Bud Armstrong - 'The People's Lawyer'

By Steve Hunley

Less and less it seems people in public office can identify with the average person; people who go to work every day, work hard to put food on the table, buy braces for their kids and understand the value of a dollar. Richard "Bud" Armstrong is one of the few officeholders who knows exactly what it is like to come from humble beginnings. Bud Armstrong is Knox County's Law Director and has been selected by his peers as President-elect of the Tennessee County Attorneys' Association, an association comprised of the law directors from Tennessee's ninety-five counties. Some of the law directors across the state are elected and some are appointed, but Bud Armstrong, currently serving as a board member, was selected to serve all of them as their association president Bud Armstrong was accepted beginning in May.

"I have been impressed with Bud's down-to-earth persona and his ability to relate to people," said Jon Cooper, Director of Law for Metro Davidson County,

"I also think his years of service as an environmental scientist with TVA enables him to analyze legal issues from a different perspective. We look forward to Bud serving as President of the Tennessee County Attorneys' Association."

Bud Armstrong's multifaceted experience likely was the result of his upbringing and a lifelong desire not only to better himself, but a passion for learning. Born in the Skaggston community, Bud attended Skaggston Elementary School and graduated from Carter High School. Bud received a Bachelor of Arts degree in Quantitative Economic Geography and a Master of Sciences degree in Curriculum and Instruction from the University of Tennessee. Most folks would have been satisfied to stop there, but second career. to the prestigious Columbia University in New York City where he earned a doctoral degree in education. Ground broken for new middle schools

A large turnout of Knox County officials, including Knox County Mayor Tim Burchett, School Board Chairman Doug Harris, Superintendent Jim McIntyre, School Board Members Mike McMillan and Terry Hill, Commission Chair Dave Wright and 6th District Commissioner Brad Anders participate in ground breaking ceremonies for the new Gibbs Middle School (top) and Hardin Valley Middle School (bottom) this past Friday.

By Mike Steelv steelym@knoxfocus.com

The Gibbs and Hardin Valley communities had reason to celebrate Friday as they each took one step closer to the construction of their new middle schools.

As groundbreaking was about to take place Friday morning at the site of the future Gibbs Middle School, several elected officials spoke to the crowd gathered. One of the speakers was Mike McMillan, the school board member who has been working on a middle school there for years.

"One morning I was sitting on the back porch drinking coffee and the phone rang. I realized it was Dr. McIntyre and he had just had some conversation with the Mayor. I knew they had been working a little bit on it," said McMillan.

"I could sense the excitement in his voice. He said there were some minor things still to be worked out and we went over the major things and I said, 'I think it's great, can we pass it before the board?" McMillan said.

"He said, 'Yes, I think we can."

"When he said that I knew we were off and running," McMillian said, adding, "And it had a real shot."

Lots of thanks were given by all the speakers and McMillan specifically thanked Knox County School Board Chairman Doug Harris. "Without Doug's commitment to it we would not be standing here today," he said.

Harris said the Gibbs community is a "champion of education" and called McMillan "your favorite son" before the crowd that included many residents from that area.

Mayor Tim Burchett said the groundbreaking was "an exciting day and the result of a lot of hard work by a lot of great people." He thanked Dr. McIntyre, Commission Chairman Dave Wright, and school board members Terry Hill and Mike McMillan.

"From day one there's been a couple of things he was interested in," Burchett said of Wright, "and this is one of them." He thanked the school board and the commission for their patience and mentioned the efforts of his staff, specifically, Chris Caldwell and Hugh Holt, and many others who put in years of effort in getting the future schools.

"Classroom teachers and parents make the biggest difference in students' lives more so than any of us do," Burchett said.

Waiver Granted for TNReady Test Scores

Last week Gov. Bill Haslam and Commissioner of Education Candice McQueen announced that in light of difficulties with the MIST platform for the online TNReady test, they are proposing that TNReady data not be included in this year's teacher evaluations. Knox County Board of

"Regardless of the test medium, TNReady will measure skills that the real world will require of our students."

The governor will work with the General Assembly on specific language and a plan to move the proposal through the legislative process. The state has already granted waivers for test scores to not be included in student grades this year.

School Board Selects Terry Hill to Lead Interim Superintendent Search

During a special called meeting prior to last weeks' February mid-month workshop, the School Board defined the process and schedule for the search. Lynn Fugate made a motion for BOE member Terry Hill to lead the process.

Hill accepted the challenge, saying, "If the board chooses to have one person and I'm that person, I'd be happy to serve in that capacity," but added, "My feelings will not be one bit hurt of the Board wants to go in another direction." She was approved unanimously.

The Board agreed to accept names of potential candidates for consideration through March 7. Hill will conduct interviews through March, and will then make a recommendation for the Board to consider at the April 4 work session, and vote on April 6.

The Board also discussed preferred qualifications for saying they thought familiarity with the district's schools and leadership teams, particularly principals, was important. At the top of Amber Rountree's list was "background in education - preferably with teaching experience in K-12." She included fiscal experience and excellent communication skills as qualities she would like to see. Mike McMillan asked if previous administrative experience was a requirement. Fugate said she didn't want to set criteria that might eliminate good people otherwise, but that administrative experience could be "preferable but not required."

Tracie Sanger said familiarity with the budget, the staff, the schools, and a "good relationship with the mayor" are important to "help us continue to move forward."

Initial Projections for 2016-2017 KCS Budget

Chris Caldwell, Director of Finance for Knox County, presented early projections for the FY 2017 KCS budget at the February Board's midmonth workshop. Caldwell gave a conservative estimate of $451M, which represents an increase of about 3%.

KCS budget represents a combination and BEP funding. Caldwell said sales tax revenues are up about $5M, to a total of $143M, and property tax receipts also show an increase this year of about $1.6M, to $96.8M. The state's initial estimate for Knox County BEP funding is $13.2M, but at this time his department is using a more conservative figure of $11.54M.

BEP funding is often subject to variations from the initial projections. "We'll get our first estimate from the state in April, then we'll get another one in May, one in June, one in July, and our final one in August," said

Dr. McIntyre presented the preliminary FY 2017 Capital Improvement Plan. The plan includes physical plant upgrades; roofs and HVAC upgrades; foundation stabilization; BEP growth (modular classrooms); upgrades; security accessibility; continuing projects for additions and renovations at Pond Gap Elementary School; Hardin Valley and Gibbs Middle Schools; and significant additions and renovations to Powell High School.

The proposed FY 2017 Capital Improvement Plan budget is approximately $62,250,000, of which $49,000,000 is projected for construction of the new Hardin Valley and Gibbs Middle Schools. In addition, the County will contribute $9,000,000 towards the Gibbs Middle School project, per the MOU passed last year.

www.knoxfocus.com Critical Legal Issues Should Take Precedence

By Sally Absher sallyabsher@knoxfocus.com

At last week's Board of Education meeting, Karen Carson again admonished the Law Department for not having provided the full legal opinion requested on January 6 related to the 2003 Order of Compromise. Many people are curious why the school board sent the Law Department on this errand to begin with. There have been at least four legal opinions issued in the past three years on this document, which resulted from the 2001 lawsuit against the County.

And just like in the 2001 lawsuit, school board members Carson, Sanger, Harris, Deathridge, and Fugate don't like the fact that the Board can't hire its own attorney. Or more specifically, the Board can't hire an attorney who will let them do what they want, and the heck with the Knox County Charter and those pesky T.C.A. statutes.

In a nutshell, then Superintendent Lindsey didn't like Law Director-Moyer's opinion to a similar question, and filed suit in October of 2001 against the Knox County Commission, Commissioners individually, the County Mayor, the County Trustee and the County Law Director.

Chancellor Bell held that the charter of Knox County [passed by vote of its citizens and which adopted and incorporated the private act creating an elected law director] constituted an opt out of T.C.A. § 49-2-203(b)(5).

But the Board filed an appeal, joined by the TN School Boards Association. Prior to the conclusion of proceedings, the school board approached the Knox County defendants about avoiding an appellate court decision. Thus was born the "Order of Compromise." This settlement cost the taxpayers another $283,000.

Absent the specific prerequisites set out in the Order of Compromise, Chancellor Bell's holding that Knox County had opted out of the provisions of the statute is still in force and effect. The issue as to the right of the board to hire an additional attorney is res judicata - once adjudicated, is final and may not be re-litigated.

Most of the current school board mem-The Board sought a bers attended the 2014 Board Retreat, where Chuck Cagle, known as school board's perceived the "School Boards' Attorattorney under T.C.A. § 70 school boards across the state) stated that the issue has been litigated and the Order of Compromise governs the issue of the hiring of an attorney.

School board member Traci Sanger accused the Law Director of playing politics, and then went so far as to say Armstrong was being insubordinate because he had not delivered the opinion in a timely manner.

Deputy Law Director David Buuck explained that the Law Department has been extremely busy with a number of more pressing issues including, specific to the school system, 16 lawsuits stemming from the December 2014 bus wreck that killed two students and a teacher's aide, two additional bus wrecks since that time, and the OCR complaint filed by the local NAACP.

It is interesting that the Law Director's opponent in the County Primary election works for the firm that brought the 2001 lawsuit against the County. It is also interesting that Karen Carson contributed $500 from her failed Karen Carson for State House campaign account to Armstrong's opponent.

It seems like some school board members want a law director to do whatever they want, when and how they want it, regardless of the legal ramifications.

the distinction of Armstrong having been chosen to lead the Tennessee County Attorneys' Association.

"It is quite an honor for any county attorney to lead our statewide organization," McFarland said. "Bud came on board with our Board of Directors and has done an outstanding job." Managing lawyers is nothing new for Armstrong. For more than thirty-five years Bud Armstrong has managed attorneys in one capacity or another. During his first term as Knox County Law Director, Bud carefully put together a group of attorneys noted for professionalism as well as providing excellent representation for Knox County. The Law Director has a wide range of responsibilities, representing county officeholders, legislative bodies and entities. Yet when asked about his clients, Bud Armstrong invariably answers, "Ultimately, we represent the taxpayers of Knox County. Every dollar saved in any way, is a dollar saved for the taxpayers." Former County Commissioner John Mills, something of a legend in Knox County, readily pointed out that serving as Law Director is a complicated and oftentimes difficult job. "Anybody who tells you the Law Director can stop folks from bickering is selling something you don't want to buy," Mills said with a laugh. "Can the Law Director stop the county commission and the school board from fussing and fighting? Shoot, no! Can the Law Director stop county commissioners from County taxpayers more than fighting with each other? No, absolutely not. And that isn't the Law Director's role."

Mills, who served with five different law directors during his time on county commission, said, "Bud Armstong is by far

"Bud has been quite fair and impartial," Mills continued. "It's a very difficult job, but he's done it well."

Yet Bud Armstrong's experience and careful management have paid dividends for the clients he values most-taxpayers. Under Armstrong's stewardship, Knox County's legal settlements and payouts are down across the board; the Law Department has saved approximately $2.5 million by winning nuisance cases instead of simply settling the cases out of court. Bud Armstrong's refusal to settle cases has upset some local lawyers, as they rely on such cases for a living.

Armstrong's office also began collecting the delinquent taxes for Knox County. In the past, the Delinquent Tax Attorney's post was performed outside of the Law Director's office and was one of the prime political patronage plums in Knox County government for decades. The outside Delinquent Tax Attorney earned huge fees and qualified for a county pension, all for little more effort than signing his name. In addition, Armstrong's decision to collect back taxes in his department has saved $200,000 a year for taxpayers. Using the same approach, Armstrong created an in-house Worker's Compensation the school board members or Department, which saves Knox $100,000 annually. Perhaps most irritating of all, especially to some local lawyers, was Armstrong's decision to stop farming out legal work and do the work in-house, saving taxpayers more than $1 million. Armstrong's opponent is a member of a law firm once headed by a delinquent tax attorney; that same firm was frequently hired in the past by previous Law Directors for legal work. Bud Armstrong readily acknowledges his decisions were not uniformly popular, especially with attorneys pitched off the gravy train. "That didn't make my opponent happy," Armstrong said, "but it was the right thing to do for the people of Knox County and the Armstrong has insisted the Knox County schools and the superintendent be accountable, a notion which has infuriated some Board of Education members. Bud Armstrong, when asked, merely shrugged and replied, "Everybody has to follow the law. you, me, board of education members, and the superintendent, too. it applies to everybody and nobody is

Armstrong admits the budget for his office has increased slightly, but the net savings to the taxpayers and streamlining multiple processes has been efficient and more than cost effective.

"You know, some folks say I am 'The People's Lawyer'," Armstrong remarked, "and to me there's just not a greater compliment. I am content to be just that, the people's lawyer."

Alice Bell Neighborhood Hears Commission, School Board Candidates

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

Candidates for Knox County Commission Districts 1 and 2 spoke to the Alice Bell-Spring Hill Neighborhood Association last week; each candidate gave a brief statement and then visited with local residents after the meeting.

The association meeting took place at the Alice Bell Baptist Church and, despite the rain and ice, drew a sizable crowd. Neighborhood president Ronnie Collins opened the meeting by bringing the audience up to date on positive local issues including the status of signs for exits at Knoxville Center

Mall, a new store there, and a new mall manager starting in March.

Collins said the Alice Bell - Spring Hill neighborhood is split between the First and Second Districts and that's why candidates for both areas were invited. Much of the night's discussion revolved around Knoxville Center Mall and hopes for the future at that long suffering shopping com-

The two school board candidates, Jennifer Owen and Grant Standefer, addressed the meeting briefly and, with the commission candidates, stayed after the meeting to chat with residents.

Jennifer Owen urged the audience to get involved with the Adult Education classes at Knoxville Center Mall and help students work on their GED certificates. She also talked about teaching school in Knox County for 18 years before resigning last year. "Public schools are big business-think about what big money is doing and con-

Grant Standefer said he was a pastor for 24 years and works with the Compassion Coalition.

"Public education is the root" he said, adding that he works with people "on the margin" and that 16.5% of Knox County's population lives below the poverty line.

Sidewalks in all new subdivisions?

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

While the Metropolitan Planning Commission staff and director are busily working on updating zoning regulations there's one part of those future regulations that the MPC itself may not

There's increasing demand by some people and commission staff to require sidewalks be included in any new subdivision plans in the county. Judging from the reaction recently by the MPC's appointed citizens there are some real concerns about doing so.

Engineering Solutions' concept plan for the development of a 16.5-acre wedge of land between Solway Road and Pellissippi Parkway that came before the MPC earlier this month for approval. Developer Scott Davis appeared to champion the that there are no clear sidewalk specifications in the county rules.

"We go through this every single time," Davis said. He added that he has no problem with adding sidewalks if there "was a rational reason" but explained that the nearest sidewalk in the area is about a mile away. He also questioned the requirement in the staff recommendation that the sidewalk be built "on the front end" meaning as the roads Roth said he was in favor are built in the planned 58 lot development.

Several commissioners and the staff spoke on the issue. Tom Brechko of the planning staff said that the sidewalks should be put in at the same time as the streets are built. Davis said that the same-time construction has never been required of developers.

Growth leading to parking problems

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

Downtown and North Knoxville are growing quickly. People are moving into restored buildings for stores and apartments, new businesses are coming, established businesses are relocating downtown and the only real problem as the that part of Knoxville booms is where to park.

The parking situation came up, again, at Thursday's meeting of the Knoxville Board of Zoning Appeal. Oddly enough that board has nothing to do with regulating parking but lots to do with the number of parking spaces permitted. Current regulations say that a business in a Commercial (C-3) Zone should have a minimum of 55 parking spaces available. During the meeting, architect John Sanders of Sanders Pace Architecture appeared and asked the board to reduce the number of spaces for a two-story building at 200 Jennings Avenue down to zero.

Sanders told the board that The Tomato Head Company has bought the building, which is located across the street from the National Cemetery, and wants to relocate Flour Head Bakery there from its current location on Middlebrook. The craft bakery supplies bread to its parent company, The Tomato Head, and to various other clients in the area. He said plans are to use the second story for the bakery and there are no plans yet for use of the first floor. New board member David

H. Dupree asked Sanders if the use of the building might block the entrance to the nearby graveyard and Sanders assured him it would not. The location of the building is beside another street, Stone Street, that runs west and loops back into Tyson, which runs northwest to Jennings Avenue and the bakery would be near the corner at 200 Jennings. But Stone Street has been and is used by other businesses and serves as a delivery route for trucks and vans to the back of those stores.

Dick Coffee of Dixie Kitchen Distributors on Broadway uses Stone Street and appeared before the Board of Zoning Appeals to speak against the parking reductions. Coffee said Dixie Kitchen has a 30-year history there, 25 employees, and owns 4 buildings at the location.

Coffee said parking is a huge problem in that growing section of town and trucks can't make the turn onto Stone often because of the cars that park along the street. Many drivers sometimes park in the Dixie Kitchen lot as well to walk to nearby coffee shops or other businesses.

He said cars are often double parked and he has called on the city for help but received little response.

"You've got a lot of businesses opening up around there and it's not right to shut me down." he said.

"I'd like to see No Parking signs when you come off Broadway," he said.

"We recognize the problem," said board chairman Don Horton, adding, "Good things are happening there but maybe there should be some city enforcement there."

Sanders said that truck delivering to the Flour Head Bakery "would be going the other way" and not interfere with Dixie Kitchen

Ann Wallace, Deputy Director of Redevelopment, joined the discussion and described the problem with parking in Knoxville by saying the city is "a victim of our own success."

"I recognize there is a challenge and a conflict," she said.

Wallace said that better policing of illegal parkers in that area is needed and added, "We're committing to that today. " She also said she recognizes that there are no parking lots or parking garages in the area of those businesses. Sanders was asked if the matter should be postponed but he said it should not because of issues with the building that must be solved. Board member Daniel Odle said the parking situation there is a policing problem and not a BZA issue. Horton said the BZA has no authority about the policing issue. The request for the reduction in parking spaces was granted. In another matter the BZA voted to allow a business sign to be located in an 8-foot setback for Harley Davis of Knoxville on Clinton Highway. They also voted to permit parking to be reduced from 247 spaces to 10 spaces at 835 North Central, which may be just lost his second bid for the Republican presidential nomination at the Philadelphia convention in 1948. Worse still, Taft had lost to his bitter rival, New York Governor Thomas E. Dewey. The two men didn't particularly like one another and it seemed a certainty that Thomas E. Dewey would be the next President of the United States. Dewey's dislike of Taft was so intense, the senator once told a reporter, "I don't understand why he hates me so."

Harry Truman, grudgingly nominated by his fellow Democrats, made a surprise announcement in the course of his acceptance speech. He was calling the Congress back into a special session. Truman explained that the Republicans had defined their party platform and he was giving them the means to pass their program, if they meant it. After all, both the House and the Senate held Republican majorities. Bob Taft was the defacto leader of the Republicans in the Senate and he was disgusted by Truman's special "Turnip Day" session. The Ohioan considered it a political trick, unworthy of serious consideration. Republican National Chairman Hugh legislation, but the senator snapped, "We aren't going to give that fellow anything."

Not only did Harry Truman win the presidential election, the Democrats captured control of both the House and Senate. The GOP lost nine Senate seats. The debacle in the House was not much better. Truman's victory created an even bigger divide inside the Republican Party, as many Dewey supporters blamed Taft's intransigence for the governor's defeat. Taft blamed Dewey personally for the New York governor's bland and uninspiring campaign. They were both

The bill passed both the House and the Senate and even after being vetoed Taft - Hartley survived when Congress overrode Truman's veto. Senator Taft had to face the voters once again in 1950 and had been deeply embarrassed by having almost lost his 1944 reelection campaign. Still, organized labor sought to beat Taft and waged such a vitriolic campaign it may well have backfired. Governor Frank Lausche, nominally a Democrat and perhaps the most popular politician in Ohio, pointedly refused to endorse Ferguson's candidacy. The few statements Governor Lausche did make during the campaign seemed favorable to Bob Taft.

Senator Taft beat Joe Ferguson badly, winning by more than 430,000 votes. His victory was impressive 2.1 million. Bob Taft aided and he became the Scott tried to urge Taft Tennessee's Senator frontrunner for the 1952 Republican nomination for president.

That was change.

The Taft and Eisenhower delegates feuded over contested delegations, largely from the South where the Republican Party barely existed. The Eisenhower supporters knew they had to successfully challenge Taft delegates from Texas, Louisiana, and Georgia. The Republican apparatus in those states, what little there was, fell under the control of minor party bosses who had been shocked when new Republicans had appeared at caucus meetings, precisely to support General Eisenhower. The bosses, never having seen many of the participants before, doubted their Republicanism and excluded them from the process. Tombras approved for TIF for KUB Building

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

The former Knoxville Utilities Board Building on Gay Street, empty for about 16 years, may get a new owner and tenant thanks to action by the Knox County Commission and the Knoxville City Council Tuesday.

The Tombras Group, a national advertising agency with four locations around the nation and currently headquartered at 630 Concord Street, was granted a 20-year tax increment financing (TIF) agreement by both jurisdictions so that they may move to the former KUB building at 620 and 626 South Gay Street.

She said the agreement would boost both the city and county taxes on the property.

While the majority of the county commission praised the idea of restoring a blighted building only Commissioner Ed Brantley opposed the resolution granting a tax break. Brantley said the county would be "giving these guys a gift" and said he wanted to bring outside businesses those men who can build things. To be a craftsman who takes a piece of wood and creates a beautiful piece of furniture is a dream I've long held. The truth of the matter, however, is that I am less than capable when it comes to designing things and then constructing them. In fact, I've always found using tools dif-

I never learned how to do things with tools. Daddy never had the time to teach us, and even if he had, he wouldn't do it. He believed that things should be done correctly, and that required calling in a professional. The only successful things I ever built was a teepee from pine branches and a small enclosure made with small pine tree trunks. Jim, Bill Burns, and I spent several afternoons working on those projects. They eventually collapsed as the limbs lost their needles and the logs rotted.

I worked construction one summer with a man who'd been my boss at the Holiday Inn the year before. He tirelessly worked to teach me how to do things, but I wasn't crazy about the lessons. On one occasion, he sent me up a ladder to nail soffit boards to rafters. I am fearful of heights, so the job was scary from the very beginning. Once up on the ladder, I tried to drive nails into the boards, but they bounced and fell to the ground with every hammer blow. It didn't help that I was nailing these things above my head.

After finally driving the nails, Frank told me to do the next board. I began coming down when he said, "Stay where you are." Then he told me pull the ladder back and to set it several inches to the right. I told him I was afraid that the ladder would fall. At that point, Frank begins shaking the ladder until I do as he instructed.

On another occasion, Frank sent me to nail board on a flat roof because I was left handed and could reach it. I carefully maneuvered to the spot and began kneeling on a rafter to get into position. My feet slipped, and just like Clark Griswold, I crashed through the ceiling stuck. Frank came to my aid, all the while sprinkling his laughter with profanities. One summer I helped Uncle

In recent years, I've built a few things, but they are what I call "primitive." That best describes things that are just a tad off measurementwise, even though I've measured multiple times and cut once. My cuts with a saw are never straight, something I blame being left-handed and using a right-handed saw. I use twice as many nails and continue to add wood until pieces seem sturdy enough to hold a glass of tea or a hardback book. They weigh

Last month, I took a stab at building a drying rack. As usual, pieces didn't match exactly. One piece warped so that the thing won't close completely. It looks okay, and I enjoyed the work. Nailing the side boards, I managed to shoot one into my finger, even after I'd checked to make sure my hand was out of range from the nail gun. I also made a frame from wood from a scrapped pallet. It turned out well.

I plan to continue to work with wood and tools. Say a prayer for me that I don't shoot more nails into body parts. Also, cross your fingers that I might build quality piece of furniture before I die.

In other news, there is a specific piece of legislation that I would like to turn your attention to this week. The bill number is HB 1206, and it will have a huge impact on those affected by Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD). As proposed, HB 1206 will replace the current autism spectrum disorder task force with the Tennessee Council on ASD. The council will establish a long term plan for a system of care for individuals with ASD and their families, while making recommendations and providing leadership in program developments like health care, education, and other adult and adolescent services. At the head of every department of the council, there will be a specialized commissioner appointed, and the governor will appoint the chair of the council. I believe this to be a good bill due to the fact that it will give this group of people and their families the oversight and the political voice that they need. I would

One last thing I would like to mention is the schedule for my 2016 Town Hall meetings. Two dates that are important to remember are Friday, February 26, and Saturday, February 27. On the 26th, the meeting will be held at Corryton Sr. Community Center, 9331 Davis Dr. Corryton-37721, from 5:30-7 p.m. The meeting for the 27th will be at Carter Community Library, 9036 Asheville Highway, from 3:00-5:00 p.m. I hope you can stop by to have a conversation so we can discuss constituent issues and my future plans. I will be bringing current and past Blue Books for folks who would like to have one. We are currently finalizing a time, date and place in the South Knoxville area for a town hall meeting. Once all of this is confirmed we will be able to provide information on those dates for you all.

Falcons work overtime to edge Alcoa 78-76

By Ken Lay

Fulton High School boys basketball coach Jody Wright wasn't surprised that his Falcons had to work a little overtime in their regular-season finale Tuesday night.

"This game was kind of what I expected and I wasn't expecting a blowout at all," Wright said after Fulton notched a 78-76 victory over Alcoa at Jody Wright Arena. "I knew that we were going to have to work for everything and I knew that this was going to be a hard-fought game."

The Falcons longtime coach was right as the Tornadoes started fast and opened a 21-10 lead when Tykee Ogle knocked down a shot with 1 minute, 17 seconds remaining in the first quarter.

He scored 21 points in the second half and overtime. He had nine of Fulton's points in the extra session but missed a pair of free throws that might've ended the game in regulation.

"He made some big shots," Wright said of Williams. "But he missed those free throws at the end of regulation. "If he would've made those, we wouldn't have had to go to overtime."

A giant win and championship for Cedar Bluff girls

Maddie Norris lived up to her team's nickname in the finals of the Knox County Middle School girls basketball tournament.

The Cedar Bluff post player came up big in the final minute of play as the Lady Giants posted a 41-39 championship win over top-seeded Halls last Tuesday night at Thomas L. Duff Memorial Gymnasium in Karns.

Bulldogs persevere to earn regional berth

To call Bearden High School's basketball season tumultuous would be an understatement.

The Bulldogs, however, won the game they had to win to keep their season alive when they knocked off host West High School 57-49 in the quarterfinals of the District 4-AAA Boys Basketball Tournament Thursday night.

"We all played well tonight," said Bearden coach Mark Blevins. "We get to play another game."

The Bulldogs actually assured themselves three more games with Thursday night's victory. Bearden, which qualified for the Region 2-AAA Tournament played rival Farragut Friday in the district semifinals (but results were not available at press time).

The Bulldogs and Admirals have qualified for the region tournament along with Heritage and Maryville. Blount County's Rebels and Farragut each qualified during the regular season while Bearden and Heritage (which beat Hardin Valley in first game of the Thursday double header) qualified late last week.

By Ken Lay

Hardin Valley Academy's boys basketball team saw its season come to an abrupt end Thursday

The fourth-seeded Hawks dropped a 77-58 decision to Heritage in the District 4-AAAA Quarterfinals at West High School.

It was a tough loss for Hardin Valley in a rollercoaster season but junior Aaron Dykes is ready to turn the page and move on and prepare for next season.

"Those are the top three seeds and we split with them. Now, it's time to get back to work. It's time to get back in the weight room and it's time to get back in the gym. It's time to get back in there and start getting some shots up. It just wasn't our night tonight and

The Hawks and the fifthseeded Mountaineers played a virtually even first half with Heritage holding a 34-30 edge at the break.

During the opening 16 minutes, Heritage made seven 3-pointers but the Hawks answered every run by the Mountaineers.

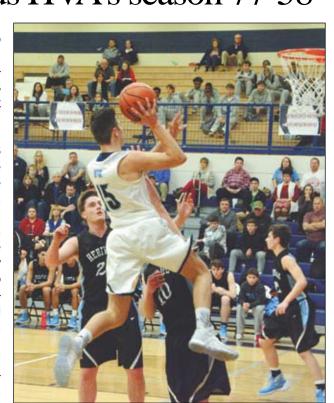

The second half was a different story. Heritage opened a 52-42 lead by halftime as it continued to knock down shots at a siz-"Nobody expected us zling pace. HVA went cold quarter.

"They played well and they're playing their basketball," Hawks coach Keith Galloway said. "They kept hitting shots and we weren't scoring and we just couldn't keep up with them."

Calvin Keeble scored a game-high 27 points and nailed six shots from beyond the 3-point arc.

"Keeble just killed us," Galloway said.

But Heritage's senior sharp-shooting guard had plenty of help from his supporting cast.

game at 48 when she hit a shot with 2:50 left. From there, the Lady Hawks dominated things. They closed the game on a 14-0 run and 10 consecutive free throws down the stretch. The surge started when Bekah Hampton grabbed an offensive rebound and promptly scored to make the score 50-48 with 1:57.

From there the Lady Hawks hit the offensive boards and forced Farragut to commit turnovers.

At press time, Hardin Valley still had hopes of winning a district tournament title, but Wednesday, the Lady Hawks claimed a victory that will send them to the Region 2-AAA Tournament for the second time in school history. HVA last made the regional four years ago when it won a District 3-AAA Championship.

"This is a big deal for our program," Lady Hawks coach Jennifer Galloway said. "This district is so tough. All you have to do is look at how close the games in the district tournament have been.

"Getting out of this district, no matter where you get seeded, is a huge honor. Farragut is a great team and they have a great program."

Hardin Valley boasted a balanced scoring attack. Sophomore Lizzie Davis led the way with 13 points. Maddie Christian added 12. Paige Gentry and Abbey Cornelius finished with eight points each. Senior Maddie Massey scored seven points and will make a trip to the Region 2-AAA Tournament for the first time as a senior.

Lady Falcons notch comeback win over Alcoa

Fulton High School's girls basketball team had to dig itself out of an enormous hole Tuesday night.

The Lady Falcons overcame a double-figure halftime deficit to storm back and nab a 51-49 victory over Alcoa on Senior Night at Jody Wright Arena.

"I thought we did a lot of good things in the first half but they came out here and they shot the lights out," Fulton coach John Fisher said. "We knew that they had a couple of players who could shoot, but then they had some others that came out and hit some threes."

The Lady Tornadoes made eight 3-point shots in the contest, including six in the first half and Alcoa's outside shooting tear enabled the visitors to open a 31-19 lead by halftime.

The Lady Falcons had trouble manufacturing offense before halftime but they found their shooting touch after Fulton erupted in the third quarter and finally took its first lead of the contest when Janae Fuqua's basket made the score 33-31 with 3 minutes, 42 seconds remaining in the third quarter.

When the dust had settled, the Lady Falcons outscored the Lady Tornadoes 24-7 in the third stanza and opened a modest 43-38 advantage heading into the final frame.

Alcoa, the District 4-AA Champion, didn't go quietly. The Lady Tornadoes scored the first eight points of the final quarter and took a 46-43 lead when Abby Cupp was fouled on a successful field goal and made the subsequent free throw with 6:08 remaining in the game.

The game was a see-saw battle with the Lady Falcons going ahead for good when KeKe McKinney made a free throw with 1:36 to play to put her squad up 48-47. Lay Lay Manning added a pair of foul shots with 31.6

seconds left to give the Lady Falcons a 50-47 advan-"KeKe gives us all she has every night and Lay Lay Man-

Marjorie Butler, Georgia point guard, will have final 'homecoming' Sunday

By Steve Williams

In a way, when the University of Georgia women's basketball team plays the Tennessee Lady Vols in Knoxville this coming Sunday afternoon, Marjorie Butler will have come full circle.

Webb School in Knoxville, is the starting senior point guard for Georgia and will be playing her final regular season game in her hometown.

Butler, a product of Shelley Collier, Butler's high school coach, will be at Thompson-Boling Arena for the occasion.

"Yes, I will be there for Marjorie," said Coach Collier via e-mail last week. "She is truly very special! I can't say enough about her!

"Marjorie's work ethic has always been off the charts in the classroom and on the court! She is a very dedicated and driven person! We are so proud of Marjorie, myself and the entire Webb School community!

"She has already been accepted into several med schools," added Collier, a former Lady Vol point guard. "As far as her basketball career, she has overcome adversity time and time again with injuries, and has been a great example for others to see the perseverance she has had to stay with it. She is a great example of what a student-athlete should look like."

Sunday's game will start at 1 p.m.

Butler scored 12 points, collected five rebounds and had four assists in Georgia's 61-51 loss at No. 2 ranked South Carolina last Thursday night.

Georgia, 19-7 overall and 7-6 in SEC play after the loss, pulled within five points of South Carolina with less than four minutes remaining in the game.

Butler will have home games against Florida and Arkansas this week before making the trip to Knoxville.

Georgia head coach Joni Taylor echoed Collier's comments about Butler.

"Marjorie Butler is the epitome of the term student-athlete. She has worked extremely hard to be where she is today, and it speaks so well of her character, commitment and attitude that she is able to take some of the hardest courses offered on our campus, go through very difficult medical school interviews and still rank as one of the top point guards in the SEC.

"Marjorie is a phenomenal person, and I know she will be successful in whatever she seeks to do in life."

Georgia senior point guard and former Webb School standout Marjorie Butler looks to pass the ball during the Lady Bulldogs' game against the Ole Miss Rebels at Stegeman Coliseum on Feb. 7 in Athens, Ga. Butler will play her final regular season game this coming Sunday against Tennessee in Knoxville.

ize what's right only after seeing what's wrong. A majority of Americans now believe our country is on the wrong track, and only party apparatchiks and the Washington "beltway boys" think otherwise. Even Hillary and Bernie say that times are tough in our country. And only the willfully uninformed and Democrat automatons can say that seven plus years of "hope and change" have been anything but a

I've been thinking about leadership as the election cycle drones on with denigrating rhetoric and debates ad nauseum. We need new leadership because what we're doing isn't working. And it is even more disturbing that Hillary speaks highly of Obama's policies. At least ole Bernie is true to his principles of socialism.

Sometimes you real- Company which offers college level courses by CD and DVD. One of the professors I most admire is Rufus Fears. Dr. Fears maintains that leaders like George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Winston Churchill were statesmen rather than politicians. He felt these great leaders embody four qualities: "bedrock principles, a moral compass, vision and the ability to build a consensus and achieve that vision."

In trying to make some sense of the presidential candidates, I've been analyzing them with the professor's four criteria which have stood the test of time. People may modify their principles in a given situation, but foundational principles rarely change. Recently, I heard that Justice Antonin Scalia did not try to change the minds of the liberal

Court because he knew their minds were already made up. Now, I don't know if that's true, but it speaks to the fundamental principles which I have and I've encountered in others. Though I don't identify with the politics of former Congressman Dennis Kucinich, I admired his steadfast adherence to his principles, at least until Obama took him for a ride on Air Force One and Kucinich changed his opinion and his vote on Obama-care.

Morality and virtue are often seen as synonyms. Morality implies conformity to established standards of right or wrong. Whereas virtue implies a "moral excellence in character." I believe in an Absolute standard by which I judge my virtue. Our postmodern era denies an absolute standard and holds that everything is relative. If this is true, can you see how problematic it is when morality is judged by a local standard like that of ISIS? And this is especially germane for us as we try to discern the "moral compass" of some vacillating politicians.

Being able to articulate a vision for our country is critical for a presidential candidate. Unfortunately, in the era of perverse media I am a fan of the Teaching justices on the Supreme who function as political operatives instead of journalists, the message is manipulated in sound bites and "gotchas!" I heard recently that people remember less what someone says and more how someone made them feel. Bill Clinton's legendary ability to connect with people made him successful. Hillary is a stark contrast. Ted Cruz is an accomplished debater. Jeb Bush is not. Cruz and Marco Rubio have articulated clear policies. Trump has not, but his populism of "Make America Great" resonates with the anger of America outside the Washington beltway. Establishment Republicans like Jeb Bush just don't seem to understand that connection with people trumps message - at least in 2016. Finally, will our new leader be able to gain consensus for his vision of America? Obama, had a vision to transform America. He had bedrock principles, though contrary to mine. Obama made people feel good as he read the teleprompter and scripted sermons. As a result people overlooked his policies of transference of wealth from our country to others, and from one person's pocket to another's to curry the favor of the latter who will then vote for Demstuff they offer. And Bernie even trumps Obama in this regard.

Obama did not need consensus after his election in 2008 because Democrats controlled the House and the Senate. And he still controlled the Senate until 2014. Many believe that the country is in a mess not just because of the liberalism of Democrats, but because Republicans refused to challenge Obama's policies over the last seven years.

My professional skill set is an ability to sift through complex medical information, distill the information into salient points and prioritize issues. But that's not enough. Doctors have to be able to make decisions and explain options and choices to people because patients assume doctors have medical expertise and expect them to be the leader in a medical partnership. An example of leadership is when patients are conflicted and indecision is making them miserable. Many times I've led and encouraged patients to make a tough decision and end their anguishing over the issue. Sometimes you just have to jump right or left to get off the proverbial middle of the fence.

Life is full of tough choicocrats because of the free es, and no one escapes good and bad decisions. However, we are supposed to learn from our successes and our failures. A friend of mine voted for Obama the second time with the "hopes he would do better." He didn't. Obama's liberalism has made us unsafe, unsuccessful, increasingly dependent on the government and has stoked the fires of racism. And now we have the two "old" Democrat presidential candidates trying to outdo each other with promises of stuff" for everyone, and demanding we surrender more and more control of "our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor." Alternatively, we have the bombastic Republican street fighter, another Bush, Republican candidates in name only (RINOs) or those who offer youth and a new direction.

The choice is ours and the future of our nation rests upon our decision. Never in my lifetime has the choice for a president had such importance. Never has such stark policy contrasts existed between the two parties and their candidates. Our children's future hangs in the balance. Get informed and choose wisely.

Patience in Prayer

Have you ever had a delay in answered prayer? God's delay doesn't mean He doesn't care or is not paying attention. God is always answering prayer. Paul wrote, "And we know that in all things God works for the good of those who love Him, who have been called according to his purpose" (Romans 8:28). God works in all things at all times causing all to work together to accomplish His plans. When we send a request that is in His will, He is at work. We may not see it right away, but one day we will. We need patience in prayer.

But patience is so hard to develop. Do you remember how people told you to wait when you were little? They told you to wait......patiently. For example, when a child looks at all those boxes under the Christmas tree, it is hard to wait several weeks before opening them. Or how about the fresh made cookies whose aroma fills the house and the child is told he has to eat

By Mark Brackney, Minister of the Arlington Church of Christ

the cookie. The child wonders, what is the connection between the vegetables and the cookie? Or how about kids who try to form a line before they go out for recess? They jockey for position to try to get as far up in the line as possible. Sometimes they even hold their hands out to make sure other kids don't get in ence in the amount of time between the first kid in line getting outside and the last kid in line getting outside is like one second.

Humans, children and adults alike, like waiting. You have to teach children to be patient. And sometimes, as adults, we need to be reminded that patience is a virtue. Patience makes life more peaceful. Patience gives us greater appreciation. Most importantly, though, patience is God-pleasing.

We all have most likely prayed for something with long periods of silence his vegetables first before in between. Jesus' prayer life can give us encouragement at divine delays. He often prayed all night (Luke 6:12). On the night of His arrest, He prayed in such agony that His sweat became like drops of blood falling to the ground (Luke 22:44). This is intense prayer. He didn't want to go through with it. His flesh did not look forward to the suffering that soon would come. He asked God to remove the cup of suffering if it was God's will. But it was God's will front of them. Not one of them that He should suffer and die for all comprehend that the differ- mankind. This is a time when Jesus' prayer was not answered in the way He wanted it to be, and aren't you glad? But Jesus understood that it was God's will that mattered, not His own.

Along with patience, we can also want instant gratification. We don't struggle with remembering the times God has answered our prayers. That is why the Bible is full of God's intervention into the affairs of man. We have a personal, loving Father who cares. The honest, consistent, sincere prayer is heard. God does not demand eloquence. He is moved by our heart and He responds in His time. Be patient in prayer.

do on these cold wintry days? Read a book! I received three books at Christmastime and, to me, that's the best gift: "See Me" by Nicholas Sparks, "Depraved Heart" by Patricia Cornwall, and "Johnny Carson" by Henry Bushkin, who was his lawyer. I will give a short synopsis of each one.

I have read a lot of Ms. Cornwall's books and really liked them but this last one was disappointing. I am somewhat familiar with technical terms but this book is full of forensic details and psychological details that are beyond my comprehension. To add insult to injury, there are two plots involved that aren't resolved at the end of the book. If you want to learn how to build a gun or assassinate a political figure, this book is for you. Not for me!

When my children went to school I was always able to rise early in the morning for them even though I stayed up till 12:30 a.m. to watch Johnny Carson. It was an hour of laughter, fun, and a camaraderie between the host and his guests. In the seventies and eighties he was the country's highest-paid entertainer and its most enigmatic.

While charming and hilarious onstage, he could be sometimes cruel off-stage. This book shows a side of Johnny that not many people saw. The adulteries, Mob ties, and insecurities in his family life are described with clarity in this book. It unveils not only the hidden Carson but also the raucous, star-studded world he ruled.

I'm pretty certain that most of my readers have seen the movie, "The Notebook" or read the book by Nicholas Sparks. Well, he has done it again. It's gratifying to read a book with an old-fashioned love story and Mr. Sparks is noted for that. "See Me" is set in modern times and tells the story of two young people and is rich in emotion and fueled with suspense. It reminds us that love is sometimes forged in the crises that threaten to shatter us.....and that those who see us for who we truly are may not always be the ones easiest to recognize.

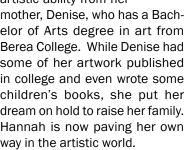

This is a thrilling novel, but I don't think it will surpass "The Notebook." To spend time reading a book is not wasted time!

ralphine3@yahoo. com

Hannah was recently accepted as a member into the Fountain City Art Guild and has participated in a juried show. For her first art show, she entered two drawings and received Honorable Mention on one! It was a portrait she had drawn of Steve Carell for her mother. This young artist already realizes the importance of giving back to her community by doing a display for the Knox County Fountain City Library. A very accomplished clay artist, Hannah makes miniature figures and scenes out of oven baked clay. She has entered the "Decorate a Pumpkin Contest" at Fountain City Library in her age category every year! The contest requirements were to decorate a pumpkin based on a book using anything besides actually carving the pumpkin. The first year Hannah won by making all the characters in "James and the Giant Peach" out of clay and arranging them on a small pumpkin she had painted to resemble a peach. Subsequent years she depicted "Matilda," "Harry Potter," and "Cloudy with a Chance of Meatballs 2." Hannah also has done art projects for her church. In an online contest, she drew Katie Perry's cat which resulted in "Kitty Purry." Family is also important to Hannah, and she has drawn many pieces and given to family one drawing to her grandmother that featured her father and his brother. She gave another drawing to her mother that featured Hannah and her siblings. Hannah hopes to continue her formal training in the field of art and is currently working at a daycare facility to help finance her education. Hannah charges $10 an hour for pictures and can draw people, pets, and various other subjects in 5x7, 8x10, and 11x14 sizes. You may contact Hannah about her artwork by e-mail at hannah_delk@yahoo.com or by messaging Facebook under Hannah Catherine Delk or under "Art Is A Part." City wants input about Fort Dickerson improvements

steelym@knoxfocus.com

For many years it's been a tight turn for visitors to exit off of Chapman Highway and visit Fort Dickerson Park. The city's been working on a new approach to the historic Civil War fort and is planning to hold a public meeting on the recent road alignment and future improvements this Wednesday.

Along with the Aslan Foundation, which acquired the former G &

R Automotive property in 2014 to make way for the new entrance road, the city is now ready to move forward on additional construction including landscaping, signage, a new transit stop and a decorative veneer for the 30-foot high retaining wall.

The new entrance is aligned with Woodlawn Pike and includes 475 feet of a new two-lane road and sidewalk access.

The Fort Dickerson Park includes 85 acres of green space, hiking and mountain trails, the fort, the overlook and a quarry

The fort, built by Union Forces to protect the city from shelling by the Confederate Army during their attempt to recapture Knoxville, is one of the best known landmarks in South Knoxville.

The fort was named for its first commander, U.S.

Army Captain Jonathan C. Dickerson of the 112th Illinois Volunteer Mounted Infantry. A 30-yearold carpenter, he played a significant role in Knoxville during the siege of the city in 1863. The fort is one of 16 earthen forts and battery positions that protected Knoxville during

The city is also planning to use $275,000 to fund improved access to the quarry lake and overlook there and is asking citizens to speak up on entrance and park improvements and also provide updates on management of the quarry lake later this spring.

The public meeting will be held at 5:30 Wednesday at Flenniken Landing at 115 Flenniken Avenue.
