules, McClerkin is not qualified for the head coaching position. A head coach must be a full time or retired teacher, or have been an assistant coach for five years. McClerkin is not a teacher, and has just one year of experience as an assistant coach. Also per TSSAA, with the timing of the hire, tryouts can't be held until February, so Bearden currently has no softball team.

McKenry emailed Bernard Childress of TSSAA about the new coach's lack of qualifications. He was told that a one year waiver was granted because the administration couldn't find a qualified candidate and they were in jeopardy of losing the program. Childress also indicated that McIntyre and KCS AD Marion Quinn were involved in the process of requesting the waiver.

There is a difference between hiring a coach, and hiring a qualified coach. KCS Board member Doug Harris, who represents BHS, arranged a meeting with Bartlett, coach based on his Lynn, and Booster Club officers determination of the on June 22. Harris said, "It seems best interests of his to me you guys just assume you won't be able to hire another coach." Ultimately it took BHS almost two months and a TSSAA waiver to hire a coach who by TSSAA rules is not qualified. Harris did offer to write a check to help cover some of the cost of the practice facility, but the donation hasn't been received yet.

The Booster Club asked Harris to put them on the agenda for August's BOE meeting, but he said, "I'm not going to buck my only high school principal's deciwith Dr. Bartlett on August 17 after being contacted by parent Sharon Glass. Hill later emailed Glass: "Coach Sams DOES know why he was fired and there were others that were there when this meeting was held... I believe I have done due diligence as a school board member. I support this decision and am hopeful your student will move forward with choices that are best for her this school year."

The Focus spoke with Leonard

Sams. He explained that when former AD Scott Witt hired him, all the athletic programs at BHS were thriving, except the softball program. "Witt told me that he wanted this program strong. I told him it was going to take several years to get this up and running, and turn it into a powerhouse program. I told Mr. Witt there would be obstacles and adversities along the way. Some parents would oppose the new direction and would like to keep the same old status quo at Bearden. Now with three ADs in the matter of four years, I think that they've lost sight of what me and Scott Witt started out doing."

Sams told us that there were no allegations of wrongdoing. He said the only thing the administration would tell him is that "some of the players didn't respect me," and "they wanted to take the team in a different direction." Lynn was quoted in PrepXtra, "(Sams') departure didn't involve misconduct." Why fire a winning coach?

This is not the first successful, popular athletic coach forced out under Bartlett for dubious reasons. Football coach Brad Taylor resigned in 2013, to be replaced by then-AD Morgan Shinlever, who amazingly hired himself as football coach to replace Taylor. Track coach Steve Prince resigned in 2015 after 13 years at BHS. Prince took his team to State 11 times and was named Coach of the Year 7 times. In 2012, Jack Tate stepped down as BHS baseball head coach after he took the team to State and had players sign with UT and commit to Walters State.

While it is easy for this type of Board member Terry Hill met situation to dissolve into a "he said, she said" battle, there are a number of indisputable facts about Coach Sams:

- 25+ years softball coaching experience, including 9+ years at the High School level Started and coached the
- Bearden Middle softball team over the last 5 years to help build the BHS program
- In 2015 took Bearden to the State Tournament for the first time in school history, voted District Coach of the year Coached 60+ players

- Selected to coach the 18U America's Team in Europe next summer

ships in Chattanooga

Insiders in the local softball community think there is another explanation for the inexplicable coaching change, but the Focus has not confirmed this. There are other concerns with Dr. Bartlett as well. Before coming to KCS, he was under investigation in Loudon County over irregularities with a "slush fund." Four years ago, BHS received a $100K grant from U.S. Cellular, but former members of his staff say only $30K in expenditures was ever approved. At $102,512, Bartlett is the second highest paid secondary principal in Knox County (only L&N Stem's Becky Ashe makes more).

Susong and McKenry met recently with County Law Director Bud Armstrong about the outstanding building loan. Armstrong told them that "since Knox County owns the property in question, it would not be advisable to have taken out a loan and build on the property without going through Knox County Commission." Unfortunately the Board of Education and principals allow that to happen all the time with booster clubs. Armstrong stated, "The only way anyone is supposed to be able to build on County property is with approval of Commission. County Commission is the only body within Knox County Government that has the power to finance via bonds for construction or other debt on behalf of the County."

But it was not the Booster Club that brought the project to the BOE for approval on December 3, 2014. Bartlett and Lynn submitted the plans to the Board, and told the Booster Club they needed proof of the funds. The bank provided written confirmation that the loan was approved and the funds were available. Susong and McKenry never imagined that six months later, they would be without a coach, a team, and the ability to fundraise to pay off the loan. Armstrong told The Focus that at this time, Susong and McKenry have no legal recourse, and are on the hook to either personally pay the balance of the loan, or solicit donations to pay it off. Susong said if he had known this was even a remote possibility, the Booster Club would have waited to build until they had raised the necessary money for the project, and not taken out a loan.

Susong said the next step is to meet with each and every Board of Education member to discuss the facts. As Armstrong is fond of saying, "this Board can do whatever it wants with five votes." But right now, it doesn't look like there are five Board members who will vote to bring back Coach Sams.

Belle Morris Elementary Celebrates 100 Years!

Last Thursday morning, Belle Morris Elementary School hosted a celebration commemorating the 100 years anniversary of its founding in 1915. Dignitaries including Knox County Mayor Tim Burchett, and City of Knoxville Mayor Madeline Rogero kicked off the celebration at 9 a.m.

The students performed a Maypole dance, which was a tradition Mrs. Belle Morris started when she founded the school. There were refreshments, tours of the school, and historical video footage. The celebration culminated with an open house for the public from 3:30 until 6 p.m.

Many alumni were in attendance, including the oldest living Knoxville alumni, Ruth Snelson. At nearly 100 years old, Ruth still lives independently and is full of energy and enthusiasm. We also spoke with alumni Pat Lowry, who is the aunt of BOE member Patti Bounds. Patti's greatgrandfather, Joe Bise, was principal of Belle Morris in 1915. Historical Board of Education records indicate he earned $65 a month!

School librarian Martha Koho worked diligently to research historic documents and photographs. She helped set up a "museum" in the gym with a timeline of the school and yearbooks, scrapbooks, and other memorabilia dating back to the early days of the school.

Sweeping Literacy Initiatives Announced

The Tennessee Department of Education notes a "persistent and disturbing trend." Math and science scores are steadily increasing, but reading scores are declining. This year 48.4 percent of students in grades 3-8 were "proficient" in reading, down from 49.5 percent in 2014 and a peak of 50.5 percent in 2013.

tnchalkbeat.org reports, "Calling Tennessee's stagnant reading scores a 'true ethical and moral dilemma,' Education Commissioner Candice McQueen is rolling out a pair of initiatives to boost students' literacy skills, starting even before they enter school."

The new and temporary State House Representative, Jason Zachary, was appointed to serve until the general election last Monday by the Knox County Commission. Zachary told the commission that the appointment will give him the opportunity to attend a couple of meetings in Nashville before being

Fountain City Lake update draws a crowd

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

Fountain City residents packed the Lion's Club house Tuesday afternoon to hear an update and plans for restoring the Fountain City Lake. Mayor Madeline Rogero recalled the $250,000 allotted last year for repairs and reminded everyone that while the city doesn't own the lake or the park, she felt a need to help the Lion's Club with its efforts.

Knoxville is the only city in Tennessee with a special "Safety City" that teaches children, especially 2nd graders, about traffic and fire safety. The facility, at 165 South Concord Street between Sutherland Avenue and Kingston Pike, is a city in miniature and hosts more than 15,000 children, parents, teachers and groups each year.

Within the complex are miniature replicas of many Knoxville buildings, including a residential replica, downtown section, the Sunphere, and many other buildings. Some were built from donations by companies, like Shoney's Restaurant, and some duplicate public buildings.

In between the many buildings are striped city streets with stop signs, pedestrian crossings, direction signs and even railroad crossings.

During the school year various county second graders arrive by bus to attend a four- or five-hour visit that starts with some classroom traffic and fire safety lessons and then the children are taken into the miniature city streets and allowed to drive the little cars or bicycles along the streets. The visit also includes a visit to a house that has been prepared with examples of fire hazards the children can identify and two bedrooms where the children are taught how to crawl to safety or use an emergency escape latter from a second story

"Some children have said a visit here is better than Dollywood or Disneyland," said Vicki Dagnan, Safety City Director. She and a full time staff of three, along with volunteers, see about 7,000 second graders each year and about 8,000 other visitors for special events.

The City Council recently allocated more than $600,000 for the construction of eight more buildings which will, according to Dagnan, will include a downtown Yogurt Shop, a hospital heliport, a gas station, car wash, town clock, post office, the Southern Railroad Depot, and a replica of Neyland Stadium.

Bits and pieces I am an avid reader but once in a while I latch on to a book that is disappointing and not to my liking at all. That was the case with a book I picked up by one of my favorite authors, Nelson DeMille. The title misled me. I thought "Radiant Angel" was, well, maybe about angels, or something on that order, so I picked it up without reading the jacket and, as I browsed through it, I knew it wasn't exactly is such a prolific writer, you can't lay it down. Another book I read was "Legends and Lies" written by David Fisher in collaboration with Bill O'Reilly's Fox News Series about "The Real West." It is a fascinating, eye-opening look at the truth behind the western legends we all think we know. It is amazing how people survived back in those days when there were bank and stagecoach robberies, and Indian attacks on wagon trains. This book brings to life the stories about such characters as, Jesse James, Doc

Holiday,

Daniel Boone, Annie Oakley, Buffalo Bill, Kit Carson and many others. Their lives were embellished by reporters and writers of that long-ago era and whether they were true or not, the public back in those days feasted on their exploits. A lot of them managed to convince their admirers that they were future "Robin Hoods," robbing the rich to help the poor. Whatever their contentions were, they made for heroic tales that will last forever. It was an interesting read.

News Flash: In my home city of Lancaster, Pa., they now have sweet corn ice cream. It is blanched, then cut off the cob, then it is mixed in the ice cream machine. You will taste pieces of corn when you bite into it. It can be dusted by Old Bay Seasoning. I kid you not! I can't make an accurate assessment on this until I actually taste it. That may take a while since I don't know when I'll be going up North. And I'm doubtful if this concoction will make it down

Sidewalks and mistakes at County BZA By Mike Steely

The Knox County Board of Zoning and Appeals only had two items on their agenda Wednesday but it took them almost four hours, the majority of which was spent on deciding on the location of a sidewalk for a proposed retail center at 1315 Lovell

steelym@knoxfocus.com

At the end the attorney for Partners V, LLC., declared "We're right back to where we started." Partners V have a grading permit and are planning a small retail complex. The Planning Commission approved the proposal but put four conditions on it;

one of the requirements is that the developers build a sidewalk along Yarnell Road that extends to the Weigel's Store on Lovell.

The objection that the developers have is that the sidewalk isn't on their property and would basically serve the residents of the nearby apartment Attorney Arthur Seymour, representing the developer, told the BZA that the required sidewalk would not even touch the Partner's property and was a violation of ordinances. He said that no sidewalk should be required there. The sidewalk across from the planned retail center is partly on the right of way and possibly infringes on property of the apartments.

Several board members addressed the matter and, after more than three hours, the board decided to make the developers a compromising offer. They voted the sidewalk must be included but gave an option as to which side of Yarnell was used. The BZA also said the sidewalk must be at least five-feet wide with a two-foot buffer from the curb.

Seymour said that decision took the matter back to where it started.

In other action, the BZA admitted a mistake by the planning commission for a property at 808 Bob Kirby Road. Worley Builders approached the board to appeal this MPC ruling. Initially a mistake was made by an earlier survey and then the lot was plotted without understating how short the odd shaped lot is to meeting the required area for a dwelling.

BZA member Kevin Murphy moved to refund the filing money but deny the variance. The developer asked that a future fee to file also be waived and Dan Kelly of the planning commission staff agreed.

Emory Road development withdrawn

Citizens turned out in force last Monday during the county commission's zoning session to oppose a large development on the northwest side of E. Emory Road and northeast of Morris Road.

The developer, Belle Investment Company, Inc. was represented by attorney John King, who was asking the commission for twelve dwelling units per acre. The planning commission had approved and recommended only five dwellings per acre.

The apartment project, in the middle of a low density residential zone, would have required a change in the Sector Plan and King said that if five units or less per acre were approved he would withdraw the motion. That would permit the developer to come back with a lower density plan or wait one year before reapplying.

Sarah Johnson spoke for the residents and told the commissioners that the development is "outside the scope" of the residential area and would create traffic problems. She said that area of Emory Road had a fatal accident recently and pointed out that the proposed development would only have one entrance.

She requested the commission set the zoning at 2.5 units per acre.

Commissioner Mike Brown asked MPC Director Gerald Green why the commission would allow five units there and Green said that one to five units were permitted under the current Sector Plan.

King said that if they voted to send it back to the planners it would be back before the commission again and asked for a show of hands of those commissioners who might vote against the plan. Commission Chairman Brad Anders said that wasn't permitted.

"This fits into uncharacteristic zoning in that area," Commissioner Charles Busler said, adding, "I'm ready to make a motion for 2.8 to 3.1 units per acre."

Anders said he was uncomfortable rezoning property when the owner was not at the meeting.

King said that rather than have a vote for five or less units he would withdraw the motion.

Busler then cancelled his motion and the commission voted to accept the withdrawal of the proposal.

In other action, the commission voted to approve the Northwest Sector Plan and granted JMB Investment Co., LLC permission to build on Raccoon Valley Road near Interstate 75.

The commission also approved Huber Properties, LLC for five units per acre on the north side of Choto Road.

The Colonel: Luke Lea

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill rayhill865@gmail.com

pily married, doting on his newborn daughter, former United States Senator Luke Lea concentrated upon reducing his indebtedness after his return from the World War. Frequently discussed as a potential candidate for high office, Lea made no move to seek election, but he was becoming more and more influential in Tennessee politics. The machine in Davidson County and Nashville was headed by Mayor Hillary Howse, which generally had the editorial support of E. B. Stahlman, publisher of the Nashville Banner. One of the most important men in the Nashville machine was attorney K. T. "Kit" McConnico. Once upon a time, Lea and McConnico had been warm friends, but McConnico's ties to the Nashville machine, which Lea opposed, not only eventually ended their friendship, but also made them arch enemies. Lea had refused to support Governor A. H. Roberts for renomination in the 1920 Democratic primary. Roberts had managed to alienate a large number of groups and people during his single two-year term as governor and Lea backed William R. Crabtree, the former mayor of Chattanooga. Lea's oppory, but he did lose the general election to Republican Lea was more successful two years later when he supported Clarksville attorney Austin Peay for the governorship. Peay only barely won the Democratic primary over seventy-seven-yearold former governor Benton McMillin, but he defeated Governor Alf Taylor in the general election by a decisive margin. Lea's influence with Governor Peay was immense. While Governor Peay was certainly independent-minded, Luke Lea likely had more influence with Peay than most.

Alf A. Taylor.

Austin Peay began his first administration by reforming all of state government. He consolidated an unwieldy structure into one more accountable and efficient. Where the governor once was at the mercy of the legislature and departments and agencies frequently operated outside the control of the chief executive, Peay's reforms significantly strengthened the governor's office. Peay also brought the state budget directly under the governor

Lea's friendship with Governor Peay was hard not to notice; the governor and his family were nce again hapfrequent guests for supper at Lea's home on Sunday nights. When the governor imposed a luxury tax on tobacco, the tobacco industry responded by refusing to advertise its products in Lea's newspaper, the Nashville Tennessean.

> Governor Peay, although a relatively youthful man, was in somewhat delicate health. The governor had gone to rest at a sanitarium in Battle Creek, Michigan for a heart condition. Lea's biographer quotes from a letter sent by the governor which references the infamous Scopes Trial in Dayton, Tennessee. Peay's mention of the "abominable Dayton trial" went on to acknowledge the governor was "suffering over those two death cases," involving men condemned to death. Peay concluded, "It is worth all it has cost being Governor two terms to know you and your wonderful family."

A brittle alliance between the edges. Crump thorwas less than enthused about the notion of Peay running for a third consecutive two-year term in 1926. The Memphis Boss also suspected if reelected again in 1926, Peay might decide to challenge Senator K. D. McKellar in 1928, a thought that had also crossed the senator's mind. The temporary alliance came to an end with the 1926 elections.

Both Crump and Senator McKellar opted to support State Treasurer Hill McAlister to run against Governor Peay. McAlister was something of an underwhelming candidate, although apparently quite competent. McAlister also drew the support of the Nashville machine, which was opposed by Luke Lea and his Tennessean.

It was a hard fought campaign inside the Democratic primary and McAlister proved to be quite strong in Tennessee's urban Governor Peay maintained his hold on rural Tennessee and carried East Tennessee, where his support for the Great Smoky Mountain National Park was highly popular.

> Peay was stricken with a serious heart attack during the legislative session and the General Assembly took off for six weeks to allow him to recover. Relations between the governor and the legislature had deteriorated along with Peay's health. When the General Assembly increased the tax on gasoline, Governor Peay vetoed the bill. It appeared that the governor's veto might be overridden and Luke Lea appealed to Congressman Gordon Browning of Huntingdon for help with a particular state senator in Browning's home county of Carroll. According to Lea's biographer, the senator very reluctantly agreed to veto to sustain Governor Peay's veto if Browning were to accept the blame or credit for his vote, depending upon one's view. Browning sat on the floor of the Tennessee State Senate that evening and just so no one would mistake the reason for his

It was one of Austin Peay's last victories as governor. Peay died from a cerebral hemorrhage on October 2, 1927. Luke Lea was one of the governor's pallbearers.

Henry Horton, Speaker from Marshall County with little political experience, Horton turned to Luke Lea as his mentor and advisor, a role the former senator happily accepted. It was during the administration of Governor Henry Horton that Luke Lea reached the apex of his political influence in Tennessee. would also be the cause of his own political, personal and financial ruin.

Unlike Austin Peay, Henry Horton had no particular scruples about using state projects and money to his political advantage. Also unlike Governor Peay, Henry Horton had little ability to reject Lea's advice. Peay had been both high minded and independent, while Henry Horton was neither. With the 1928 election fast approaching, it became quite clear that Horton intended to run to succeed himself and it was also equally clear that the Crump machine and that of Hillary Howse in Nashville would field a candidate to oppose the governor in the Democratic primary.

Once again, Crump and Howse chose to back former State Treasurer Hill McAlister for the gubernatorial nomination. Luke Lea had been expanding his newspaper empire, which not only included the Nashville Tennessean, but named for his father-in-law the Knoxville Journal and Percy Warner after he died the Memphis Commercial in 1927. Appeal as well. With newspapers in each of Tennessee's three grand divisions, especially at a time when there was no television and radio was not the widespread medium it McAlister's appeal inside would become a few years later, Luke Lea's influence strong, but like the late was enormous.

According to Lea's daughter and biographer, Mary Louise Tidwell, the former senator even attempted to purchase the Kansas City Star when the newspaper became available for purchase following the death of its owner. Lea's former secretary, John D. Erwin, told Tidwell Lea had left Kansas City believing he had negotiated a deal to purchase the Star for $10 million. The paper's trustees, however, preferred local ownership and accepted a higher offer, deeply disappointing Luke

To raise the money needed to buy the newspapers, Lea had become acquainted with Rogers Caldwell of Caldwell and Company. The enterprising Caldwell had believed a company floating bonds to provide funds for ventures would be profitable and help to expand business in the South. Caldwell helped to provide the much needed capital for Lea's expansion of his Tennessee Publishing Company.

As Luke Lea expanded his business empire, he made a gift to Nashville through several hundreds of acres of land he owned near the Belle Meade Country Club. Lea's gift was to be used

The 1928 Democratic primary for governor was a brutal affair and Governor Henry Horton managed to win the nomination. Hill the urban areas was still Austin Peay before him, Horton managed to do quite well in the rural areas.

The crafty Lea had conceived of a means to divide the resources, time and attention of E. H. Crump by encouraging a candidate to challenge Crump's warm personal friend and political partner, Senator Kenneth D. McKellar. Congressman Finis Garrett of Dresden was the Minority Leader in the U.S. House of Representatives. Despite being a Democrat, Garrett was thoroughly conservative and considered the more liberal McKellar as quite nearly a socialist. Lea backed Garrett's candidacy and it did indeed achieve its purpose of keeping McKellar busy with his own campaign and dividing the resources of the Crump machine.

Senator McKellar, highly popular in Tennessee, turned back Garrett's challenge, winning renomination by a two-to-one margin. Yet, Henry Horton only scraped by to win a term in his own right as governor of Tennessee.

Luke Lea had reached the zenith of his political influence in Tennessee.

They squeak too much to be quiet enough to "sneak" up on someone. The name "sneaker" comes from some section of the world other than the south. I'd also bet that those who wear sneakers never cut the toes out of them for summer wear or had only one other pair of shoes to do them for the entire year.

I might try to buy a new pair of canvas tennis shoes, but they must not cost too much, and they'd have to have that same new smell that the old ones had. I will never, however, own a pair of "sneakers."

Admirals go to 2-0 for first time since 2009

By Ken Lay

For the first time since 2009, Farragut High School has opened its football season with two consecutive wins.

The Admirals improved to 2-0 on the young 2015 season by notching a 38-14 victory over Gibbs Friday night before a packed house at Bill Clabo Field.

Farragut coach Eddie Courtney was pleased to his squad undefeated after two weeks but he said that the Admirals were not about to rest on their laurels because they simply can't afford to.

Oak Ridge, which is also 2-0 after a hard-fought road win at Dobyns-Bennett in Kingsport, will be in West Knox County this week in the Region 3-5A opener for both schools. That game, early though it may be, will have some magnified league title implications.

"We made some big plays tonight but we also made some mistakes," Courtney said after his team recorded its second victory is as many weeks. "We have to clean that stuff up because we have a big game [this] week against Oak Ridge.

"Whoever wins that _ game may very well have a shot at the [region] championship because they'll be a game up. If you lose that game, you'll have to hope that they lose [later] too." The Wildcats already have a region win in 2015. They outlasted Clinton 24-13 in the season opener for both teams on Aug.21.

The big tilt with Oak Ridge is looming but Courtney wanted to make sure that his team took some time to enjoy its win over the Eagles (1-1).

"We're 2-0 and that's the good thing about all of this," he said.

Farragut jumped ahead early Friday night. The Admirals, who were playing in front of their home crowd for the first time this season, stopped Gibbs on the first series of the contest. After the Eagles punted, Farragut took the ball on the Gibbs 46-yard line.

From there, the Admirals engineered a nineplay drive that consumed just over two-and-a-half minutes, which ended when senior running back Tanner Thomas scored from five yards out with 6 minutes, 39 seconds

Freshmen lead Farragut past Lady Hawks 3-1

By Ken Lay

Last season Farragut High School's girls soccer team struggled to score goals but Wednesday night, the Lady Admirals has no such trouble as they received three goals from a pair of youngsters.

"It was really nice to see those freshmen score goals," Farragut coach Dennis Lindsay said after his young squad nabbed a crucial early-season 3-1 District 4-AAA victory over rival and defending district and Region 2-AAA champion Hardin Valley Academy before a spirited crowd at Farragut Soccer Stadium. "Last year, we had trouble generating goals."

The Lady Admirals (2-0 overall, 2-0 in the district) has certainly found the back of opposing nets early and often in 2015. Farragut won its season opener in impressive fashion recently when it knocked off traditional district cellar dweller Heritage 11-0.

however, it was the Lady minder Taylor Schott. Hawks, who enjoyed a Lady Admirals' sophomore pair of scoring chances. But HVA was turned away by Farragut senior goalkeeper Miranda Burt, who still couldn't forget what happened to her team against the Lady Hawks last season.

"This is a big win for us, especially considering what happened last year," said Burt, who made four point-blank saves while Hardin Valley circled the net in droves. "Last year, they beat us twice and knocked us out [in the District 4-AAA Tournament semifinals]." Burt is a veteran in the Hardin Valley-Farragut athletic rivalry. She's not only been through the battles on the soccer field. She's also a basketball player and she's faced her archrivals on the hardwood as well. But the two players that scored for the Lady Admirals on this night were new to the fray.

Tee Higgins will be the star attraction when Oak Ridge plays at Farragut Friday night in a key Region 3, Class 5A high school football matchup.

The Wildcats' outstanding junior wide receiver, who recently committed to the University of Tennessee, should be easy for fans to pick out.

Beep! Beep! Big plays power Roadrunners past Halls, 46-22

By Steve Williams

Austin-East quarterback Darius Harper is known for his passing arm, but it was his legs that broke Halls' back Friday night.

After the Red Devils had rallied to within eight points of A-E early in the fourth quarter, Harper avoided being thrown for a huge loss and ran into the end zone from 40 yards out to give the Roadrunners breathing room on their way to a 46-22 win at Sam Anderson

On the key third-and-three play at the Halls' 25 yardline, Harper was chased back to near the 40, where he broke loose from wouldbe tacklers, got going in the right direction and battled his way across the goal

"The score was getting close and I had to do something," said Harper, a 6-3, 195-pound junior. "When I need to, I feel I can get out of the pocket and scramble a little bit."

On the ensuing 2-point conversion, Harper dropped back again, saw an open field to his left, tucked it and ran it in to give Austin-East a 16-point command.

A-E defensive back Xavier Ligon delivered the knockout punch on Halls' next possession with a 58-yard interception return to the 2. It was the Roadrunners' third big defensive play of the game and running back Gedarian Mobley cashed in with 5:47 left.

The win lifted Austin-East to 2-0 and the public address announcer at George "Dusty" Lennon Stadium often said during the game that "the winning tradition has returned." The Roadrunners will play

Memories

One of the most iconic and intriguing works of modern art is Salvador Dali's The Persistence of Memory. You may remember Dali's visionary landscape of his native Catalonia festooned with melting clocks. One art critic described the surrealistic landscape as dreamlike, whereupon awaking the contents of the dream melts away. Everyone north of fifty has lapses of memory, where content or names just can't be recalled, and seem to have melted away. Actually, the memories are there, but they've been "misplaced," like your car keys. I think of my memory like a large library, and when I look for a "book" or a memory I have to search the archives. The problem is my librarian (search engine) is slow in computer terms and has a lot of shelves to search. I used to be able to know lots of

phone numbers, but this was when most began with 588, 577 or the "exotic" 687 (which I suspected was from Ooltewah). When I get a call these days, I'm clueless of the caller's

Many patients express to me their fears that memory lapses are due to dementia. I once read a paper which noted that intellectual quickness peaks when we're about twenty-five years old. This might explain why many scientific advances originate in twenty-somethings. An example is Einstein's Theory of Relativity, imagined one afternoon as he sat by a roadside intersection. However, lest you despair, the learned experiences from a lifetime more than make up the difference of losses in cognitive quickness. I can testify that I was a fact-filled fool when I was twenty-four. I'm much wiser now even though I'm challenged by phone numbers.

As an internist and geriatrician I have evaluated hundreds, if not thousands, of patients with memory loss or dementia. While it is true that virtually all patients with Alzheimer's disease have memory loss, lots of patients have memory issues in the absence of dementia. A crucial point is that Alzheimer's disease affects other areas of function besides memory. Losses in executive functioning are integral in the diagnosis of dementia. These include difficulties in problem solving, planning, self-control and decision making. Additionally, as dementia advances patients may be unaware of their problems, while loved ones see issues of progressive memory loss and impaired functioning. A patient once came to see me with his wife and said, "Doc, I'm fine. I don't know why I'm here." All the while his wife was shaking her head and rolling her eyes at his protestations. A recent posting on Facebook caught my eye. Someone had compiled a list of twenty-five places everyone should visit before they die. I had experienced eleven of those twenty-five places, though I took issue with the list which did not include Crater Lake or rafting the Colorado River through the Grand Canyon.

I believe travel broadens the mind, filling it with memories that can be replayed for a lifetime. A now departed relative also believed in travel. In her later years, as she struggled with dementia, she tragically told her travel companions to pay attention to help her remember what she saw.

A recent article in JAMA addressed the concept of cognitive aging, defined as a gradual and highly variable decline in reaction time, thinking and memory which occur over a lifetime. Cognitive aging is not a disease, nor is it a harbinger of dementia like Alzheimer's disease. The brain ages just like every other part of the body, and some people maintain their physical or cognitive capabilities better than others. We recently attended the Greensboro Open golf tournament and watched fifty-one year old Davis Love III best other, younger golfers including Tiger Woods. Apparently, there's hope for my golf game because I learned that Mr. Love now drives the golf ball even farther than he did as a younger

Studies show that the brains of animals age, just as human brains age. In normal aging it is thought that the ten billion neurons of the human brain don't die off as they do in Alzheimer's disease. Animal studies show that neural connections diminish in aged brains. Older human brains have been shown to have diminished levels of the neurotransmitter ACh (acetylcholine). This protein enables neurons to communicate with each other, which collectively we call thinking. We want our neurons to stay connected! Older brains are more sensitive to medications that inhibit already diminished ACh production. On a regular basis I advise older people to avoid agents like Benadryl which diminishes ACh production and can cause confusion - and difficulty urinating. One of the great concerns of older people is the loss of independence. We've all seen older drivers whose reaction times are slower. However, in defense of older drivers, they usually don't drive fast like teenagers, and there is less probability they are on a cell phone or texting. Older persons may also be at increased risk of fraud, though watching "man on the street" interviews, I'm not very impressed by the disconnected and "uninformed" millennials so often misinformed by the New York Times and other scurrilous news media.

We all want to maintain our physical and cognitive functional status. Therefore, it is imperative to do what we can to promote health. Mini-stokes cause repetitive injury to the brain. These can be lessened by controlling blood pressure and diabetes, and avoiding smoking. Furthermore, being physically active maintains muscle tone and flexibility, and lessens falls. Current science also supports the role of "brain exercises." Apparently, the notion of "use it or lose it" applies to our brains as well.

There are a number of brain exercises available on the Internet that are superior to just working crossword puzzles. However, just interactive dialogue has been shown to stimulate more areas of the brain than any other activity. As it turns out, simple conversation with other human beings is a better brain tonic than just watching TV, the aptly named "idiot box."

Treating Others like Jesus Would

Something that disturbs me is when I hear people outside the kingdom of God say that Christians hate people. The truth is. there are some "so called" Christians that do hate people." I say "so called" because a true follower of Jesus doesn't hate sinners.

We don't like what they do or how they act, but we don't hate.

There is a story recorded in John's Gospel that shows how Jesus treated sinners. He meets a woman caught in the very act of adultery. What does Jesus

By Mark Brackney, Minister of the Arlington Church of Christ

her. Jesus stands up rocks and kill her. Then around it. Jesus says something to this woman. "I don't condemn you - go and leave your life of sin" (8:11). Jesus offers her compassion - I don't tell her? Jesus doesn't yell at her or berate

condemn you. And Jesus offers her conviction - go and leave your life of sin. A much different Jesus is often presented today.

We have major shifts in what people believe in our society. In the midst of shifting beliefs, we are called to be people of conviction. Belief is acceptance of truth, but conviction is more. It to the religious bullies is a demonstration of the firmly who are ready to throw held belief. We base our life

> So how do you know if you have a belief or is it a conviction? When the going gets tough, when you are challenged, you find out if you have a conviction or a belief. Howard Hendriks said a conviction is something you will die for while a belief is something you > argue about. We are called to be convicted and compassionate. Peter calls people to conviction even if it leads to suffering (I Peter 1:6-7). But there is also a call to compassion. We can't have an "us versus them" in our approach. We are called to love everyone. As Christians, we are to be known by those outside Christ more by our love than our convictions. There is a problem when we are known more by our convictions than our love. This doesn't mean we set aside our convictions. But it does mean we should be known by our love (John 13:34-35). Only when others see our love will they be ready to hear and respect our convictions.

What if instead of marching around with signs and megaphones about God's judgment coming and how He hates sin, we tried loving people and showing kindness and generosity? When people encounter our compassion, they will start to care about our convictions. If people see our convictions but don't see our compassion, they will be pushed away. How do we show conviction and compassion at the same time? It's not always easy. One person calls this messy grace. It is not one or the other, it is both compassion and conviction as Jesus molded for us.
