Thursday was special for Vietnam era veterans at the World's Fair Park those soldiers, sailors and airman were honored in a special ceremony by Vet2Vet Tn. The ceremonies were hosted by Vet2Vet President Freddie J. Owens.

Each Vietnam and Vietnam Era veteran was honored with a proclamation and a Vietnam service pin.

Owens noted the 50th anniversarv of the Vietnam War and noted the "valor of the men and women who served." He said the Vietnam Era veterans served to "protect the ideals we hold dear" and spoke of the "scars, seen and unseen" that many have. "This commemoration is for you," he told a large audience of veterans. Knox County Mayor Tim Burchett, the sponsor of the event, spoke briefly and introduced representatives of national, state and local veteran service officers. Unfortunately our Vietnam veterans didn't get the love and respect they deserved when returning home from war," Burchett said, "This gives us a chance to honor their service and sacrifice." Mayor Burchett presented a proclamation to Owens to recognize "Vietnam Veterans Recognition Day." "I'm a Christian. I owe everything in my life except my salvation to the men and women in uniform," Burchett said.

Misdemeanor v. Felony Offenses

As complicated as the criminal justice may seem, there are really only three different levels of offenses: infractions, misdemeanors, and felonies.

An infraction is something simple like a speeding ticket or a moving violation, where a police officer will write you a ticket and you are required to pay a fine or maybe even show up in court. The offenses are punishable by a monetary means only. If you face any jail time at all, then it's not an infraction, its something else. Also, you are not entitled to an appointed attorney on infractions because you are not facing potential jail time.

Now, if you

fine, you could

A misdemeanor is punishable by jail time up to 11 months and 29 days (less than one year) and ranges from class A to class C.

A class C misdemeanor would be something like criminal trespassing or public intoxication. A class C misdemeanor is the lowest level misdemeanor, and is punishable by no more than 30 days in jail. A class B misdemeanor, don't take care of on the other hand, is punishable by up to 6 months your infraction, like you miss a in jail. A couple of class B court date or you misdemeanors are prostidon't pay your tution and littering.

The most common class face addition-A misdemeanor is DUI: al charges such First Offense. You potentially face just under one year and jail, not to mention probation, and a whole bunch of fines.

Felonies includes everything above a misdemeanor and range from Class E to Class A. These are criminal charges that are punishable for a year or greater.

A class E felony, which the lowest level, is something like statutory rape or cruelty to animals and is usually punishable by 1 to 2 years in jail.

those individuals face anywhere from 15 to 60 years in jail....if not the death penalty.

In the State of Tennessee, if you are a convicted felon or agree to plead to a felony charge, then you are forever prevented from owning or carrying a firearm, serving on a jury, or voting in an election. This is not the case in every state, but that is the current law in Tennessee.

Another thing to consider is this: if you are convicted of or plead to a felony charge, then you will most likely not have to serve the entirety of the time on which you are convicted. Many times when an individual enters a plea on a felony charge, they don't

The highest class of spend one day in jail. They serve somewhere between felony offenses is A, and are sent out on probation.

> Due to the severe overcrowding in our jails, probation and parole are used to keep individuals under supervision the state or the county.

> When someone receives probation instead of their full sentence, it is called a suspended sentence. Those placed on probation still have to comply with its strict regulations, which include random drug screening and paying fees. If individuals fail to comply with their probation, that is when they are most likely to serve a long period of their original sentence in jail.

> Misdemeanors offer similar opportunities to avoid jail altogether. For example: On a DUI (first-time offense), most offenders 48 hours to 10 days in jail. This means you are pleading to a Class A misdemeanor, which carries with it up 11 months 29 days in jail, but you are only having to serve 48 hours typically on those charges and you are placed on probation for the remainder of the year. BUT, if you violate your probation, then you could have to spend the rest of the year in jail.

October 17, 2016 City Council Will the new trash system restrict homeowners?

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

The proof is in the pudding, as they say, and within Knoxville's new trash pickup program and contract with Waste Collection of Tennessee are a couple things that might cause residents some concerns.

Within the contract, which states that most homes will receive a city-supplied, 95-gallon wheeled trash cart by December 31st of this year, is a requirement that the trash collector will only pick up trash from within that one container. The contract says that the one container only collection would begin "after a period of transition" or January 1st, 2017.

If there's more trash curbside than can fit into the container the contractor is to notify the city.

The restriction of how much trash a resident can put out isn't new but current regulations allow for more than 95 gallons.

To "educate" the city trash containers and the new regulations the city council approved an 18-month contract with Kelly Fletcher's PR firm and that agreement has several stipulations involving the duties of the outside public relations company.

That contract will run about $200,000 with $150,000 for the first two phases of the campaign. The agreement calls for the PR firm to work with the city through 2017. The goal of the public relations campaign is to convince homeowners to recycle. The PR effort will also involve public hearings, mailings, focus groups, and the like to get people's remarks.

Roughly 62,000 homes and apartments are to be have overflow trash and served with the new trash pickup program. The trash collection contract, including the new containers, is for about $3.8 million. Currently the city spends about $4.9 million a year for contracted trash pickup with Waste Collection of Tennessee, residents about the new which is the current bidder. The plan is to save money and, the city is saying, the cost of the containers will be covered in savings in two years.

> "The city will encourage residents to fit all trash in the cart, there will not be any requirements to do this before January 1st and there are no plans for there to be any type of fines for overflow set outs unless it raises to the level of being a codes violation," Chad Weth of the Public Service Department told The Focus.

> "That is no different than our current system. What we do hope is that the cart system allows us to encourage recycling, especially for households that always don't recycle," he said.

"We've have asked our contractor (3-8 months after the introduction) to notify the city if an address consistently has overflow trash. From there on we (the City Staff) will reach out to the resident and work with

"With a recycling can, a household has room for 190 gallons of waste. Few households will need more. If there's a large household and they don't want to recycle or still need more room our contractor has agreed to pick up and empty another 95gallon cart for a small fee" Weth said.

Councilman Finbarr Sanders said he's had some questions from citizens about the size of the large cart and was told the trash contractor will continue to give "backdoor" service to the handicapped where workers will "come up the driveway and get their trash."

Beginning in January the disposal of glass in trash bins will not be permitted. The market value of glass for recycling has dropped drastically and drop off points for glass products will be provided. The switch to one large container and the option of getting recycle containers will bring a major change to Knoxville's trash collection and, supposedly, the city may be listening to citizens during the outside contracted public relations campaign.

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

When Kassie Ritchey talks about ReBath of Knoxville she's full of pride about the company and her family's involvement there. "We are family-owned and operated and try to treat everyone as family," she explained.

Kassie and her husband Steve are assisted in the company by Steve's sister, brother-in-law and nephew. The couple told The Focus that they are glad they found ReBath as a franchise to invest in as they have been very pleased with the results. After five years the family business now serves a very broad area ranging from Crossville to the North Carolina border and from the Kentucky line to the Sweetwater area.

Rebath of Knoxville's number one selling service is converting the tub to an easily accessible shower.

"People want to stay in their homes for as long as possible," Kassie said, adding, "More importantly, as safe as possible. Grab bars, seats, and doors are just a few of the ways you can customize your showers."

popular request is making the shower in the master bathroom a larger one.

Rebath of Knoxville offers a wide variety of products and services to choose from. They can come do a simple tub to tub conversion or even completely remodel the entire bathroom, such as installing vanities, countertops, toilets and flooring. They have very experienced employees that care about you and your home.

"Our number one focus is customers and customer service," said Kassie

The parent company has been in business for many years and offers a Durabath homeowner a lifetime war- time one of our Design ranty against cracking and breaking, all while being able to clean it with a soft cloth and no harsh chemicals. "The moment my husband saw the quality of the product he was convinced others would want She says the next most it too!" she told The Focus, adding that this is important to Steve as he is also a builder.

Our Neighborhoods South Knoxville on the move

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

South Knoxville's link with "downtown" Knoxville is the Henley Street Bridge and that entrance to the south is slowly getting a huge improvement. Although many businesses suffered when the bridge was closed for construction a few years ago, the area seems to be rebounding now. The stretch of Chapman Highway from the bridge to Seymour is now as busy as usual, if not more so. As you cross the bridge you can't help but notice the changes at the former Baptist Hospital complex. You may also notice that the former Kern's Bakery Building looks a little different.

There are several meetings and events this week for the public that deal with the changes south of the river.

Fort Dickerson

The public is being invited to the Kern's Bakery Building, 2110 Chapman Highway, today at 5:30 to discuss the Fort Dickerson Park and quarry lake improvements. The city, Legacy Parks Foundation, Aslan Foundation and Five Points Up is hosting its third East Knoxville Communitywide Cleanup on Saturday, October 22 from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. The event kicks off at the Harvest Center Plaza parking lot, 2410 Martin Luther King Jr. Ave.

"If we jointly take effort to clean our neighborhood, everybody wins," said Albert Nelson, Five Points Up member and manager of the Knoxville - Knox County Community Action Committee East Neighborhood Center.

Participating community residents will meet for a kickoff at Harvest Center Plaza and then disperse into their neighborhoods to pick up litter. Snacks and beverages and the use of cleanup tools, gloves and supplies will be provided to participants at no cost. The event will also feature tips on maintaining a clean community. The coalition is encouraging everyone who lives, works, worships and plays in the area to participate.

Event partners include the Knoxville - Knox Community County Action Committee East Neighborhood Center, East Knoxville Business and Professionals Association, Eternal Life Harvest

Center, HomeSource East Tennessee, Keep Knoxville Beautiful, Knox County Health Department, Project GRAD Knoxville, Smoke-Free Knoxville, The Village of Knoxville, and WJBE. Cold Springs Neighborhood Watch, OCO (OUR Community Organization) and other neighborhood groups are also involved.

A community-led group, Five Points Up hopes to improve the health of those living and working in the area by increasing the sense of community through local activities and events. The group's mission is to unify and beautify East Knoxville through increased community engagement and community pride.

According to the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, promoting meaningful community participation builds trust and relationships among neighbors, empowering them to become advocates for their communities. Neighborhood involvement produces numerous benefits, including mobilizing the community to reach health-related goals and empowering residents to change behaviors and improve health outcomes.

The Candoro Arts & Heritage Center is located at 4450 Candora Avenue in South Knoxville.

October 17, 2016 What Happened To Hallowe'en?

The sidewalks will soon be filled with goblins, ghosts, and ghoulish costumes, worn by children and adults.

Whether you like it or not, many play at being scary. The sad fact of the matter is Hallowe'en is actually scary--in real life, in this day and age.

When I was young, we would gather our paper bags and go from door to door, squealing "Trick or Treat." Usually we traveled on the streets in our own neighborhood. Sometimes our parents would go with us, especially with the little ones, but most of us went with a group. In our classroom at school, Halloween parties were the norm. We would dress up at home and walk to school in our costumes. There were candies and cookies and prizes for the funniest, scariest costumes. etc.

But, oh no! Not today! Ghosts and goblins are not allowed in schools. I don't really know, of course, what goes on in schools today, so I asked my grandchildren and they said, yes, they have parties, but no costumes. Quite a few don't even celebrate Hallowe'en at all.

Let's have a look at how Hallowe'en came into being. Many, many years ago it was a time of celebration and superstition. It was thought that it originated with the ancient Celtic festivals of Samhein, when people would light bonfires and wear costumes to ward off roaming ghosts.

(Samhein marks the end of the harvest season and the beginning of winter or the "darker half" of the year).

It wasn't long until the custom went world-wide. In the 19th century it became popular in America but was extremely limited in colonial New England because of the rigid Protestant belief systems there. Later, there was a move to mold Hallowe'en into a holiday more about community and neighborly get-togethers than about ghosts, pranks, and witchcraft.

When the Roman Empire conquered the majority of the Celtic territory they organized a festival in late October to honor Pomona, the Roman goddess of fruits and trees.

The symbol of Pomona was the apple which explains the tradition of "bobbing" for apples.

The holiday is mainly for the young. It is drastically different these days. I am not against change if it's for the better, but some of the changes today bode no good.

Especially be careful of dressing like a clown. I mentioned this before but some of the clowns of today have done an about-face. Beware! Have a safe and happy Hallowe'en!

Senator Howard Baker PART TWO

By Ray Hill rayhill865@gmail.com

After having lost a close race for the United States Senate in 1964, Howard H. Baker, Jr. resolved to run again in 1966. Senator Ross Bass would have to defend his seat after only two years, as he was completing the term of the late Estes Kefauver. The winner of the 1966 election would serve a full sixyear term.

Howard Baker enjoyed practicing law and would later tell his biographer it was the happiest time of his career. Yet he also felt the tug of politics and heeded that siren's call.

Baker again announced he would be a candidate for the Republican nomination for the United States Senate. Unlike 1964, this time Baker faced a primary opponent when Ken Roberts announced he, too, would seek the GOP nomination. Despite a spirited run, Roberts lost badly; Baker won the Republican nomination with more than seventy-five percent of the vote.

The Democratic contest for the nomination was yet again another hard fought contest between Ross Bass and Frank Clement. This time Governor Clement reversed his defeat in the 1964 primary, edging past Senator Bass by little more than eighteen thousand votes out of some seven hundred and fifty thousand ballots cast.

continued to change with the increasing importance of television. In the past, candidates had relied upon newspaper advertising and personal contact through speeches, campaigning in courthouse squares and thundering oratory. Governor Frank Clement was a master of the personal speech, but his appeal was not especially made for television. A brilliant orator, Clement was selected to give the keynote speech at the 1956 Democratic National Convention, which was carried live over television. Even many of the governor's friends believed it was one of the worst speeches of his career, a long and rambling affair that did not translate well to television viewers. Able to quote the Bible and any number of other literary sources from memory, Clement remained a favorite of thousands of Tennesseans who came to hear him speak. Yet television audiences and attractive, Howard Baker was a candidate who did translate well on television. It would prove to be an effective medium for Baker throughout his long career.

Naturally, eager reporters immediately wondered if Howard Baker was referring to the John Birch Society and the candidate instantly replied, "Yes." Both the Memphis Press Scimitar and the Chattanooga Times endorsed Baker's candidacy precisely because of his forthright declaration, according to his biographer. Few notable Republicans offered Ken Roberts support in his primary campaign. One notable exception was Louise Reece, the widow of longtime Congressman B. Carroll Reece of upper East Tennessee. Mrs. Reece had been elected to Congress, like Howard Baker's stepmother, to fill the vacancy when her husband had died of lung cancer in 1961. Mrs. Reece had retired in 1962 to make way for the redoubtable Jimmy Quillen, who would serve in Congress for more than thirty years. Quillen was supporting Baker, as did Congressmen John J. Duncan and Bill Brock.

all out war. Far less civil than the Republican contest, Senator Ross Bass suffered a public relations catastrophe while attending a glittering Democratic fund raising dinner in Washington, D. C. The senator was being introduced by a rather thoughtless Master of Ceremonies to a little song that referred to him as "Big Mouth Bass", although it did acknowledge the beauty of his lovely wife Avenell. Senator Bass, who had heard the obvious play on his name many times before, inexplicably became quite angry American to serve as a judge since Reconstruction. Benjamin Hooks became a Shelby County judge due to Clement's appointment and many blacks, having supported Ross Bass two years earlier, returned to the governor's political camp.

Frank Clement did indeed reverse his 1964 defeat, narrowly beating Senator Bass by just over eighteen thousand votes out of some seven hundred and fifty thousand ballots cast in the Democratic primary. Clement was elated by his primary victory and was confident of his elec-into the Democratic primary to vote for Clement, as many Republicans believed Howard Baker would have an easier time defeating Frank Clement than Senator Bass. There is some reason to believe Bass was correct when one analyzes the election returns from November.

Johnson's Great Society was well under way by the time of the 1966 elections and Howard Baker recalled the "overreach" of Johnson's policies helped to make possible significant Republican gains in the midterm elections.

Baker's wife, Joy, was the daughter of one of the most remarkable politicians ever to grace the national stage. Everett McKinley Dirksen, the golden-throated senator from Illinois, the "Wizard of Ooze" to some, but a shrewd and popular figure for decades. According to Baker's biographer, Lee Annis, Joy once, after an exhausting day of campaigning for her father, told her mother she intended to marry a ditch digger.

Joy Dirksen Baker, while dutifully doing her part for her husband in his campaigns, was happiest in the background. Mrs. Baker readied herself for the 1966 campaign and her famous father would do his part for his son-in-law.

Tennessee politics ernor had cast more than a few longing glances at their respective Senate seats. Governor Clement had lost to Congressman Ross Bass in 1964 and it was his first and only defeat inside a Democratic primary. Clement had lost two constituencies vital to success in a Democratic primary: labor and blacks.

In 1966, Clement could not succeed himself as governor and running for the United States Senate was the only option available to him to remain in public life. Clement also wanted to avenge his defeat at the hands of Ross Bass and he began the last campaign of his life to take the Democratic nomination away from Senator Bass. It was a bruising affair.

Many of Howard Baker's closest friends and family advised him against running again in 1966. Both Joy Dirksen Baker and Senator Everett Dirksen told Baker he should step aside for someone else to suffer the defeat they foresaw in tion on the Vietnam War the offing. Baker's biographer Lee Annis pointed to Baker being buoyed by a poll that revealed sixty-five percent of Tennesseans would consider voting for a Republican in 1966. Only forty-one of Tennessee's ninety-five counties had held a Republican primary in 1964; superb organizing would not be a candidate. When Howard Baker did decide to run, Roberts pressed for a debate. Howard Baker largely ignored Roberts and had far better name recognition across the state. It was a wise strategy.

Baker toured much of Tennessee during the primary campaign in an old bus, concentrating his efforts in those counties where there would be a significant GOP vote. Baker spent his time anticipating the general election, reserving his fire not for his primary opponent, but the Democrats and the administration of President Lyndon B. Johnson. The Johnson policy of spending on both "guns and butter" was already becoming increasingly unpopular with the American public. Baker stressed concerns that any average American could easily grasp, such as the big increase in the price of meat.

Howard Baker's posiwas also one the average Tennessean could easily understand. Baker believed Americans should support President Johnson's conduct of the war, but he also readily admitted many Americans were also sick of the war in Southeast Asia.

While the Republican primary contest was rather a sedate affair, the Democrats were waging a lot of attention in the not the least of which was Tennessee press.

Governor Clement had managed to repair many of his relationships with special interest groups all across Tennessee, including blacks. Clement had appointed the first African

Vice President Hubert Humphrey, who wrote to congratulate Clement on his election to the United States Senate.

It was not to be that easy for Frank Clement.

Many nights I dreamed that without effort I could rise and fly into the sky. My soaring in the blue took me to views of our house and yard that I'd never before experienced. I suppose that being confined to the home place brought security in the dream. Sometimes I pretended to be a Superman as I jumped from the roof of the house. At other times, I ran along the yard and felt a sense of weightlessness take me over.

They seem like epic movies to me. I'm in no hurry to find out what it's like, but someday I hope I receive a pair of wings like Clarence did in "It's a Wonderful Life." Then I'll know for sure that exhilaration that has only been present in my dreams.

October 17, 2016 Early voting starts Wednesday

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

Are you for Trump or Hillary? How about "Rocky" Roque De La Fuente, Gary Johnson, Alyson Kennedy, Mike Smith or Jill Stein?

Yes, there are other candidates for president.

Early voting begins Wednesday, October 19 and, aside from the presidential election, there are choices also for Congress, the State Senate and House, and several amendments for City of Knoxville voters. Early voting will continue until November 3, followed by the General Election on Nov. 8.

Early voting will be open from 10 a.m. until 6 pm. Monday through Friday and 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. on Saturday. From October 31st until November 3rd the hours are extended from 8 a.m. until 8 p.m.

While you can vote in any early voting location, most people vote closest to their work or home. The locations are: 1543 Downtown West Blvd, Halls Recreation Center at 6933 Recreation Lane, Farragut Town Hall, Carter Branch Library, Love Kitchen, City-County Building, New Harvest Park, 4952 Clinton Highway, 4536 Chapman Highway, Karns Senior Center, and the Baker Center at 1640 Cumberland Avenue.

In the race for Congress, incumbent Republican John J. Duncan, Jr. is being challenged by Democrat Stuart Star. Duncan's sister, Republican Becky Duncan Massey, has no opposition in her reelection for Tennessee State Senator for the 6th to the race between incumbent Republican Eddie Smith and Democrat Gloria Johnson. Johnson held the seat and was defeated by a narrow margin by Smith for the District 13 seat.

In the house race for District 14, Republican Jason Zachary is challenged by Democrat Scott Hackler.

The race for the 15th District house seat has drawn some attention as well. Rick Staples, a community activist and former candidate for the Knox County Commission, replaced Joe Armstrong on the Democratic ballot. He's being challenged by Independent Pete Drew. A write-in candidate, Rhonda "Mousie" Gallman, is waiting an insurgent campaign for the seat. There is no Republican nominee.

Incumbent Republican Bill Dunn is not opposed in his reelection to the District 16 state house seat.

Martin Daniel, incumbent Republican state representative in District 18 is opposed by Democrat Brandi Price. Daniel won a divisive Republican Primary, defeating Steve Hall and two other candidates.

Republican Incumbent Roger Kane, of District 89, faces Democrat Heather C. Hensley.

The City Charter items on the ballot will ask voters to approve moving the primary elections from the last Tuesday in September in odd numbered years to the last Tuesday in August in odd numbered years. The city administration is also asking to amend

Playoff win at state earns Halls golfers 'special' ride home

Folks on Emory Road between Powell and Halls probably were wondering what was going on late last Wednesday night. Two Knox County Sheriff cruisers, with blue lights flashing, escorted a parade of cars from Ingles in Powell to Halls High School.

It was a well-earned tribute for the Halls boys golf team which had captured the TSSAA Class AAA state championship that afternoon in Manchester.

"It's special to see all these people from the community support us and be proud of us," said Halls junior Ryan Hall.

The resilient Red Devils had to work overtime for the title, after seeing their lead evaporate in the closing holes of regulation play at the WillowBrook Golf Club.

Halls and Science Hill of Johnson City tied with 36-hole team scores of seven-over-par 583.

The two teams remained tied after each totaled 1-under on and juniors Ryan Hall and Jake Hall (no relation) each carded a birdie on Hole No. 2 to give the Red Devils a one-stroke margin of victory. It was Halls' first state golf crown in 30 years, and a member of that 1986 team, Donnie Cooper, texted his congratulations to the team. "On the way home, Donnie Cooper texted Dad and told us all 'congrats, good playing,'" said Ryan Hall.

Hockey returns as Ice Bears lose preseason opener

By Ken Lay

Now that it's mid-October, it's Hockey Time in Tennessee. Area fans got a preview of Knoxville's lone professional sports franchise --- the Ice Bears --- Friday night at the Knoxville Civic Coliseum.

The Ice Bears and their fans what to wait for the team's only home exhibition game as the opponent was stuck in traffic on its way to Downtown Knoxville.

The Ice Bears have a loyal fan base and the relatively small crowd of 2,330 didn't seem to mind waiting as the game's face off was delayed for nearly an hour.

Once the Huntsville Havoc finally to the arena and onto the ice, the fans were ready and so was Knoxville's Southern Professional Hockey League Club.

The Ice Bears would ultimately come up on the short end of a 5-4 decision to the Havoc. But Knoxville would strike first as rookie Jake Rivera gave Knoxville a 1-0 lead with just over a minute gone in the first period.

Rivera was awarded a spot on Knoxville's training camp roster after he impressed Mike Craigen in a recent free-agent tryout. His marker represented the only scoring in the opening frame.

The Havoc pulled even When Robbie Simpson tallied early in the second stanza. Huntsville played from behind all night and didn't lead until Nolan Kiser scored the eventual game-winning goal with 1:35 remaining in regulation.

Craigen did not address the media after the game as he and his staff retreated to his office to discuss some key personnel decisions.

Knoxville played another preseason game Sunday in Mississippi (results were not available at press time). The Ice Bears open the regular season Friday night at Roanoke. The two teams will make the trip to East Tennessee Saturday for Knoxville's home opener. Many of the players in exhibition action won't likely be on the roster when things get real later this week.

By Steve Williams

There are two weeks of the regular season remaining on the local high school football scene, but already some regional champs have been crowned.

Gibbs had an open date Friday night but earned the Region 2-5A title anyway by virtue of Heritage's 17-10 win over West.

The Eagles, who are 4-0 in region play, return to action this week with a non-region assignment at Carter. They will play their final region game at West on Oct. 28.

The picture was quite clear. Central and Anderson County were two football teams going in opposite directions.

The Bobcats are riding a five-game win streak and coming on strong for the 2016 homestretch. The Mavericks are running a different offense after losing their starting quarterback for the season two weeks ago.

Shootout win nets title for CAK soccer

By Ken Lay

It took a penalty kicks shootout to crown the 2016 District 4-A/AA girls soccer champion. The game between rivals Christian Academy of Knoxville and Catholic High School couldn't be decided in 80 minutes of regulation and a pair of overtime periods.

The top-seeded Lady Irish and the Lady Warriors played a to a 1-1 draw in regulation and the two longtime Cedar Bluff Area foes didn't produce a district champion.

The Lady Warriors (13-6-1) won the shootout 4-2 Thursday night at Blaine Stadium.

"This was a great game and both teams invested a lot of energy in last night's game," CAK Coach Ried Estus said by phone Friday. "We're resting today and we're getting healthy.

"We're going to rest and get healthy this weekend and we're going to get back at it on Monday."

Emily Patti had CAK's goal in regulation. She also tallied in the penalty kicks shootout.

Estus also noted that the Lady Irish (11-6-2) had the Lady Warriors and Lady better and speedier ath- Irish have tangled for the letes.

"They had the superior team," he said. "They have a lot of speed on that team. They beat us 3-0 during the regular season but I think we match up well against them.

"This is a healthy rivalry and our kids know each other. They're on a firstname basis and they play with each other on the same club teams. They have superior athletes but we have our advantages that help us match up against them too."

Estus said he's looking forward to Tuesday hosting one of the Region 2-A/ AA elimination semifinal matches.

"We're happy on two The Lady Warriors also counts," he said. "We're tian [in the semifinals] and we're happy to be playing at home."

> In recent years, the regional crown. That may be the case again Thursday night but CAK must get past Rockwood and Catholic must eliminate Grace Christian Academy on the road.

> Estus said he wouldn't mind playing the Lady Irish again but he knows that his team faces a stiff test against the Lady Tigers and he understands that the Lady Rams will also crash the party.

"Rockwood is a very good team and they've really put together some impressive efforts on the field," Estus said. "I would like to say that we will see Catholic again, but Grace Christian has a great team and they have a lot of speed."

The Lady Warriors will host Rockwood (18-4) Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. The Lady Rams will entertain the Lady Irish at 7 p.m.

In District 3-A/AA: Grace won the tournament crown with a 5-1 win over Rockwood.

Allie Dunn, who recently broke the single-season goal scoring record, had two goals and an assist in the title match for the Lady Rams (19-1). Dunn scored four times in Grace's semifinal win early last week against Gatlinburg-Pittman.

Dunn eclipsed a 20-year old record. Farragut's Laura Lauter (now Laura Smith). Smith, who scored 68 goals in 1996, was inducted into the Farragut High School Sports Hall of Fame in February. Dunn now has 71 markers this season.

In District 2-AAA: The fourth time was the charm for South-Doyle's senior class as the Lady Cherokees defeated Morristown West 3-1 Thursday night at home.

"The girls in this senior class probably have one of the best records in school history," South-Doyle coach Adam Massie said. "They've played four times and they won it this year.

"These girls have worked extremely hard and I'm really proud of them.

Against the Lady Patriots, South-Doyle (12-3) got a pair of goals from Lira Mathes. Cameron Gale also scored for the Lady Cherokees, who host Tennessee High in the opening round of the Region 1-AAA Tournament.

In the District 3-AAA championship match at Powell

Friday: Oak Ridge upset the host Panthers 2-0 to avenge last year's loss in the title game.

The Lady Wildcats will host Farragut Tuesday night at 7. Powell will travel to play Maryville Tuesday. The Lady Rebels beat the Lady Panthers during the regular season.

In District 4-AAA: The third-seeded Lady Rebels toppled the fourth seeded Lady Admirals 2-0 after both squads recorded upset wins in Tuesday night's semifinals. Farragut beat top-seeded Bearden 2-1 while the Lady Rebels ousted two-time defending champion Hardin Valley Academy to reach the district final and qualify for regional play.

It took a little more than an hour for Farragut High School to punch its return ticket to the Class AAA State Tournament in Murfreesboro.

The Lady Admirals secured their fifth consecutive trip to the Midstate with a 25-15, 25-12, 25-14 victory over Morristown West Thursday night at the Lynn E. Sexton Gymnasium.

It marked the third straight time that Farragut knocked off the Lady Trojans in a Section 1-AAA match.

The victory appeared to be an easy won for the Lady Admirals, who swept both the District 4-AAA regularseason championship and tournament titles. But Farragut coach Susan Davidson credited Morristown West (34-8) for its effort Thursday night.

"I think Morristown West was better than they were last year," she said. "They had a tough match to get here. They played five games against [Kingsport] Dobyns-Bennett and they're well-coached and they have a really good team."

The Lady Trojans fell

4-AAA Player of the Year Alexis Parker took the ball and served up five consecutive points to extend Farragut's advantage to 14-7.

After a side-out made it 14-8, senior libero Madi Howell scored three consecutive points. Her ace made the score 18-8 and all but polished off the first game.

Morristown West coach Heather Kelly said her squad was competitive early but said some controversial calls changed the complexion of the first game and the matches.

"We've gotten here three years and a row and they've beaten us," Kelly said. "Farragut is just a great team.

"I thought we played well at the start and then this down referee made some tough calls that went against us. I wish that we would've responded a little better than we did."

In the second set, things were again tight until the Lady Admirals broke it open. With the two teams locked in a 3-3 tie, Farragut took a 4-3 lead on a side-out before Shelby

> In the third set, sophomore setter Sydney Cherney gave the home team a 17-2 lead as she went on a 14-point service run.

> "Sydney served great in that third set," Davidson said. "She scored 14 straight points."

> As a sophomore, Cherney will return next season, but Farragut has five seniors who played their final home match Thursday night. Parker, Howell, Anne Abernathy Rawls and Allie Rogers wanted to go out with a bang and they did.

> "We have some seniors who were playing their last match on this floor tonight," Davidson said. "We talked about that before the game and we talked about how we wanted to finish this thing strong."

> Abernathy had 17 kills and four blocks. Parker finished with 18 kills, eight digs and five blocks and Rawls added 11 kills, five blocks and three aces to spark a total team effort.

Abernathy agreed.

"This is our senior year and we're all excited about going back to state," she said.

Lady Spartans to vie for fourth straight title: Webb School of Knoxville needed just 49 minutes to clinch another trip to Murfreesboro. The Lady Spartans made short work as they swept Evangelical Christian School 25-6, 25-9, 25-16 Saturday morning at the Lee Athletic Center.

Kayleigh Hames had 17 kills and 13 kills. Nicklin Hames finished with 15 kills, 27 assists and three aces. Meredith Wallace finished with 14 kills, 12 digs and seven aces.

The Rat Park

Hardly a day goes by without some story, tragedy or crime related to drugs. Statistics tell us that we are in the middle of a drug epidemic and Tennessee is an epicenter. In our state the per capita usage of opioids, like hydrocodone and oxycodone, and the use of benzodiazepines like Xanax is among the highest in the nation. I guess Tennesseans are a nervous bunch, and have a lot of pain. Or is something else at work?

Why do people use drugs? I'm not talking about a glass of wine, a beer or two or taking opioids for postoperative pain. I'm talking about preoccupation with a drug or obsessing over that drug even when it is destructive. Why do people not control themselves and instead let the drug or behavior control them? Why does drug abuse persist in some despite problems at their work or school, despite deteriorating health, financial struggles or legal issues? Why do people sell their body or their soul for a drug that destroys them and even their children?

I'm not a psychiatrist, but emotional problems are common in medicine. A colleague of mine was trained as a family practitioner. However, when he saw how many of his patients suffered from emotional problems he went back and completed a residency in psychiatry. I believe his perspectives as a primary care doctor made him an exceptional psychiatrist. Perhaps it goes both ways.

I've written that an internist is a practitioner who wants to know why things happen. As scientists we believe that if we learn why something occurs, we'll be on the road to know what to do to fix the problem. But, it's complicated because humans are complicated creatures. I've come to understand that the mind and the body are more related than separated. Physical pain colors one's perspective, and emotional issues hurt.

At one time experts thought that drug addiction was a pleasure response issue; addicts use drugs because they enjoy getting high. Early research focused on the neurochemical pleasure responses of drug usage, where drugs stimulated certain areas of the brainstem. Anyone exposed to opioids and alcohol develops tolerance. However, researchers began to ask why only 7% of alcohol users become alcoholics with destructive behaviors. Similarly, it is often quoted that 10% of us are at risk for dependency if exposed to opioids. Certainly, genetic issues are at work, as they are with most human physiology. An example is the higher levels of blood alcohol in Asian and Native American populations due to their low levels of alcohol dehydrogenase, the enzyme which metabolizes (deactivates) alcohol. It stands to reason that Asian populations feel greater effects of alcohol due to the slower metabolism and resulting accumulation of the drug. But, there is more.

Like humans, rats are social creatures and are often used in experimental models. Studies revealed that rats in cages choose opium laced water over pure water, even to the point of overdose. A researcher named Bruce Alexander in the early 1980s hypothesized that isolated rats in cages chose opium because "what else would they do?" So he devised the "rat park" with 200 times as much space as a cage, toys like hamster wheels and multicolored balls were present, there was plenty of good food and dozens of other rats were together, and half were female. Alexander found that rats who could play, fight, eat and have sex ignored the opium water. And even previously addicted rats placed in the rat park stopped using the opium laced water.

Experts now believe drug addiction is more a "desire for escape than seeking pleasure," and more "about feeling less than feeling good." A researcher named Bowlby studied orphans after WWII. He found that children who were fed and sheltered still didn't thrive like other children, and some even died. We now believe that human touch and connection is integral to healthy development. Children denied emotional intimacy or raised in familial instability often learn to avoid the relational connections that failed them as kids.

Now, I'm not a mechanistic Freudian who holds that poor potty training leads to Oedipal conflicts and neuroses. However, I've always wondered why abused children cleave to the abusing parent. They seem to seek emotional connection and ultimately blame themselves for broken bones and broken homes. The same goes for abused spouses.

I'm a guy who believes in personal responsibility and accountability. However, there are those less fortunate than me, and need my understanding and my help. We can rise above our circumstances if we choose to do so. However, embracing the mantle of victimhood is destructive. Understanding and knowledge are empowering, and I'm now more sensitive to the complicated issue of drug addiction than I used to be. And I'm willing to help those who truly want to help themselves.

Despite the researchers' otherwise insightful observations and intriguing theory of substance addiction, they miss one salient point in this Gordian topic. I am a scientist and a theist, and both perspectives are operative in my world view.

In the 10th chapter of Mark, Jesus admonishes his handlers to "let the children come to me, and do not hinder them, for the kingdom of God belongs to such as these." As I read this familiar passage, I thought about the handlers who direct the crowds around the Presidential candidates - though these are not children in any traditional sense. In the story Jesus seems to lend credibility to modern scientists as he places his hands on the children and blesses them. Jesus did not make the sign of the cross, but conveyed to the children through touch an extension of divine goodness.

Yes, we are social creatures and whither without the touch of others. But also, we are creatures in need of the Spirit's touch if we are to be fully alive and to thrive.

3. Decorative pumpkins and corn although not poisonous; can cause upset stomach and diarrhea bringing a whole new meaning to scary. Don't add "Pooptacular" to describe your Halloween.

4. Decorative lights, wires, and cords kept out of reach. Chewed electrical wires can cause electrical burns causing minor to life threatening shock.

8. Some dogs love being dressed in costume but many do not. Only dress your dog in costume if you know they love it and are stress free.

Always have your veterinarian and emergency clinic phone numbers handy in case of an emergency.

Injuries and accidents can ruin the best laid plans of any outing.

8 Safety Tips to Keep Your Dog Stress Free This Halloween

1. Candy is never a good idea. Some candy may contain XYLITOL, a toxic ingredient to dogs even in small amounts. Chocolate can also be dangerous to your pooch so the best practice is no candy.

2. Party supplies, candy wrappers, tin foil, and cellophane are dangerous if swallowed. These items may be irresistible

5. Lighted pumpkins can easily be turned over causing fire and injury.

6. Use common sense with Trick-or-Treaters at your door. Unless your pup is well socialized and enjoys strange scary creatures coming to the door, keep them in a separate room away from the festivities.

7. Costumes: Make sure your dog enjoys being dressed up

PAGE D2 The Knoxville FOCUS On Mission with God

I remember as a kid reading a book my grandfather gave me, "God's Smuggler" by Brother Andrew, who would smug-By Mark gle Bibles behind Brackney, the Iron Curtain in Minister of the Yugoslavia begin-Arlington Church ning in 1957. I of Christ was riveted by this book and the faith of this man who literally put his life on the line by bringing God's Word into nations where the Word of God was illegal. As he would approach the border for his vehicle to be inspected, he would pray: "Lord, in my luggage I have Scripture that I want to take to Your children across this border. When You were on earth, You made the blind eves see. Now. I pray make seeing eyes blind. Do not let the guards see those things You do not want them to see."

God has called us to be bold missionaries. He's called us to face certain danger.

He's called us to go on a mission to show this world exactly what Christianity is all about. Jesus told his disciples to be salt and light so that others may see their good deeds and praise God in heaven (Matthew 5:13-16).

We've been called to fulfill a purpose. We've been called to be more than just a bunch of people who sit inside the four walls of a church building. We have been called to be bold in our faith and to share that faith in Jesus with others. We have a mission set before us. Paul said it this way: "For we are God's workmanship, created in Christ Jesus to do good works, which God prepared in advance for us to do" (Ephesians 2:10).

Peter said, "But in your hearts set apart Christ as Lord. Always be prepared to give an answer to everyone who asks you to give the reason for the hope that you have. But do this with gentleness and respect, keeping a clear conscience, so that those who speak maliciously against your good behavior in Christ may be ashamed of their slander" (1 Peter 3:15-16).

We have the perfect scenario in play for people to witness our hope. It is called the Presidential election. People are flipping out. I know die-hard Republicans and Democrats that are beside themselves, worried, fearful. This is a great time for the people of God who know that this world is not their home to give hope to others. We do pray for our country, but our hope is not in this country, it is in God. We know that God is in control. Nothing gets by Him. Nothing catches Him by surprise. So if God is for us, who can be against us? Like the prophets of God, we can remind the people around us that we have a mission to the nations. We have a mission to this nation. God has planted you here. So, when someone sees your peace, joy, and hope in the midst of uncertainty, we have a chance to give an answer for our hope.

What is the reason for your hope? Peter says it is Christ as Lord (I Peter 3:15). When Christ is Lord of your life, He is your hope. Who better to be in control? Even when it appears that this world is out of control, God is still with His people.
