Summer Concert Series Kicked Off at New Harvest

On June 16, Knox County launched a new summer concert series, Third Thursday Concerts at New Harvest Park, with worldrenowned dobro player Phil Leadbetter and Friends (pictured right).

The free concerts, held June through August on the third Thursday of each month, take place immediately following the New Harvest Park Farmers Market from 6 to 8 p.m. at 4775 New Harvest Lane. Attendees are encouraged to bring their own blankets or lawn chairs.

Knoxville's Grammy nominated Phil Leadbetter was awarded "Dobro Player Of The Year" at The International Bluegrass Music Awards in 2015 and inducted into The Atlanta Country Music Hall of Fame.

The 2016 Third Thursday Concerts at New Harvest Park are sponsored by WIVK 107.7 FM and Knox County Parks & Recreation.

Knoxville opens Devil's Racetrack Bike Trail

Knoxville's newest bike trail was officially opened in a groundbreaking ceremony Friday morn-

The city, along with Knox County and the Legacy Parks Foundation, celebrated the grand opening of the Devil's Racetrack Downhill Trail and two other trails on the bright and humid day.

The Devil's Racetrack is located at 3700 Lancaster Avenue in South Knoxville and is part of that community's Urban Wilderness Project. The trail was made possible by a $100,000 grant from Bell Helmet Company. The money was donated to the Appalachian Mountain Bike Club.

Knoxville beat out Asheville and San Francisco for the grant by popular vote. The 100-acre parcel on which the park sits was donated by the Wood family.

"I'm happy to be here today and the one thing about this is County Mayor Tim Burchett said. "I'm thankful to Bell Helmet Company.

Some voting locations to change

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

If you are a regular voter you might find that your voting location, or Precinct, has changed. It might be confusing when you vote August 4 on the long Knox County election

Chris Davis, Assistant Administrator of the Election Commission, has supplied The Knoxville Focus with a list of the changes, many of which involve West Knox County.

If you've been voting at Farragut Middle School, at Precinct 65, you will be voting at the Farragut Town Hall at 11408 Municipal Center Drive. If you've been voting at Farragut Middle School at Precinct 65N you'll be voting at Farragut Primary School at 509 N. Campbell Station Road.

Precinct 66N, formerly at Farragut High School, will be at Farragut Middle School at 200 West End Avenue.

Precinct 72, formerly at the Boys and Girls Club, will vote at Crown College, 2307 W. Beaver Creek Drive.

Precinct 69S has been divided and 69S will now vote at Northshore Elementary School at 1889 Thunderhead Road and 69E will vote at Bluegrass Elementary School at 8901 Bluegrass Road.

Another voting place, formerly Precinct 70, will now be voting at two different locations. Precinct 70W will vote at Ball Camp Elementary, 9801 Middlebrook Pike, and 70E will now vote at Amherst Elementary School at 51-1 Schaad Road.

Before you plan to vote you may want to call the Knox County Election Commission and find your polling place. These changes will not affect early voting, which starts July 15. Davis said the changes were made when the Election Commission met May 27.

Oklahoma Legislature Ends VAM in Teacher Evaluations

Washington reports on Educationvotes. org that House Bill 2957, which was recently signed into law by Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin, will eliminate the portion of the Teacher and Leader Effectiveness (TLE) evaluation system that educators say was driving up stress levels and forcing quality teachers out of the profession.

high-stakes test using VAM. Teachers in Tennessee are also rated based on VAM, called the Tennessee Value Added Assessment System, or TVAAS.

The rationale behind the VAM is that every student is "predicted" to achieve a certain score on the highstakes test, based on how much growth they are expected to show from the previous year. If the student scores as they were predicted to score, the teacher is deemed to be of

The American Statistical Association (ASA) issued a detailed, seven-page statement debunking the validity of VAM. Valerie Strauss, writing for the Washington Post, said, "VAM purports to be able to take student standardized test scores and measure the 'value' a teacher adds to student learning through complicated formulas that can supposedly factor out all of the other influences and emerge with a valid assessment of how effective a particular teacher has been. These formulas can't actually do this with sufficient reliability and validity, but school reformers have pushed this approach and now most states use VAM as part of teacher evaluations."

Robillard said "We tried to fight it (TLE) as teachers and we had no success. Oklahoma's HB 2957 does not eliminate teacher evaluations. Like Tennessee's TVAAS, 50% of the TLE involved qualitative evaluation measures, including principal observations. That part remains intact. Removing the VAM component gives teachers the autonomy to focus on what they believe they need to work on in their own teaching practice, and will eventually allow each educator to create their own professional development plan that they and their students need to work on. Washington reports that

County Commission Code fees may increase in county

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

The fees for building permits will be going up in Knox County for the first time since 1994. The county's Codes Administration Office charges have been lagging behind the city of Knoxville and Farragut fees even though most of the new construction has been in the jurisdiction of the

But the new fees, scheduled to begin on July 1st if approved by the County Commission's work session Monday evening and again at their regular meeting on June 27th, may not be increased to final amounts immediately.

"You can eat an elephant a bite at a time," Commissioner Mike Brown told The Focus last week, saying he'll suggest raising the fees gradually.

The Knox County Codes Administration issues permits and completes inspections for mobile homes, building demolitions, underground tanks, and sign installations or removals. The department also oversees residential and building permits and plans and reviews, administrative tasks, gas permits and plans and reviews, and administers fees appeals.

Among the fee increases

- A $25 Technology Access Fee being added to all permits. Upping the Building
- Permit fees based on all costs associated with construction except for land acquisition, ranging from a $50 fee for a $2,000 appraisal of cost to $1,690 for the first $500,000 in cost plus $2 for each additional thousand, with variations of cost for costs in between.

- · Fifty dollars for a review of plans on construction of single family residential dwellings when the cost doesn't exceed $100,000 and increases to $500 for homes over $1 million, with variations of the fee for homes valued between the two categories.
- A $50 fee for residential demolition and $100 for commercial.
- · Signs permit fees will be $50 for signs valued up to $2,000 plus $50 for each additional $1,000 value.
- · Fees for the Board of Zoning Appeals will be $200 or double that if a violation has already occurred.

Other fees will apply for other categories.

In other Work Session business the commission may discuss hiring Premier Building Maintenance for Janitorial services and allot $5 million to Zoo Knoxville over a five-year period.

Military leave for county employees is also on the agenda, upping the current leave time from 20 to 30 days and the commissioners could vote to give $19,000 to Breakthrough Corporation for an adult Autism training program.

Broadway lights, Zoo Knoxville and Check Cashing stores

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

The traffic along Broadway could flow much better if the City Council approves a grant application to the state. The $6 million plus request would require no matching funds and could provide funding for "mixed flow transit signal priority system" along the Broadway Corridor.

The City Council meets at 7 p.m. Tuesday. In July the meetings will begin at 6 p.m. following a vote recently by the council.

The council may also consider adding $40,000 to the East Tennessee Housing Development Organization for expenses for a coordinator staff position.

Zoo Knoxville may get an amendment

to renew Knoxville Zoological Gardens, Inc. to run that facility and SMG Corporation could be hired to manage the Knoxville Convention Center, Civic Auditorium and Coliseum and Chilhowee Park. The Public Assembly Facilities Advisory Board may also be reorganized and thanked for its past service for operating the Civil Center, Auditorium and Coliseum.

A one-year lease with Young-Williams

Animal Center may be continued and the police department may get authority to add three additional officers through a grant with the Department of Justice. The $375,000 grant application would be matched with $159,000 from city funds.

The council should give final approval of the city budget and MPC's One Year Plan and finalize approval naming "Charles Newman Drive" in Pond Gap.

Alternative Financial Services, commonly called "Check Cashing Services," may get attention as the city looks to limit the number of those businesses and set a distance between them.

A vacant property along Parkside Drive and Cogdill Road may get final approval for car storage on a request from Samuel J. Furrow. Although some residential owners on Cogdill oppose the zoning change the MPC supported the change in a mixed vote.

Workers compensation coverage may also be funded and could include not only city employees but K-Trans management as well.

Buzz Thomas Joins KCS as Interim Superintendent

Appointed Interim Superintendent Buzz Thomas officially took the reins as Director of Knox County Schools on June 15. He's not quite "flying solo" yet though outgoing Superintendent Jim McIntyre will be hanging around until July 8, to work in an "advisory role" to Thomas.

Thomas is known as a great communicator - something his predecessor is not. It was reported that he is working on an open letter to the community, outlining his plans and priorities for the summer. education - and the teachers that define it - than legislators in Tennessee? What made the differ-

Sadly, few districts in Tennessee can say with confidence that their school administrators are on board with trying to change the punitive VAM evaluation system. But Robillard indicated it was parent and community involvement that ultimately moved the legislation in Oklahoma.

There are active and involved parents and community members in Tennessee - "citizen lobbyists" - but they are up against a wellfunded, well-organized opposition. Legislators have been lured by lobbyists who have a political, financial, or professional reason for pushing the reform agenda.

The real agenda behind education "reform" (from common core to high-stakes testing to teacher evaluations to charters and vouchers) is to privatize (giving tax funds to private for-profit corporations) traditional education, destroy private schools, and eliminate elected school boards. In other words, at the end of the day parents will have no choice and no voice.

Your state rep and some senators are up for election this fall. Do some research. Find out who is backing them. Sadly, many so called "conservative" groups -FreedomWorks, AFP, Heritage, Heartland, Students First, Beacon TN and many others) are on the wrong side of education. Either they have no clue of the real agenda, or they are complicit in the intentional destruction of edu-

First Methodist to celebrate 150 years

steelym@knoxfocus.com

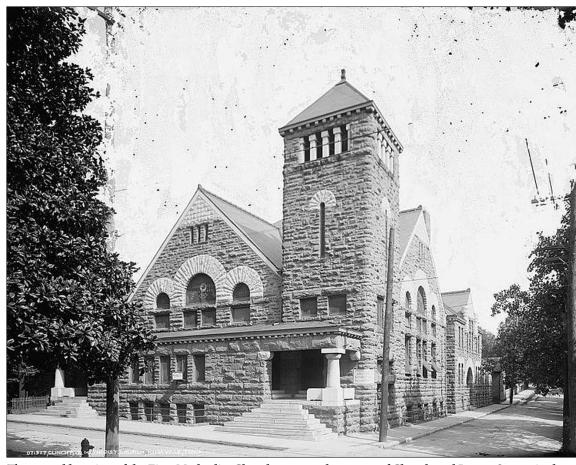

How do you celebrate 150 years of church history?

Founded the year following the end of the Civil War the First United Methodist Church of Knoxville has a long and proud history. During the years the congregation has had many notable pastors and has worshiped at three different locations, now located at 3316 Kingston Pike.

As you drive into the church the first thing you will see is a large cornerstone sitting on the ground near the chapel. The huge stone has the dates 1866-1893, the dates of the first two churches.

The first church was at the southwest corner of Clinch and Market Streets downtown and the second was on the corner of Church and Locust Streets, also downtown. The first services of the early Methodist followers were held on July 8, 1866 in the Circuit Courtroom of the old Knoxville Courthouse and was organized by Rev. J.B. Ford and 30 followers. One of the first trustees was William G. (Parson) Brownlow, then a circuit riding Methodist minister.

On Saturday, July 16th, the celebration of the church's long history starts with a potluck dinner on the grounds complete with music, games, videos, pictures, a special program, an alumni choir rehearsal and much more. The

'Hawkeyes' denied demolition

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

For a second time the Knoxville Historic Zoning Commission has voted to deny a demolition permit square foot structure to the owners of what was once Hawkeyes Tavern on 1717 White Avenue in Fort Sanders.

The split vote, 5-2, came after the owners, Edward and Margaret Whitaker who bought the property in 16 years ago, had their attorney Steve Wise detail all the problems at the former home including various structural problems.

Wise said that repairs would cost much more than the historic old home would be appraised for after renovation is complete. He said the 4,300 "cannot be restored" and called the property "terminal," and asked the commissioners to look at the structural damage.

Hawkeyes operated there from 1983 until 2000 and after that various restaurants and bars had a home there. For the last couple of years the structure has been empty.

"Eddie tried to keep it viable," Wise said and submitted 26 documents to support the request to demolish the building. He said the foundation damage was done by previous owners, who dug a basement and, over the years, tried to keep the upstairs from falling by propping it up with untreated wooden posts. Built in the 1920's as a residential property and used as a duplex of rental apartments over the years the old building is no longer viable as a site for a restaurant or bar.

Two neighborhood homeowners spoke against demolition, citing opposition also from Knox Heritage. They charged that the current owners bought the property knowing it is in a Historic Overlay District and then neglected repairs. They cited the cost to repair as not being a reason to demolish. Commissioner Bart Carey said that while it appears demolition would be "one more bite out of the apple" in the neighborhood he said the much altered structure "contributes in no way to the historic character" of the neighborhood. Wise denied neglect to the structure telling the commissioners that the owner added a new roof and has taken care of the

"It's in pretty good shape but it is just not structurally sound," Wise said. Voting to deny the demolition were Historic Zoning Commissioners Faris Eid, Lorie Matthews, Melissa McAdams, Scott Smith, and Mike Crowder. Voting for the demolition were Bart Carey and Sandi Swilley. Decisions of the Historic Zoning Commission can be resubmitted after one year or appealed to the court system.

Summer is Here with Fresh Produce

By Brigitte Passman

There is no doubt that summer is almost here with the beautiful sunshine and all the delicious produce that is arriving in the Union County Farmers Market! The market began May 7 and is in full swing with a wide range of produce available every Saturday until October 29. The Farmers Market is located at Maynardville's Wilson Park, open from 9 a.m. - 12 p.m. every Saturday.

Some of the items you can expect to be at the market include: arugula, bok choi, chard, cauliflower, green garlic, green onions, pea pods, radishes, tomatoes, cucumbers, beef, herbs, cut flowers, hanging baskets, nursery products, eggs, honey and a great variety of greens, jams, and jellies. The market also features some talented artisans who sell handmade/homemade crafts such as walking sticks, earrings, soaps, lotions, lip balm, candles, and alpaca yarn.

Summer is a time to relax and enjoy the beautiful weather. A perfect way to celebrate this is to enjoy the live music that is available at the Farmers Market. The types of music you can expect are gospel, country, and bluegrass. It is a great way to start up some line dancing or you can just sit back and enjoy the music and tap those toes to the beat.

The market will also have Farmers Market Fresh cooking demonstrations and occasional Taste of the Market where you can experience new tastes for

There is so much to enjoy at the Union County Farmers Market. It is a market you do not want to miss! the genre. He amazed even the pros with his abilities to understand the music A beautiful thought for and to include his own interpretations, something difficult for most seasoned veterans. Last weekend, I traveled with other church members to Marion, VA, to work for Project Crossroads. The skills that my friends possessed amazed me and led to the construction of a large shed that was almost perfectly level and plumb. What I realized is that each of us has talents that wait to be developed.

The first part of the task is to identify exactly what our talents are. My wife Amy is a born problem solver. Our daughter is a creative person whose abilities have served her well in working in the music industry. Our son Dallas is a kind, sincere, and dedicated person whose leadership abilities are evident to all.

Each person has a special talent; no arguments about that can convince me otherwise. The good lord blessed us with those talents; one person might be a good listener while another might be good at fixing things. A quick inventory of self and the things which spark excitement in us leads to identification of the special skills that we By Joe Rector have. A passion joerector@comcast.net for something is a sure indication that we need to give it more attention. It is a gift that we've been given. The next step is to take those infant talents and to mold them. That means devoting time to them and building on them with practice and simple hard work. All of us will to some degree have success if we pay attention to the gifts we've been given. No, not all of us can be the best in an area. Maybe baseball talents don't translate into a pro career, but perhaps they lead a person to coaching young players. The ability to play piano might not be good enough to become a professional musician, but it just might be the very thing that a church or assisted living facility needs to reach people. I'd like to say that I've become a world-class writer. The truth, to the contrary, is that I've been blessed to write for this paper for several years and to publish some books, articles, and other short pieces. One person told me in the beginning that I should forget about ever writing for a paper or anything else. No, I'm not rich or wildly successful, but I love what I do each week.

The next area is the hard part. If a talent is a gift, it is important to share it with others. That means that our jobs are to reach out to others and to help them as we use these talents. Being able to budget well is wonderful for personal finances, but it's also a talent that can serve to make others' lives more successful. Perhaps teaching how to budget to a group at church is the way to share. Using the talents that involve construction or plumbing or electricity might best be shared with the many who live in substandard housing. The ability to teach should be used to reach children struggling in school and adults looking for a way to better their lives through education.

Finally, sending up words of thanks for the talents from God should become a daily thing. Yes, we might develop talents, but they were instilled in us by something larger than ourselves. Only after giving thanks can we find joy in those special skills and double their values by sharing them with others. In the end, the world might be a better place simply by your one act. Never fail to use your talents; it's an important step in fulfilling your destiny.

Thomas P. Gore Oklahoma's Blind Senator, Part II

By Ray Hill rayhill865@gmail.com

had been one of two of Oklahoma's first United States senators. Twice reelected, Senator Gore had been decisively defeated inside his own party when he sought reelection in 1920. Gore's opposition to the World War and President Woodrow Wilson had been highly unpopular with his fellow Democrats. Gore had sought a comeback in 1924 when he ran for the U.S. Senate again and ran a poor third, mustering less than 19% of the Completely blind, yet a spellbinding orator, T. P. Gore had become a highly successful attorney, but it became clear he still had political ambitions. Republican Senator William B. Pine, an oil millionaire, had been elected to the U.S. Senate in 1924 and was running hard for reelection in 1930. The Great Depression and the increasing unpopularity of President Herbert Hoover and the Republican Party diminished Senator Pine's chances of being reelected, irrespective of how much of his personal fortune he invested into his campaign. The opportunity for a Democrat to win was widely recognized and the primary attracted five serious candidates, including three former governors. Thomas P. Gore sought to make yet another comeback.

Despite having earned significant fees for representing oil companies and oil producers, Gore campaigned hard as the friend of the farmer and the candidate who "had a hole in his pocket". Gore also shrewdly moved to tie his senatorial campaign to the gubernatorial campaign of William "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, a rising power in Oklahoma

Oklahoma's politics were as tempestuous as any state in country. Two governors in the state's short history had been impeached, including Henry Johnston, whom many legislators believed was unduly influenced by his personal secretary, Mrs. O.O. Hammonds.

William "Alfalfa Bill" Murray turned the already turbulent politics Oklahoma on its head. The sixty-year old Murray was a foe of corporations and the friend of the farmer. Murray had served as Speaker of Oklahoma's House of Representatives and two terms in Congress. After suffering successive defeats for Congress and governor, Alfalfa Bill had gone to start an American colony in Bolivia. The colony failed and Bill Murray returned to Oklahoma in 1929 and was already running for governor in 1930. Lean and lanky with a drooping moustache, Murray was hardly a picture

Thomas Pryor Gore of sartorial splendor. His clothes were usually wrinkled and food stained. During the hot summer months, Alfalfa Bill's white suits were stained by tobacco iuice.

> Murray was also a racist, campaigning for governor in 1930 against what he referred to as "the three C's --- corporations, carpetbaggers, and coons." The former senator aligning his own campaign with that of William Murray was more opportunistic than sharing basic beliefs with Alfalfa Bill, although Gore had once been an equally fierce critic of corporations and big business. Gore's blindness never inhibited his ability to campaign, especially to speak. Out of office for ten years, his former isolationism and skepticism about the World War did not especially hamper his campaign. With five serious candidates competing in the Democratic primary, the vote was seriously divided and allowed Gore to lead the field, albeit by a scant Administration. Many of 161 votes.

> The second runner up, C. J. Wrightsman, contested the run off election but never really managed to rally all of the former senator's political enemies to his banner. Gore won the Democratic nomination writers were proof of "how easily, with more than 58% the dole spoils the soul."

William B. Pine's personal wealth might make a difference in the general election and it was generally conceded Pine was the most popular Republican in the state. Pine campaigned gamely and made a race of it, but ultimately fell short. T. P. Gore won the Senate race by just over 23,000 votes. William B. Pine had won nearly 48% of the vote, an impressive tally in a Democratic state during the Great Depression.

rarest of opportunities for a politician after having been soundly rejected by the people: a second chance. Gore decried the suffering of the Great Depression but the hardships and loss of that terrible age was magnified for many Sooners with the arrival of the Dust Bowl, a phenomenon of severe drought and wind erosion that brought "black blizzards" blowing across the country. Oklahoma's state government was virtually bankrupt with people unable to pay their bills, much less their taxes. Many Oklahomans drifted westward with the winds and a great many "Okies" settled in California.

Initially, Senator Gore lent his support to the administration of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, but it was not long before the Oklahoman began to dissent. Gore bitterly fought the legislation creating the Works Progress his constituents wrote the senator to either urge him to support the WPA or castigate him for his opposition to an agency they firmly believed would provide jobs and income. Senator Gore wrote disdainfully that the

T. P. Gore's biograthe senator tartly defended his vote and frankly told correspondents it was obvious their respective votes could be bought.

"Much as I value votes I am not in the market," Gore snapped. "I cannot consent to buy votes with the people's money."

Senator Gore piously added, "I owe a debt to the taxpayer as well as to the unemployed."

According to author James T. Patterson in Thomas P. Gore had that his book, Congressional Conservatism and the New Deal, only Virginia's "unreconstructed rebel" Carter Glass excelled T. P. Gore in his opposition to the New Deal. It was ironic that Senator Gore steadfastly refused to support the huge government expenditures earmarked for relief of citizens when few needed it more than Oklahomans. As Mr. Patterson notes, Senator Gore explained, "As I see it, credit is to a nation what chastity is to a woman. Without it, nothing counts." Once a populist and a progressive, by his last term in the United States Senate, Gore was considered a conservative, if not a reactionary. T. P. Gore had also once been the foe of the oil companies, but by the time he returned to the U. S. Senate in 1931, he had become a spokesman for the oil industry. Like Carter had, like Josh Lee, served Glass, Gore was especially fiscally conservative.

Suffering Oklahomans had little use for Gore's lofty speeches praising rugged individualism. Certainly, having been completely blind since the age of eleven, Thomas Pryor Gore had managed to overcome hardship and disability, but tens of thousands of Oklahomans had to worry about the necessities; Despite the depression, pher, Professor Monroe having food to eat, shelter, Ponca City, Oklahoma. some believed Senator Billington, recorded how and employment. Glass represented a different state, less hard hit by the depression and the virtual collapse of the agricultural economy. Carter Glass also had another distinct advantage in that he was ensconced in the political machine that ruled the Old Dominion State. Gore had little organization to speak of and all federal patronage in the Sooner State was funneled to the senior senator, Elmer Thomas, who was a stronger backer of the New Deal.

T. P. Gore may well have been far more disabled by his blindness than he ever imagined, for he was certainly blind to the political realities in his home state. Senator Gore insisted upon running again in 1936. As had happened in 1920, his own party determined to deny him the nomination. Two serious candidates opposed Gore: Congressman Josh Lee and Governor E. W. Marland. Lee was an idealistic young man who had won a seat in Congress in 1934. Lee as governor and two personalities could hardly be any more different. Marland was a wealthy oilman and had been an attorney and teacher of public speaking. Josh Lee could match and perhaps excel T. P. Gore word for golden word. E. W. Marland had succeeded Alfalfa Bill Murray a single term in Congress. By 1920, E. W. Marland had accumulated and lost fortunes. He managed to recoup his losses and his wealth was estimated to be in excess of $80,000,000. By today's standard, he would have been close to being a billionaire. Marland had married his adoptive daughter after the death of his first wife and lived in a

Marland had immediately begun his administration by emulating that of FDR and the Marland version was called the "Little New Deal." As E. W. Marland came into office some 850,000 Oklahomans were either unemployed or on relief. Marland was prepared to forfeit two years of his fouryear term as governor to run for the United States Senate.

Gore campaigned upon his record, which was perhaps the worst thing he could have done, yet he could not escape it either. The senator ran a distant fourth in the Democratic primary. Josh Lee, supported by a cadre of young men known as the "Rover Boys" led in the first primary. Facing Governor Marland in the run off election, Josh Lee won easily, winning by more than 100,000 votes.

Failing to win 20% of the vote inside the Democratic primary, Senator T. P. Gore finished out his term of office and retired from the U.S. Senate in 1937. Gore revived his law practice and continued to live in Washington, D. C.

After his death, an editorial in the Ada Weekly News summed up T. P. Gore's oratorical talents.

"Gore was an orator of great power. We have watched him change the feeling of a crowd from bitterness to friendship. We have seen him lift friendly crowds to peaks of enthusiasm."

T. P. Gore remained active fifty-five room mansion in well into his seventies. He suffered a cerebral hemorrhage at his home and died on March 16, 1949 at the age of seventy-eight. The former senator's body was taken home to Oklahoma where it lay in state at the capitol. Then the earthly remains of Thomas P. Gore were taken to a cemetery in Oklahoma City and laid sights and sounds indicate as much, and the calendar is catching up. The official start of summer happens this week, June 20. Jesus even mentioned the season in Matthew 24:32: "Now learn a parable of the fig tree; when his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh" (KJV). I always connected summer's entry as being on or near our father's birthday, June 21. Looking at the date reminds me that he would have turned ninety years old this year.

I have been noticing signs of summer for a couple of weeks. Schools across the country are finishing up graduations

Dr. Annette Mendola to discuss 'Being Mortal'

Knox County Public Library is pleased to present Dr. Annette Mendola, Director of Clinical Ethics, UT Medical Center, for a discussion of "Being Mortal: Medicine and What Matters in the End" by Atul Gawande, Wednesday, June 22, noon to 1:00 p.m. in the East Tennessee History Center auditorium, 601 South Gay Street, in this month's Books Sandwiched In, a program series sponsored by the Friends of Knox County Public Library.

Gawande's book Being Mortal addresses the topic of the inevitability of death, but according to Mendola, goes beyond that. "What is more remarkable about this book is the deft way he discusses another aspect of mortality: human finitude. We don't just go about our lives and then evaporate; most of us have a longish phase at the end of our lives that is marked by loss. These losses - of abilities, of independence, of memory, of social connections - are perhaps more fearsome than death itself."

"Another important theme in this book concerns the role of medicine vis-à-vis mortality," Mendola said. "We tend to achieve that which we pursue, and the American healthcare system has ardently pursued heroic, lifesaving technologies. It has been less invested in helping people preserve the things that matter most to them in life, such as mobility, relationships, meaningful activity, and being at home."

"Gawande encourages us to question the way medicine is produced and consumed, and to ask ourselves what we really want from healthcare,"

Lady Bobcats

Ben Collins grew up the son of a Methodist minister. As such, he never really found a home.

"My dad was a Methodist member, so we moved around quite a lot when I was a kid," Collins said. "Every two years or so, it seemed like we moved.

"I spent some time in my wife's hometown and then four years ago, we came to Fountain City and we love the community here. We bought our house here and we hope to be here for a long time."

That has all changed now. For the past four years, Collins and his wife LaRae have been in the Fountain City community while Ben has taught social studies and coached basketball at Gresham Middle School.

He'll continue to be on Gresham's faculty and he'll continue to teach the game he loves.

But he won't coach the Gladiators or Lady Gladiators in 2016-17. He'll move on to Central High School where he'll coach the Lady Bobcats.

"Ben is the right person for our program at the right time," Central athletic director J.D. Lambert said. "He knows our girls and he knows our feeder schools."

The Lady Bobcats last enjoyed sustained success when Lambert was their coach back in the early 2000's. Since then, Central has struggled largely due to lack of players.

Collins said that he knows that trend has to change. He also acknowledges that his basketball work at Gresham is far from done. But he's embracing the challenge.

"I'm excited because this is my first high school head coaching job," Collins said. "The new girls in the program know me and they know my coaching style.

"I know that I have to let the girls at Gresham know who I am. I have to work with their coaches to make Gresham a true feeder program for

"I have to work with their coach so that they run our offense. I also have to recruit at the high school because there are some girls who are not playing basketball for whatever reason."

Collins is a self-proclaimed basketball junkie but he's also a family man. He and his wife have a 1-year old daughter. Fallon.

"Family is a priority for me and I'm getting used to taking on the role of a father," he said. "It's important to me to have as much family time as I can. That's sometimes hard when you're coaching." He's happy to be at Central because of the school's extremely supportive administration that includes Lambert and principal Mike Reyn-"Working with J.D. and Mr.

Reynolds has been great. People at Central have come and they've shown that they're ready to help," Collins Wins have been hard to come by for the Lady Bobcats in recent years. Central won two games last season after a winless campaign in 2014-15. Central won just once in 2013-14. Collins replaces Josh Brannon, who resigned earlier this spring.

The new coach is hoping to turn things around.

"Our girls program really needs to be more competitive, especially in a school our size," he said. "We want the girls to come out and be a part of our program and we want them to be proud to be a part of our program."

Bradford tapped to coach soccer at Hardin Valley Academy

By Ken Lay

For the second time in as many years, Hardin Valley Academy has had to hire a new soccer coach and athletic director George Ashe found a coach who is familiar with District 4-AAA.

Hardin Valley recently hired Heritage coach Nick Bradford to take the reins of both the boys and girls soccer program.

Bradford replaces Mark Patterson, who left the school because his work visa expired. Patterson, a native of Northern Ireland, is on a student visa and remains in the country while he takes college classes.

It was Fernandez and Baker who implored Bradford to be patient once the new HVA coach returned to Heritage to coach both the Mountaineers and the Lady Mountaineers.

It was Baker and Fernandez, who recommended that Hardin Valley hire their former player.

"I have a strong soccer background and I have to thank Pepe Fernandez and Jon Baker," Bradford said. "They were my coaches at Maryville College and they actually recommended me for the job

What do I do for sports now?

By Alex Norman

And welcome to the down

On Sunday the NBA season came to a close with Game 7 between the Warriors and the Cavaliers. This article is being written before that game tips off, so remember that if Cleveland doesn't win, that's further proof that LeBron James isn't Michael Jordan and that MJ would have won that game playing with the cast of the new Ghostbusters movie.

At least that's what twitter tells me.

So with basketball done and hockey over with, what is left until the Vols kickoff the season on September 1st against Appalachian State?

Fortunately, you have me to fill in the many ways you can still stay in the sports mode and can avoid spending your afternoons at Bed, Bath & Beyond.

We start with your hipster friends that would like for you to know that soccer does not only exist every four years at the World Cup. On Tuesday the United States will play in the semifinals of the Copa America Centenario, one of the biggest tournaments in the world. Interest in the US National Team continues to grow. Head out to a local pub and check out the action. Look up the Rocky Top Outlaws, the local chapter for the American Outlaw fan group.

Euro 2016 is also underway, so you can impress your friends with hot takes like, "Iceland has a soccer team!" or "Albania borders on the Adriatic!" Besides, isn't it always fun to see just how England is going to lose in a major tournament? They've been doing so since 1776, am I right?

If tennis is of interest, Wimbledon gets started on June 27th. Don't ask if an American man has a chance to win it because Pete Sampras is now 88 years old. But the men's side has great players. Novak Djokovic is playing as well as anyone ever has, Andy Murray in the British Empire favorite son, and Roger Federer might have one more title in him.

On the women's side, if American Serena Williams is healthy she will at the minimum get to the semifinals. Williams is the best to ever play the game and we should appreciate her talents while she is still dominating opponents.

My love for sports ... it just came naturally

EDITOR'S NOTE: This was Steve Williams' Father's Day column that ran in The Knoxville Focus in 2008. Steve's father, Mr. Bob Williams, passed away March 5 of this year. Steve wanted to rerun this column and plans to write a follow-up column on his dad for our June 27 issue.

By Steve Williams

I can still remember dad kneeling down in a catcher's position and letting me practice throwing pitches to him. He even had a catcher's mitt, so that made the experience feel even more neat as I tried to throw strikes.

That was when I was a young boy back in the late 1950s and early 1960s.

When Father's Day comes around each year, I always reflect on sporting times shared with my dad over the years. I'm sure there are many of you who do the

I guess you might say I inherited my love for sports from Bob Williams of Clinton. It just came naturally.

I was the oldest of four boys Bob and Bobbie raised, and we played many games inside and outside of our home at 202 White Street in Clinton. I'm sure we made a lot of noise, but they never complained. They encouraged and supported us as we tried to make our mark in sports.

Club of Clinton, provided youngsters with the opportunity to play organized sports, and my dad has been an active member for over 40 years.

I still remember the excitement I felt waking up on Saturday mornings and playing in the Optimist Club's youth basketball league.

As for football, the Optimist I was really never a pitcher, but Club started out with a "touch" league and started its "tackle" league program just in time for me to play on its first midget league team. My dad was one of the coaches.

> Dad also was an umpire and coach in our town's Little League baseball program and also served some time as its president. He still doesn't like the concept of today's "travel teams," which put the best players in town on one team and weakened the league considerably overall. In fact, many Little League programs no longer exist as they once did, not only in Clinton but in Knoxville as well. A lot of boys with marginal talent or lack of financial means have been left behind.

> Dad grew up in Appalachia and Big Stone Gap, small towns in southwest Virginia. He played football, basketball and baseball in high school at Big Stone Gap. His high school consolidated with East Stone Gap back in the 1960s and became Powell Valley

In my hometown, the Optimist and I have made many trips with dad to see Powell Valley play and I saw firsthand that there are a lot of University of Tennessee fans in that area, which is located only about an hour away from King-

That must explain why my dad's blood runs orange. He has been a UT fan for as long as I can remember and has gone to many classic Vol football games over the years. He was in Memphis when Dewey Warren and Tennessee beat UCLA. He and mom were on hand when the Vols rallied to beat Notre Dame in the Miracle at South Bend and they thoroughly loved that victory over Miami in the Sugar Bowl.

We've made many football trips in dad's Big Orange van and still enjoy tailgating before home games. I treasure the picture of my dad and I standing together at the Orange Bowl in 2003, the day before the Vols beat Miami.

I'll never forget being with dad at Neyland Stadium when the Vols pulled out that win over Arkansas to remain undefeated and keep their national title hopes alive in 1998.

Dad's den at home is decorated with a lot of UT memorabilia. There's even an "thank you" card from the late Ray Mears still hanging on the wall, although the message, written in orange ink, has faded. The card was to thank High. Over the years, my brothers dad for a "salesmanship" picture time Vol fans to lose their seats

Dad and I at the Orange Bowl on the eve of the Vols' 10-6 regular season win over the Miami Hurricanes in November of 2003.

he had given the UT basketball for stadium renovations or the coach back in the 1970s.

Dad has been an unofficial football recruiter for UT. He told Phillip Fulmer about the Jones brothers in Big Stone Gap and still regrets the Vols didn't land Thomas and Juluis, who are now running backs in the NFL

I've always thought dad would have made a great athletic director. If he was, be sure there would be no black on the Vol uniforms and the Lady Vols would not wear nearly as much blue, if any at all. He would have encouraged John Ward to stay on longer as Voice of the Vols and at least continue to broadcast the football games. He wouldn't have allowed long-building of sky boxes, either.

Speaking of sky boxes, there's one in Clinton my dad built. His property is right behind the Clinton High football field and on Friday nights, if you look down behind the north end zone, you can see dad and others watching the Dragons play.

On football Saturdays, you'll find us at Neyland Stadium, section N, rooting for the Vols. Dad, who just turned 80 last month, will be standing and rooting the Vols on. Please don't tell him to

If there's one thing I've learned from dad about being a Vol fan, it's this: "Shakers don't make

Jordan Bowden may be one of several new faces in the University of Tennessee men's basketball program. But he's certainly no stranger to Knoxville Area hoops

Bowden, a 2014 Carter High School graduate, made a return to K-Town for opening night of the ninth annual Pilot Rocky Top Basketball League last week and showed that he was perhaps ready to make the leap into NCAA Division I basketball.

He scored 16 points in his return to his hometown but his Knoxville News-Sentinel team came up on the short end of a 123-112 decision to DeRoyal Industries Wednesday night at Catholic High School.

Despite the loss, Bowden said that playing in the Pilot Rocky Top Basketball League is special.

"I grew up coming to the Rocky Top League games," said Bowden, who is the first incoming freshman to receive a basketball scholarship since Karns High product Doug Roth got a full ride in 1985. "It's special for me to get the chance to play here. I grew up watching Tennessee play so this is really special to me. "It's special because they don't usually don't recruit

After a stellar career with the Hornets in Strawberry Plains, Bowden wasn't highly recruited. So he decided to attend prep school at 22 Foot Academy at Shannon Forest High School in Greenville, South Carolina.

Without prep school, Bowden (who was an all-state standout and the District 3-AA Player of the Year during his senior campaign at Carter High) might not have had the opportunity to play big-time college basketball.

He said that his time in South Carolina allowed him to showcase his talent, work on his defense and refine his jump shot.

"At 22 Foot Academy, we're in the gym all the time," he said. "The coaches are in the gym all the time. They would play with us and they were always with us when "I wasn't really recruited out of high school, so I went the prep route and there were always college coaches coming to our games. I was on a bigger stage and I got a lot of recognition. The biggest thing I was able to do was improve my defense. And I was able to work on my

a weekly column by Dr. Jim Ferguson

Barbarians at the Gate

At the beginning of the movie Gladiator, the Roman emperor, Marcus Aurelius, is on campaign battling barbarians in what is current day Vienna, Austria. To a Roman, someone not a Roman was a barbarian, just as Hebrews referred to someone not Jewish as a gentile. Marcus Aurelius was considered a good emperor, as contrasted with others like Caligula. Aurelius was a philosopher and his Meditations is still revered. However, in 180 AD he was resisting the invasion of Roman territory by tribes of Germanic barbarians. Apparently, Aurelius believed a country without borders isn't a

The principal responsibility of government is to protect its citizens. George Bush took us to war in Iraq after Bin Laden and Al Qaeda (which means the base) used safe havens in Iraq to launch the 9/11 attacks on Wall Street's Twin Towers. It was argued that we should fight Islamic terrorism "over there" rather than here. Bush's policy of nation building in the Middle East was a failure, and worsened by Obama's politically motivated exodus from that fledgling democracy. And now the Middle East is in flames and Islamic terrorism is on "Main Street" in San Bernardino and Orlando. I no longer feel safe because our government refuses to protect us and the police are not able to protect us. The government actually hampers our military with politics "over there." And the fifth column (look it up) media here blame American bigotry and the NRA for Orlan-

For unknown reasons, the attack in Orlando has affected me more than an any other terrorist attack since 9/11. Perhaps the sheer carnage shapes my feelings. Perhaps it's because those poor people were slaughtered by a perverted religious philosophy and abject evil. It's pathetic, but totally in character that Hillary and Democrats blame the Second Amendment for the murders instead of Islamic terrorism. France has very strict gun laws, but those laws didn't stop the Islamic murderers in Paris. Terrorists will always find ways to acquire or make weapons to kill. The Boston Marathon Islamic fanatics ignored our laws which prohibit making pipe bombs. And Timothy McVeigh found a way to use fertilizer to kill Americans.

I am a conservative. I am a Christian. And I have a concealed weapon permit. According to the ACLU, I'm the problem because I'm a representative of what they call the "Christian right." Obama's head of the Department of Homeland Security is Jeh Johnson. He recently said that "right wing groups pose as much of a threat as radical Islamists." Mr. Johnson, I'm not aware of any Methodists slaughtering people. And I can assure you I pose no risk to my family, my neighbors or other law abiding Americans. In fact, whether they know it or not, these citizens are safer around me because I've vowed not to be slaughtered. I may die resisting evil, but I will not "go quietly into the night."

A republic is a type of government predicated on the rule of law. Our representative republic works because the vast majority of Americans agree to abide by our laws. I understand why it is against the law to carry a weapon into a bar where alcohol is served. However, one can imagine a different outcome in Orlando if one brave individual with a 9mm Glock said, "I may die, but I won't be slaughtered by this monster." On 9/11, Todd Beamer and his group were huddled in the back of Flight 93, hijacked by Islamic terrorists. Mr. Beamer uttered the now famous, "Let's roll," and led the charge to either retake command of the airplane turned missile by the terrorists, or crash the plane before it reached the Capitol or the White House. Incidentally, no firearms were used by the 9/11 hijackers.

Recently, former United Nations Secretary John Bolton was interviewed by a television talking head. This "newsperson" was flummoxed by Bolton's assertion that we must stand up to the scourge of Islamic terrorism and defeat it instead of appeasing it or tolerating such a perverse ideology. The credulous woman had apparently forgotten that America stood up against Nazism and defeated it. The Third Reich was far more powerful than ISIS. But that was a time when there were men and women who believed in America.

There are good people left in this troubled land and there are fine Muslims as well. We don't hear much from the latter, perhaps because they are afraid of speaking out against the hate which has taken over sizable portions of their religion. An exception is Zuhdi Jasser, an American, a former captain in the United States Navy, and an internist with subspecialty training in Nuclear Medicine. He is a leader in the Reform Movement of Islam. You should go to gatestoneinstitute. org and read their declaration, which I see as the only hope for Islam. I envision Jasser as comparable to Martin Luther in the 16th century who spoke out against abuses of the Christian Church. Luther was put on trial for his life where it was demanded he recant his beliefs. He famously said, "I cannot and will not recant anything, since it is neither safe nor right to go against conscience."

We live in "fortress" America watching the results of Hillary Clinton's and Obama's Arab Spring. We see Europe committing suicide as Islamists flood in among the refugees of the Arab Spring. We see our own laws and borders ignored. We see America threatened by ruinous debt, utopian world government philosophy and the social engineering of liberal progressives. America suspended immigration between the mid 1920s and the mid 1960s to allow assimilation of the vast number of immigrants who came here in the 19th and early 20th centuries. Jimmy Carter suspended Iranian immigration and deported thousands of Iranian students. Obama has suspended immigration from Muslim countries many times during his Presidency. How is Trump's call for a temporary halt of Muslim immigration any different?

Recently, Congressman Chuck Fleischmann said it best in a television interview about Islamic terrorism. "We need to be correct, not politically correct." If we continue to sign trade deals that send jobs away from America, spend beyond our means and allow "barbarians" through the gate, the last bastion of freedom called America will end, and the world will not recover for a long time, if ever.

The Fourth of July and Dogs

Our history is rich in inspiring stories of how our founding fathers fought for our separation from British rule. We often neglect the history of our country and the important role the dogs of our Founding Fathers played in early America. During the siege of Yorktown in 1781, a large British Bulldog chased cannonballs fired at Colonial troops; obviously all dogs do not fear loud noises. In October 1777 after the Battle of Germantown, Colonial troops found a foxhound identified as belonging to British General William Howe. General George Washington cleaned, brushed, fed, and returned the cats have a heightened sense of sound and smell. Fireworks are guaranteed to deliver a multisensory extravaganza for your dog or cat. Fireworks are packed with loud noises, flashes of bright light, and smells of sulfur. It's no wonder 80% of dogs loathe the Fourth of July celebrations.

Hobo the Wonder Dog suggests the following safety tips for keeping your four-legged family members comfortable and safe during the Fourth of July Holi-

- Create a special place indoors where your pets feel safe. Place it away from doors and windows for a retreat from the festivities.
- Stay with your pet during fireworks and be normal as possible. Your dog will pick up on your feelings of frustrations and a perception of danger that can intensify their fear.
- Keep windows, curtains, and doors closed. If your

No doubt the Fourth of July holiday is stressful for our pets. Preparation with the above tips will help you and your trusted four-legged friends survive the holiday with the least stress possible. Observe your pets, if they start trembling, hiding, pacing, vocalizing, or being destructive, do not scold or coddle them. This may aggravate their noise phobia and make things worse. Research studies on desensitizing your dog from loud noises can be effective but usually

Not all dogs are fearless of sounds and will chase cannon-balls shot from a cannon. Remember act normal, do not scold or coddle, plan ahead, and you and your pet will find freedom from the noises of the holiday. Two hundred thirtynine years ago, General William Howe learned a valuable lesson: having your dog properly identified and tagged is your best bet of being reunited with your dog in the event you are separated.

General Charles Lee, Second in Command to George Washington during the Revolution, wrote: "I think the strongest proof of a good heart is to love dogs and dislike mankind."

An Evening of Family Worship and Praise

The Collingsworth Family is coming to East Tennessee for one appearance only! Excitement, spiritual familyanointing, emphasis, and musical excellence are what you can expect to find when you step across the threshold of the worship center of Wallace Memorial Baptist Church, Knoxville, Tennessee on Friday, June 24, 2016 for an "Evening of Family Worship and Praise with The Collingsworth

Since their first engagement together as musicians for a church camp in Petersburg, Michigan in August, 1986 until now, the ministry God has given Phil and Kim has expanded and flourished until it is a full-time livelihood that involves their entire family. Their boundaries of influence have expanded until they have sung and played all over the United States (as well as internationally) into their 27th year of ministry. Their constant, persistent attention to cutting-edge arranging, musical excellence, and a proper balance of spiritual emphasis are the keys to the success God has helped them tap.

In January 2000, Phil and Kim transitioned to a new, all-concert ministry. They began recording professionally currently utilize Nashville's most award-winning producers, Wayne Haun and David Clydesdale. This new emphasis began to expand their boundaries rapidly. Their home has seen the addition of four children across the years and the children are now very actively involved in the ministry. Their two oldest daughters are quite proficient on the violin and play at each of their concerts. Their entire family sings together in an ensemble. Kim is wellknown for her phenomenal mastery of the piano and the extraordinary talent God has given her is a part of each concert, as well as trumpet solos from Phil. Their newest full-scale studio project, "That Day Is Coming," released September 2015, includes their current national radio single, "When He Carries Me Away," written by Adina Bowman and Rachel

They previously released a "first" in the Christian Music Industry: filming two full length music videos at the famed Music Hall in Cincinnati, Ohio, the home of the world-class Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. The two filmings were the first Christian concerts ever to be filmed at a major symphony venue. They have also released two videos filmed in High Definition by Gaither Television Productions with the Flint Symphony Orchestra, Flint, Michigan.

On January 1, 2004, they signed an exclusive booking agreement with The Dominion Agency of Waynesville, North Carolina, which now represents them in all personal appearances. On March 1, 2011, they moved into a new multiyear, exclusive recording agreement with StowTown Records out of Nashville, one of Gospel Music's newest and most exciting record companies, owned by Ernie Haase and Wayne Haun. Their ministry has been featured on the nation's largest gospel music syndicated radio program, The Gospel Greats with Paul Heil as well as on Daniel Britt & Friends on XM/SIRIUS Satellite Radio's Enlighten. Their music is regularly featured on Enlighten, GMT (Gospel Music Television), The DayStar Television Network, and has also been featured in one hour prime-time specials on the

INSP Television Network. The Collingsworth Family, at the personal invitation of Bill and Gloria Gaither, appeared on the newest Homecoming

Series taping filmed at the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville. They have also been added as regulars on many of the Gaither Homecoming Concerts, making appearances with Gaithers in some of their largest venues in the US and Canada. Their personal appearance schedule shows the broad appeal their family emphasis has, performing in all types of venues across the US, the Cayman Islands, and recently in Sweden.

The rapid expansion they have seen in their allconcert ministry is a direct result of the emphasis they have placed on the power of prayer. Each Tuesday evening, they hold a private prayer meeting in their home for the specific purpose of praying for the salvation of their children and the expansion of their ministry. Since the beginning of these weekly prayer meetings in 2000, the doors of opportunity for ministry have opened to them, crossing all evangelical denominational boundaries. Phil and Kim's entire purpose is to give the talent God has loaned them back to their Creator as a sacrifice of praise. Russ Woolard, President of New Destiny Productions is pleased to showcase The Collingsworth Family on what will be a magical evening. Tickets are available now by calling 1-800-965-9324 or online www.itickets.com.

Now, I know I made some corny fish jokes, and they do have great seafood, so I'll I dive into my two favorite seafood dishes I had the pleasure to enjoy. One is the Cilantro Lime Grilled Shrimp: Two full skewers of cilantro lime marinated grilled JUMBO Gulf shrimp served on a bed of wild rice pilaf. I emphasize the size because when it comes to shrimp, I really like to bite into my shrimp! It will set you back about $17.99 but it is worth it for two skewers of jumbo shrimp. (Jumbo shrimp-That's always funny to say, right?)

Another tasty favorite is the Grilled Mahi Mahi: a fresh Mahi Mahi Fillet, lightly seasoned and accentuated with a tropical pineapple salsa for $21.99. I make pineapple and mango salsa at home, but it's nice to let someone else do the work, with the same delectable an appetizer, try the Fried Green Tomatoes with cornmeal breading. These are different than what I'm used to. I'm used to FGT served with roasted red pepper cream or a Remoulade. These are topped with Feta cheese and Pico de Gallo on greens with balsamic reduction for $8.99. Another succulent southern precursor to your meal is the pimento cheese appetizer. It's made traditional southern style with local Tennessee Sweetwater smoked cheddar. How neat is that???

At this point I'll mention that the beef Bullfish uses is aged Grand Champion Angus Beef. One of my favorites is the Bullfish Grill Burger. Oh-My-Gosh! 1/2 pound of Angus beef burger topped with their special melted pimento cheese, bacon jam and pickled red onions, lettuce and tomato served on a freshly made bun. I hope they read this as I would suggest they use more bacon jam and more pimento, but it's still fantastic and unique at $11.99, served with a side. My side of choice was something you CANNOT pass up. I'm referring to the Pecan Britmeal. Save it for last!

To not mention the Monte Cristo Sandwich would be sinful. You cannot pass this up. Until now, the best one I ever had was at the Blue Bayou at Disneyland. This is a rival. They indulge you with honey baked ham and roasted turkey, American and Swiss cheeses stacked on Wheatberry bread then they lightly batter it and fry it to a golden brown color. Are you salivating yet??? Because they then dust it with powdered sugar and serve it with raspberry pre-

For salad lovers, indulge in the Grilled Chicken Waldorf Salad which will tantalize your taste buds with grilled chicken over crisp mixed greens, aged cheddar cheese, Granny Smith apples, dried cranberries and caramelized pecans. Topping it off is a zingy apple vinaigrette dressing. ($11.99) Yum! Another lovely salad to treat yourself to is the Bullfish Wedge Salad, $8.99 ($14.99 with shrimp). Who can resist a fresh wedge of fresh iceberg lettuce that is topped with homemade bleu cheese dressing, diced tomatoes, chopped Applewood bacon, caramelized pecan halves, bleu cheese crumbles and a

For light eaters, there are small plates available. For our vegetarian friends, besides the salads, they have a terrific Farmer's Market Plate. You can choose from three of nine of their scrumptious side tangy balsamic reduction?

No night is complete without the piece de resistance. You cannot leave without trying their Two-Layer Key Lime Pie. Another twist! They make a layer of traditional custard lime pie then top it with a layer of whipped key lime cream cheese. It doesn't stop there! It's all lovingly placed in a deep dish graham cracker-pecan crust. And (fist pump) topped with homemade whipped cream and fresh toasted coconut. If you don't eat dinner there, at least go there for an aperitif and dessert after the theatre!

vides catering. Happy Hour is Monday through Thursday from 3 to 7 p.m. Join them for half price glasses of wine and $3.00 wells. Also check out some of the signature drinks like the Bullfish Tea or Smoky Mountain Screwdriver. They also have a fine wine list, as well as lagers. They are located at 2441 Parkway in Pigeon Forge. The Importance of Integrity was an audience watching - God. There was a supervisor watching as well -David's heart. David prayed, "You desire truth in the inner parts; you teach me wisdom in the inmost place." People see the duplicity and hypocrisy of pastors getting caught up in sexual sin, government leaders making promises to get elected they can't fulfill, and fathers who say "Do what I say, not what I do." It is unreasonable to expect others to make wise choices if leaders of government, churches, and families are not doing so. Spiritual leaders lead by example, not mere words. I recently read the story of a stressed-out Christian woman's conference speaker who was impatiently tailgating a man's car at rush hour. Suddenly the light in front of the man turned yellow. He probably could have beaten the red light, but he played it safe and stopped. This incensed the "Christian" speaker. She hit the horn, screaming in frustration. Then, in mid-rant, she heard a tap on her window and looked up into the face of a police officer. He ordered her out, handcuffed her, and took her to the station where she was fingerprinted and locked in

After some time, the cell opened and an officer escorted her back to the booking desk, where the arresting officer said, "I'm sorry for this mistake. You see, I pulled up behind your car while you were blowing your horn, flipping the guy off in front of you, and cursing a blue streak. When I noticed the Choose Life licenseplate holder and the What Would Jesus Do? bumper sticker, plus the chromeplated fish emblem on the trunk, I just knew it had to be a stolen car." Fathers (and everyone else for that matter), have the courage to do the right thing, both when others are watching and when no one else is looking. Be a person of integrity and never forget your role as a spiritual leader.
