Attorney Doug Howell updated the Knoxville-Knox County E-911 Board on a new bill from the state legislature that says that any board member that misses two meetings over a 12 month period will automatically be dismissed. The board meets quarterly and two absences would equate half their meetings.

The legislation applies to all board members, even elected officals, until the legislature revises or modifies the rules. Elected officials on the board include Knox County Mayor Tim Burchett, Knoxville Mayor Madeline Rogero and Knox County Sheriff J. J. Jones.

Sheriff Jones asked if the 16 county dispatchers being transferred to the E-911 organization will keep their benefits of longevity, sick and vacation time, etc. Knox County Finance Director Chris Caldwell told the board that benefits are being worked out.

"We'll take those salaries and benefits and move them to E-911," Caldwell said.

He said that the transferring operators may get a pay boost because the E-911 benefits are based on city wages, which are higher than county wages.

Mayor Rogero asked if the E-911 pay will be "made whole" by the county and Caldwell said "Yes."

The E-911 Board voted to keep their current officers, leaving Burchett as chair and Rogero as vice chair. Committee assignments remained the same except for that of Bill Cole, who is retiring. Police Chief David Rausch will head Cole's Finance Committee.

Seymour schools performing in Veterans Day Program

Over 350 students will honor veterans in song at the 2016 Veterans Day Program presented by the Seymour High School Choral Department. This year's program will feature special guest choirs from Seymour Intermediate School, Seymour Middle School, and Boyds Creek Elementary School who will all perform together for the first time.

Mrs. Burkhart, SHS director, stated, "I'm so excited about this year's program! We have been BCES Choirs in our Veterans Day programs for years now, but we have never had all three choirs sing with us at the same time. My high school students have been going to the intermediate and middle schools to help the younger kids, and it has been a great experience for all of them. It is really going to be something to see students from ages 8 to 18 singing together at the same time! This will be a first for all the choral programs in Seymour and will be a wonderful treat for our veterans and members of the Seymour Community." There will be two day featuring SIS, SMS, and shows that are primarily for War Day on their 52-acre visiting veterans, students, and those parents who are unable to attend the night show. Day shows will be at Seymour High School on Thursday, Nov. 3 and Friday, Nov. 4 at 1:30.

The night show will be at First Baptist Church of Seymour on Thursday, Nov. 3 at 7:00 in order to have enough seating for the veterans and the parents.

There is no charge for these programs.

Tate's School hosts Civil War Day

Last week, Tate's School hosted their first Civil campus. This special event was designed to give their fifth grade students a glimpse into the lives of the people and era they have been studying.

Fifth grade teacher Melissa Carey, who came up with the idea to make history come alive, said "Memorizing places, dates and names associated with history is one thing. Living out history is another. It is my desire for students to develop empathy for those who fought hard and sacrificed to make our country great. When we access all the senses in learning, the content becomes accessible and exciting."

Civil War Day included student participation in a Tent Set-Up Contest, Drum Line, Rebel Yell Contest, Capture The Flag game, and a Bandage Your Wounded relay. Various types of weaponry were demonstrated including the firing of a cannon. Students could also sample soldier rations composed of beans, bacon, hardtack, and coffee. Reenactors such as Abe Lincoln, Robert E. Lee, and experts on civil war dress and weapons mingled on site with the students and guests. Joe Tate, co-founder of Tate's School, sounded the bugle throughout the day.

An open house was held in conjunction with Civil War Day for parents seeking an educational home for their children. Future open house dates are November 1 and 2. Visit www.TATESS-CHOOL.com for more information.

Publisher's Position Obama Edict to Affect Testing in Schools

By Steve Hunley, Publisher publisher@knoxfocus.com

For those teachers who have rallied around Board of Education member Amber Rountree's resolution urging that the State of Tennessee issue a waiver for the TN Ready scores, the recent edict from the Obama administration must have been posing a resolution asking that the State of Tennessee not count any tests results for students to determine achievement or teachers for their evaluations.

The Obama administration's Department of Education has already sent a series of letters to deans and college and university presidents across the nation informing them America is not holding those teacher candidates to appropriately high standards. That will be the new standard for ascertaining the quality of Teacher Preparation Programs. Those colleges and universities who seem to be or failing to meet appropriate standards will run the risk of losing federal funds. Former Obama Secretary of Education Arne Duncan has published a letter stating "...the system we have for training teachers lacks rigor, is out of step with the times, and is given to extreme grade inflation that leaves teachers unprepared and their future students at risk." Duncan cites a 2014 report from the National Council on Teacher Quality that states "many of our biggest teacher training programs are twice as likely to graduate students with honors than other programs in the same academic settings." After noting that Cedar Crest graduated 80% of its students in the field of education with honors, compared to 26% of students in other programs - - - and Duncan noted several other such examples - - - the former Education secretary came to the conclusion: "There can only be two explanations for this unsettling phenomenon: either your teacher training programs are attracting an unusually gifted group of students or the standard for honors in education is too low. We know from other studies that it is not the first explanation."

The Obama administration intends to punish those programs it perceives to be performing below

Obviously the Tennessee General Assembly cannot contravene federal rules and regulations. Superintendent Buzz Thomas has been much criticized for his email warning board members the politics of the Rountree resolution are wrong and the timing is worse. With this latest edict from the Obama administration, the Tennessee General Assembly can merely blame the feds for not accepting the Rountree resolution.

Did you know that more than 200 homes in Knoxville are rented out to temporary residents and the homeowners are being looked at as a source of local tax revenue? Did you know there are no local codes regulating that growing sideline business?

For instance, do you have a home, a bedroom or even a bed that you rent during a football game? Airbnb and other internetbased temporary rental companies are making huge inroads into the lodging industry.

Similar to Uber taxi service where an auto owner picks up passengers booked on the internet and takes them to their destination, Airbnb and other companies provide that internet link between homeowners looking for temporary renters and people looking to stay a few days in our community but not wanting a hotel or motel ted, how to collect taxes, room.

Lyons also said there should be "some equity" between short-term rentals and the hotel-motel industry and that the current occupancy tax of 3% may apply.

With the estimated annual income from a short-term rental being only $3,700, based on information Airbnb supplied to the city, one audience member commented they cannot imagine why anyone would want to buy a business license.

Other audience members said that short-term rentals in their neighborhoods would devalue home property values and create traffic, parking and disturbance problems. Several people who rent their homes out to brief visitors disputed the claim, stating that they oversee the renters and are ambassadors of the neighborhoods.

Bigger and better and how the ghost flies. spookier!

That's how one could describe the haunted bank in Fountain City this year.

Kimberly Clapp, with the assistance of teller mates Loraine France and Monya Raby, has the Commercial Bank at 5320 North Broadway all dressed up for Halloween.

"We've added more this year," said Clapp. "More lights, a flying ghost and a big eyeball that lights up and changes colors."

Kids of all ages are welcome to come by and see the decorations anytime Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m., and Halloween day will include some extra attractions.

"We (the tellers) will dress up for Halloween," said Clapp, "and we'll have the fog machine going.

"There will be candy here for the kids. Just come in and browse around."

Kimberly said she will be on hand to even show folks

They've already had a lot of visitors.

"We had a gentleman here the other day who was cashing a check," recalled Clapp. "His kids were out in the car. He went and brought them in and they loved it."

Clapp leads the annual project simply to bring joy to others.

"Like I've said all the time, if I can put a smile on one person's face when they walk through that door, then I've done my job," she said.

"There may be a lot of people out there who don't have families and don't decorate or maybe don't have the money to do this."

Giving back to others ... "That's why I do it," added Kimberly. "It means a lot to me.

"And I couldn't do it without the support of the ladies I work with ... I couldn't do it without them."

Neighbors protest lack of notice for zoning change

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

During a long and busy meeting of the Metropolitan Planning Commission earlier this month it became apparent that an issue is back again: the notification given to citizens regarding a zoning change in their neighborhoods. A request by Oakland LLC for a 42-lot subdivision on West Emory Road southwest of Chartwell Road, up for a Use on Review at the commission, came up as nearby property owners said they were not notified of the change. Arlene Lemiszki spoke for the Camelot II homeowners and said she wanted a postponement because "none of the residents were sent or received any notice" of the developer's request. Dan Kelly of the MPC staff said a list of affected residences was developed for a mailing and that he was told the notifications were mailed.

"That's true," Longmire said. After Commissioner Art Clancy Il moved to approve the developer's request with five variances, other commissioners spoke to the lack of notification.

Even if it is when we go out and stick signs in the ground that we hand deliver notifications to those affected residents?" he asked.

"I've made a note to review our postcard notification process. However, given our staff resources it will not include hand delivering notices to neighboring properties," responded MPC Director Gerald Green. He urged everyone to check the MPC website monthly for changes and agenda items as the "primary source of information." "I've received mail a month and a half after it was sent," he said, adding, "I can't explain the workings, or lack of workings, of the U.S. Post Office."

Fort Dickerson Quarry Lake public meeting draws big response

A large and enthusiastic crowd showed up Monday, Oct. 17, to the public meeting for Phase 1 of a Fort Dickerson Park project that will include quarry lake access improvements.

The meeting was hosted by the City of Knoxville, Aslan Foundation, Sanders Pace Architecture with PORT Urbanism, and Legacy Parks Foundation.

The Aslan Foundation and Sanders Pace Architecture with PORT Urbanism created a unique and interactive public meeting format in which participants followed the park's layout in vinyl adhesive on the ground as they provided input for each geographic location surrounding the quarry lake.

"Beyond that I don't know if it's an issue for the post office or what the issue is but I've been told these postcards were mailed," Kelly said.

"All we can do is say that the postcards were sent," said MPC Chair Rebecca Longmire and Lemiszki responded that a "mail return receipt" would work better than a postcard.

"If everyone in the subdivision that was affected did not receive a postcard then there was a problem," the homeowner said.

"It does not happen frequently but more often than I would like. We have individuals come before us and say they didn't receive items that we sent out," said Commissioner Charles Lomax, adding, "I do not doubt that staff sent it out and do not doubt that the citizens didn't receive it."

"Somewhere in the mix there's a disconnect," Lomax said.

"Is there a way we can look at or evaluate the way we correspond with individuals when we are sending out notifications?

Funding totaling $160,000 has been slated for Phase 1 of the project, which will primarily bring a public drive and parking lot to the quarry lake from the park's Blount Avenue entrance. City officials needed public input on desired quarry lake recreation opportunities (which will come in Phase 2) in order to determine how to provide access to the

City may sell South High School to Dover Development

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

"I knew someone would call about that," said Jesse Mayshark, Director of Information for the City of Knoxville.

Mayshark was responding to a question by The Focus concerning the proposed sale of the old South High School building to Dover Development. Located at 953 East Moody Avenue, the former school is, by the best description, in a poor state of repairs.

The city, earlier this year, put out a request for bids, and Rick Dover's response apparently was accepted where he will pay only $1,000 for the building. The acceptance of the bid is being recommended by the Department of Community Development.

The pending sale indicates that Dover plans a senior living center there with 60 high quality living units for people age 62 or older. The center could provide the services normally expected for a senior, including medical, exercise and wellness programs, transportation, utilities, cable and internet, a full-time activity director and building maintenance and cleaning services. He has also agreed that the it is a contributing property within a potential Historic District, a National Registry District, a redevelopment district or an H-1 Historic

Once the sale is approved, Dover has one year in which to begin renovations.

Listed in recent years by Knox Heritage in the annual Fragile 15 Endangered Properties, the old South High School opened in 1937 and closed in 1991. The school was sold to a buyer in 2008 for $117,000. But the purchase deal didn't work out, repairs were not made and taxes were due.

The city had to repair a wall at the school to keep it from falling in and eventually took the building back. Dover was the only bidder on purchasing the property. The former school backs up to the Sarah Simpson Professional Development Technology Center, home of the Knox County Education Museum.

In other business the council may consider rezoning a Sevierville Pike property from Residential to C-1 (Commercial) and vote to have the mayor apply for a grant from the state to support an emergency shelter, homeless prevention and rapid re-housing of the ordinance amending the homeless.

The council may also consider allotting $21,990 to llene Cook, a tenant at 2622 Lay Avenue, to replace housing costs and moving expenses as part of the Williams Creek Capital Improvement Project. They may also consider an agreement with Forensic Firearms County Building.

Only one bidder, Dover Development, has expressed interest in purchasing the former South High School and a bid of $1,000 is being considered and recommended to City Council for approval.

Senator Howard Baker PART THREE

By Ray Hill rayhill865@gmail.com

In the fall of 1966. Republican Howard Baker kicked off his general election campaign for the United States Senate. He faced Democrat Governor Frank Clement in November, one of the most popular and experienced campaigners in Tennessee for the last decade. Since 1953, Frank Clement had served as Tennessee's governor for all but four years.

Although both his father and stepmother had served in Congress, Howard Baker, Jr. had never been elected to any office. Both Clement and Baker had run for the Senate in a 1964 special election and both had been beaten by the same man: Ross Bass. Bass had faced Frank Clement in the Democratic primary in 1966 and barely lost. To the end of his life, Ross Bass contended his defeat had come through Republicans voting inside the Democratic primary because they believed it would be easier for Howard Baker to beat Frank Clement.

Clement Governor entered the general election full of confidence; after all, Tennessee had never popularly elected a Republican to the United States Senate. Since the turn of the century, only a single Republican had served in the U.S. Senate from Tennessee. Newell Sanders of Chattanooga had a brief term of a few months by appointment from Governor Ben W. Hooper. The possidone so, it seems impossible Ellington could have been nominated to run for governor in 1958, a nomination he won by the barest of margins. Clement endorsed Ellington, but the former governor said nothing on behalf of his former friend.

An editorial in the Kingsport Times News pointed out Clement's defeat in 1964 had surprised just about everybody. Yet, the editorial also noted what no one seemed to consider was the champ got into the ring with a "glass jaw."

According to the Kingsport Times News, "The glass jaw was caused by resentment over the extra sales tax that the governor had engineered which resulted in the big surplus which the governor is now planning to spend. That ill-will had Frank Clement licked before he started fighting."

Tennesseans had been notorious for enjoying whatever benefits were derived from tax increases, but they habitually defeated the politicians they felt responsible for raising the taxes in the first place.

Clement had said during the primary campaign Americans should give "100% cooperation" in pressing the Vietnam War.

"Some people don't think we should be there. Others are of the opinion that we had no alternative. But since we are there, and our men are dying in the jungles and swamps in Vietnam, then doubt as to Governor Frank Clement's ability to represent Tennessee in the U.S. Senate."

It was a shrewd forecast of things to come.

Speaking in Nashville, Baker said he welcomed the support of all Tennesseans, "Republicans, Democrats and Independents without distinction." For the formal opening of his fall campaign, Howard Baker chose the Grand Ole Opry House. Baker announced he intended to try and appeal to every citizen "regardless of race, color or creed."

In his opening speech, Baker iterated five major points; he was highly critical of the Johnson farm policy, promoted what eventually became known as "revenue sharing" between the states and the federal government. Baker called for unity of purpose in the United States posed transferring the jurisdiction of the development of the Cumberland River system from the Army Corps of Engineers to the Tennessee Valley Authority. Lastly, Baker urged tax incentives to help encourage private businesses and industries to provide on the job training for new employees.

could do something about it, by voting for candidates who would work to stop the spiraling inflation. Baker was careful to make a distinction; by taking decisive action, he did not mean "in terms of imposing odious wage and price controls, and raising taxes."

Howard Baker believed, "...we should impose an austerity program on every federal agency to cut back the big spending programs which are not essential."

Clement, Governor campaigning in Middle Tennessee, spoke out on behalf of teachers, saying there had been a war, which had raged for twelve long years in the state to redress the "meager" pay of teachers. Clement said he agreed with President Johnson's decision to raise the amount received by Social Security recipients, but felt that it in the 30's. when he was the GOP vice he would go to Washington presidential candidate, Dwight Eisenhower had carried Tennessee in both 1952 and 1956. Nixon had carried the Volunteer State in 1960 over John F. Kennedy.

Yet when asked if he intended to be a candidate again in 1968, Nixon dodged the question, saying he was concentrating his efforts on electing others. "This is coming from one who has been over-nominated and under-elected," Nixon told a reporter.

Richard Nixon was due to arrive at 11:30 a.m. but his plane didn't touch down on the runway until 12:15 p.m. Just before making his brief speech on behalf of Howard Baker, Nixon had held a press conference. The weather was cool, with temperatures hovering without any ties to the Johnson administration began to sting Governor Frank Clement a bit. Clement had realized from the time he had won the nomination that he would need to distance himself from President Johnson. Speaking in Nashville, the governor said he would "not hesitate one moment if at any time there was a variance in party policy and Tennessee thought, to take the action that would be in harmony with the will and wishes of the people of Tennessee."

In his ornate speaking style, Governor Clement cried, "With this nomination for United States senator in one hand, no one is going to place a rubber stamp in my other hand."

Governor Clement praised Baker as an "attractive young man who will get a fair vote," despite the fact he was only six years older than his opponent. Clement denied he would be an automatic vote for the Johnson administration, while Baker hammered home Clement's party label, which would have been no liability previously. Baker charged the governor "cannot rid himself of the fact that he is a rubber stamp. He is a member of the majority party and if he is elected he will become a rubber stamp for it. He can't deny it and he can't get rid of it. It is a fact that the Democrats are more easily swayed by the White House than members of the minority party." Howard Baker accused Clement of "ducking" the big issues in the campaign, an accusation the governor naturally denied. Yet Governor Clement's campaign seemed rather tame, especially compared to some of his earlier electoral outings. In the end, Frank Clement was handed a crushing defeat, winning fewer votes in the general election than he had in the Democratic primary. Howard Baker became the first Republican elected to the United States Senate from Tennessee. It was the beginning of Howard Baker's political career and the death knell of Frank Clement's own career.

Howard Baker campaigned hard, lambasting President Johnson and the Great Society. Johnson's "War on Poverty" and the real war in Vietnam were eroding his personal and political popularity.

There were other signs that Frank Clement's once incandescent popularity with Tennesseans had begun to burn far less brightly. He tallied only thirty-six percent of the vote in the 1964 Democratic primary, his once good friend Buford Ellington was seeking to return to the governor's office in 1966. After pondering a gubernatorial bid, Congressman Bill Brock decided to seek reelection and the GOP offered no opponent in the general election to Ellington. The former governor still had to face a bruising primary contest with young attorney John Jay Hooker. Ellington won narrowly and many have assumed the "leap frog" governorships of Frank Clement and Buford Ellington made the two warm personal friends. They may have been true at one time, but by 1966 that friendship was tattered and torn.

Frank Clement had certainly given Ellington his start in statewide politics, naming his friend to his Cabinet. Had Clement not back home."

Clement promised, if elected, he would sponsor legislation to increase the income tax exemption from $600 to $1,000. The governor said he favored a balanced national budget. "As governor we had a balanced budget," Clement said. "My thinking would not change in the Senate. I know that one person can't do it alone, but I can at least start such a movement."

Governor Clement hedged on the issue of sending American dollars overseas. "I am not against foreign aid. I think for our own good we need to help those nations not as fortunate as we are.

"But," Clement continued, "I am against a give-away program which results in our getting kicked by those to whom we give it. Some of our friends are mighty strange in expressing their friendships."

On the night of the primary, Howard Baker thanked his supporters, was gracious to his vanquished opponent, and looked ahead to the general election. While Governor Clement celebrated with his own supporters, Baker took note of the governor's very narrow margin of victory, saying, "Recent returns from the Democratic primary for the U.S. Senate indicate a sharp division of feeling and a great deal of Baker painted Lyndon Johnson and his administration as out of touch and out dated.

"This administration's ideas are stereotyped and sterile. It is so dedicated to the solutions of the '30s that it cannot and will not meet the crises of this new era," Baker told his audience of 1,000 persons.

Throughout the campaign for the United States Senate, Howard Baker always looked to the future and associated himself with that future. Frank Clement, although only forty-six years old in 1966, seemed all too much a part of the past.

Baker blamed rising inflation and high prices of food on the Johnson administration and Democrats while campaigning in East Tennessee. Howard Baker, campaigning along side popular Congressman Jimmy Quillen, noted many housewives were positively outraged by high food prices. Baker pointed out disgruntled housewives 1968. The governor also chided Howard Baker for having criticized President Johnson for having gone on an Asian visit during the campaign season.

"I think that whether it is two weeks, two days, or two hours before an election, it is crucial we work for peace," Clement thundered.

The governor demurred on the topic of the war in Vietnam, saying it should not really be a partisan or political issue. "This war is so important we should forget politics and urge public officials to seek avenues to the peace table," Clement opined.

Baker persistently waged a hard-hitting campaign and in late October, he charged the Johnson administration intended to raise taxes by perhaps as much as ten percent. "A tax increase is the wrong approach to fighting the worsening problem of inflation," Baker said.

Election As Day approached, Richard Nixon came to Tennessee to campaign for Baker and Congressman Jimmy Quillen. Nixon made at stop at the Tri-Cities Airport on November 3, already anticipating his presidential candidacy in 1968. Nixon made hundreds of appearances all across the country in 1966 on behalf of Republican candidates. Nixon had done rather well in Tennessee;

"The American consumer ought to make November 8 'National Protest Day,'" Nixon proclaimed, "bv throwing out the spenders and electing a consumer's Congress rather than a Johnson Congress."

The 4,000 people gathered in the chilly hangar roared their approval.

Nixon continued to feed his audience red meat, saying, "The housewives' rebellion against food prices is the opening of a Consumer's Revolution. That revolt will be one of the healthiest political developments in a decade.

"It's first major casualties will be Lyndon Johnson and the rubber stamps of the Johnson Congress who are trying the buy the peoples' votes with the peoples' money."

Nixon declared that the "Johnson inflation" had awakened a sleeping giant and Republicans would reap the dividends on Election Dav

Nixon had already spoken in Memphis in September of 1966 where the former vice president had flatly predicted Howard Baker would be elected to the U.S. Senate. He also predicted victories for the GOP candidates in three Congressional districts in West Tennessee. His predictions were too optimistic.

By Joe Rector joerector@comcast.net

Last spring, Amy and I traveled to Cookeville to help sort through her aunt's possessions. She suffers from Alzheimer's and resides in an assisted living community. To pay for her stay there, the house had to be sold. Family came to box up her items, and they took home some things that Mildred had wanted them to have. It was a brutally painful task for family members, but something that had to be done.

Amy and I brought home a few things. Among them were two green metal chairs. They were patio chairs made with adirondack bodies set upon white metal legs that curled down and then around to form a solid base. If I were guessing, the set is probably 50 vears old.

The mint green paint had faded over the years. The sheen of the color had long since disappeared from time spent in the sun, rain, and snow. Still, the seats retained their beauty,

We lose some of our luster over the years. The color of our irises fade and sometimes the strain of life shows in them. Skin becomes slack as its elasticity disappears, and we develop those double chins or flabby skin fold on our necks. Spots sometimes dot once-perfect complexions. Even though those things occur, the basic structures of our faces remain the same. Yes, sometimes our ears grow even larger and noses begin to look longer and narrower. All in all, the years make changes to our appearance, but they can never completely erase our basic traits.

The legs of those chairs hadn't fared as well as the seats. They were skinny, and at the curves and joints, rust had developed. After only a couple of sitting sessions in them, those legs would have given way and either broken or slowly bent double. To use the chairs, new metal needs to be inserted to reinforce or replace existing material.

It's the same way with us. In many ways, they mirror the After years of wear and tear, our legs begin to give out. Folks have always laughed about my skinny legs and commented that I should "sue them for non-support." We all find that the strength once located in our legs has diminished or disappeared. So many joints are located in our lower extremities, and with age each one of them aches. Some doctors recommend that we have those rusted-shut joints fixed. After excruciating physical therapy, we're good to go for another hundred thousand miles. The marvels in modern medicine keep us as active as possible.

offer helpful advice and words

How do we get allergies?

After a few months of sniffling, itching, and sneezing, I finally went to an allergist. What he told me after going through some needle-ing tests, amazed me. I was allergic to weeds, some trees and mold. What! Me! Allergic to Mother Nature, whom I love with all my heart? I have two cats, you know, and I really was afraid I might be allergic to them.

I didn't think to ask him why I became allergic, so I looked it up on Google and found around ten pages of explanations looming in front of me. To make a long story short, here is the gist of what I read.

An allergy is a disorder of the immune system. What causes the risk of an allergic reaction is dependent on either host or environmental factors. This is triggered when the person comes in contact with an infectious disease, an airborne allergen, pollution, or if they change their diet.

A person is more likely to suffer from an allergy if they live in a highly industrialized area. They are more common in the individual who lives in an urban area as opposed to a rural area.

It should be noted that people of any age can become allergic, even small children. When the elderly get it, it's likened to this phrase, which I hate, "You're getting old!"

A lot of people with allergies think that if they just stay indoors when the pollen counts are high, they can keep their symptoms under control. But, indoor allergens, particularly dust, can also cause allergy symptoms.

Be careful of hugging trees. The ones I shouldn't be in contact with are elms and birches, which is puzzling to me, because I am not aware of those two types in my surrounding area.

Allergies are a fact of life. The only way to alleviate this pesky, bothersome malfunction of life is take the medicine prescribed for it, stay in the house, don't hug trees, don't sniff weeds, dust before you vacuum, and live in a rural area! And, don't change your diet! Alas!

It will then be off to the playoffs for the defending Class 4A state champions.

They are not the stars and their names have not been in the headlines. In some cases, they are not a starter. But they are a big part of why their high school football teams have been successful.

Then that 49-10 loss to Alabama would have been a little easier to swallow.

Then we would be 3-1 in SEC play going into this week's game at South Carolina and not 2-2 and looking up at those Gators in the standings.

Then we wouldn't have to worry about Florida losing another conference game. The Vols would still be controlling their own destiny as far as winning the SEC East and playing in the conference championship game.

Instead, now we have to get help from Georgia, Arkansas or LSU to beat Florida.

That's Butch's bad. It was a no-brainer, particularly after the Aggies jumped off sides and the two-point try could have been moved up to the $1\frac{1}{2}$ -yard line.

Surely the Vols have an offensive goal-line package. They better. What if they're behind by two points in that situation? Surely Coach Jones could have a jumbo formation prepared for a special situation when his team needs two points.

That night I would have loved to have seen Butch go for it. Joshua Dobbs under center. A burly fullback behind him. And Jalen Hurd (6-4, 240) at tailback. Hurd, the downhill runner that he really is, was born to get the ball in that kind of situation.

CLEVELAND - Neither intermittent rain showers nor Bradley Central could put the brakes on Maryville High School's football team Thursday night.

The Rebels, however, stumbled out of the gate early. But thanks to a stingy and opportunistic defense, Maryville left Bear Stadium in Southeast Tennessee with a 48-21 Region 1-6A victory. And that win helped the Rebels stay perfect and gave them the chance to play Hardin Valley Academy later this week for a regional championship.

The final margin may have looked quite impressive but longtime Rebels coach George Quarles wasn't pleased with his offense early.

"Our offense started a little sloppy," Quarles said after seeing his team improve to 9-0 overall and 6-0 in Region 1-6A play. "But our defense turned things in our favor and got us going.

"We had to settle for field goals the first couple of times we got close before we got settled in on offense."

The host Bears (7-2, 4-2) couldn't cash the miscue a 9-yard pass from Hopinto points, thanks to a stiff effort from the Maryville defense. That unit would force three Bradley Central turnovers and turn those mistakes into 27 points by halftime.

The Rebels managed a pair of first-quarter field goals from Matthew Cone. Cone's second kick was set up when T.D. Blackmon picked off Bradley Central sophomore Dylan Standifer, who was playing due to an injury to starter Cole Copeland.

Maryville's other TD was kins to freshman A.J. Davis, who has emerged as another weapon in the Rebels potent offensive arsenal.

Maryville took a 34-0 lead early in the third quarter when Isaiah Cobb scored on a 63-yard scamper with 9 minutes, 29 seconds remaining.

October 24, 2016 Alcoa shuts out Red Bank 28-0

By Alex Norman

On a cool night for football in Blount County, the number one team in the state in Class 3A didn't play their best football, but it was good enough to keep their winning streak alive, and set themselves up for a titanic matchup on October 28.

The Alcoa Tornadoes shut out Red Bank 28-0 on Thursday, October 20. It is the second straight season in which the Tornadoes did not allow the Lions to score a point.

"They (Red Bank) moved the ball on us and we stopped them in the red zone," said Alcoa head coach Gary Rankin. "I thought they did a good job offensively and called plays and ate the clock a little bit. I thought they had a great offensive game plan."

On the first drive of the game for the visiting Lions, sophomore quarterback Calvin Jackson took a deep shot down the field, but Alcoa defensive back Larry Hodges leaped over receiver Jordan Douglas at the 27 yard line for the interception.

The Tornadoes (8-1) then embarked on a 15-play drive that ate up more than 6 minutes on the clock. The key play was a conversion on 4th and 3 from the Red Bank 8-yard line. The drive ended with a one-yard touchdown run by senior Coltton Wright. It was 7-0 Alcoa with 1:27 to go in the first quarter.

In the second quarter the Lions were forced to punt, Hodges once again made a big play. Then Tornadoes faked a reverse on the ensuing punt. His 37 yard return set the Tornadoes up with great field position at the Lions 28.

Three plays later, the Tornadoes would extend the lead when senior quarterback ran 16 yards into the end zone with 6:15 to go in the first half. It was his 9th rushing touchdown of the season and Alcoa was up 14-0.

Red Bank (5-4) would drive deep into Alcoa territory late in the first half, but on 4th and 16 from the 28, Jackson's heave into the end zone was deflected by Tykee Ogle-Kellogg, thwarting the threat.

At intermission, it was 14-0 Tornadoes.

Midway through the third quarter it looked like the Lions were going to get their first points of the night. They drove to the Alcoa 25. But Jackson overthrew Mike Porter and Terran Cox made the interception in the end zone.

The Tornadoes really put the game away on its next drive, traveling 80 yards in 15 plays. Wright scored from 2 yards out, his second touchdown run of the night. There was 10:06 to go in the game, and it was 21-0 Alcoa.

Late in the game Alcoa brought in sophomore Walker Russell, and he immediately went to work through the air. First a 49-yard pass to Conner, Canfield got the Tornadoes to the Red Bank 21. A couple of plays later, Russell lobbed a short touchdown pass to Kellogg with 3:36 to go, bringing the night's scoring to a close.

By Steve Williams

It might have been his last game on Bob Black Field and he left Fulton High fans something to remember him by on offense and defense.

Chaton Mobley, nicknamed "Mobbatron," scored on both sides of the ball Friday to lead the Falcons to a convincing 44-3 win over West on Senior Night.

The 6-2, 237-pound running back displayed his determination on a 46-yard catch and run that gave Fulton a 6-3 lead late in the first quarter.

"The beast came out of me," said Mobley, recalling Xavier Malone's pass to him in the flat. "I just took the rock and took it for six."

At least two West defenders were in position to stop him.

"I made the first guy miss," he said. "I broke the second tackle and slipped off the guy to get in the end zone." With Fulton leading 24-3 at the start of the second half, the Rebels had moved into scoring range with hopes of getting back in the game. But Mobley the linebacker put an end to such thoughts when he snatched the ball from West running back K.J. Jefferson and returned it 85 yards for his second TD.

"I seen a chance to rip the ball and I ripped it," said Mobley, who has committed to Middle Tennessee State University as a middle linebacker. "There was nothing but green grass in front of me."

The win was Fulton's fourth in a row since being 2-3. The Falcons lost to three tough opponents -Maryville, Austin-East and Catholic - in the first half of the season.

"We're focused," said Mobley, who had 245 allpurpose yards. "We're going because we're sure going to try and win a gold ball this year. We're not going to settle for less. We've got to have wins like we had tonight."

Second-half surge propels

Fulton (6-3 and 3-1 in Region 2-4A) will go to Central in a regular season finale Friday to play for second place in the region and a first-round home game in the playoffs. The Bobcats (7-2, 3-1) are riding a six-game win streak.

Fulton Coach Rob Black wasn't surprised by Mobley's performance.

"Chaton is a great leader," said Black. "He gets it done every day in practice. He plays like he practices and that's 100 miles per hour.

"As for his physical play on the field tonight, it seemed like every time we needed a play on offense or defense, he was right in the middle of the action. We depend on him.

"I hate to talk about him even being a senior, to miss him."

Mobbatron gained 26 yards on a Utah pass and 23 yards on a pitch left, getting a key block by fellow senior Zack Dobson, to set up Fulton's second touchdown.

That would be a 14-yard catch by sophomore DaShaun McKinney, who also played big in the victory with two touchdown receptions and an interception.

McKinney's pick at midfield came with 3:43 on the second quarter clock. He stayed on the field and caught passes of 16 and 15 yards before Dorian Williamson reached pay dirt from eight yards out to make it 18-3.

McKinney also pulled in a 14-yard TD pass over the middle from Malone with 13.3 seconds left in the first half. That score followed a blocked punt by linebacker DeShaun Page and a 14-yard catch by Dobson.

"The seniors were pushing everybody to get the win," said McKinney. "They got everyone on board with them. It made us want to keep fighting for them in their Senior Night game."

receiver Jermaine Buchannon and quarterback Drake Peer hooked up for a 49-yard pass play late in the third quarter. Joey Smith tackled Buchannon at the 3-yard line.

Smith's tackle turned out to be key in keeping the Rebels out of the end zone as JaShaun Fenderson intercepted a pass and returned it 93 yards for a touchdown on the last play of the quarter.

Fenderson also caught a 42-yard pass with 5:25 remaining that put the ball on the West 2. Page powered in from the 1for the final TD.

Malone, who finished with 262 yards through the air, passed to Smith for a two-point conversion that finally ended a string of six failed PAT attempts. That would be the Falcons' only flaw on this Senior Night.

West's points came on Trailing 30-3, West wide Logan Bowers' 27-yard field goal midway through the opening quarter. Peer's 38-yard pass to Christian Romines set it up.

The Rebels, losing their fourth straight game and dropping to 4-5, can still make the playoffs with a win over Region 2-5A champion Gibbs this week or a Heritage win at Halls.

"This season has not been what we wanted," said second-year West Coach Jeff Harig. "There's a host of reasons for that. But all the things that we wanted to do are right in front of us. We've got to put a complete effort together and get a win."

Zenobia Dobson waves to the crowd as news of the Zaevion Dobson Memorial Bridge honoring her son is announced at halftime of Friday night's Fulton football game. October 24, 2016 www.knoxfocus.com Norman, Furman honoree, was versatile, durable and a giant-killer

By Steve Williams

Derek Norman must have really enjoyed playing baseball at Furman University. No one has ever played in as many games or had as many starts at the Southern Conference school and his career records still stand after over a decade.

Someday when those marks are surpassed by another Paladin – and yes that day will come because, as we know, records are made to be broken – the Knoxville native's fond memories of his college days on and off the diamond will continue because they were such a big part of his life.

And thanks to his induction into the Furman University Athletics Hall of Fame the evening of Oct. 14 at the Hyatt Regency in downtown Greenville, S.C., Norman's time and accomplishments with the Royal Blue and White have been recorded for all to see and admire for years to come.

"It really is a huge honor for me because Furman University has significantly impacted all aspects of my life," said Norman via e-mail. "My experiences, my career and even my family are a result of the time I spent at Furman. It means a lot to feel like I contributed something – however small – to such a phenomenal institution."

Don't let his humbleness fool you.

According to Furman Sports Information Director Hunter Reid, Norman (Class of 2004) was a multi-position standout for the baseball program, playing catcher, third base, and shortstop over a brilliant four-year career that featured some of the most noteworthy team success in school history.

Norman and his teammates were giant-killers.

Norman, reported Reid, was named 2001 SoCon Freshman of the Year after batting .362 and helping Furman to its first 30-win season, including triumphs over Kentucky, Indiana, and nationally fifth-ranked South Carolina.

As a junior, Norman played a pivotal role in Furman winning a then-program best 32 games, highlighted by a triumph over N.C. State and victories over three nationally-ranked teams - South Carolina and Clemson, which the Paladins defeated twice for Furman's first season sweep of the Tigers since 1960.

"My fondest on-field memories would have to be the times we beat Clemson and South Carolina - especially when we were at their place," Norman recalled. "Both teams were always ranked in the Top 5 in the country it seemed. We would go there and be completely in awe of their facilities, uniforms and massive crowds - to walk out with a win was pretty sweet. Unless I am mistaken, we were close to .500 against them during my time at Furman."

Norman went on to garner all-conference honors at both third base and catcher, and over a decade later still holds nine school records, among which are most games played (260), consecutive starts (216), hits (288), and runs scored

Derek Norman, Furman University Athletics Hall of Fame inductee and former Knoxville West High player, would play wherever needed for the Paladins in his collegiate baseball career. That included catcher, third base, shortstop or designated hitter.

The school records he set at Furman indicate he was a very versatile player and also very durable.

"I was always an infielder growing up, mostly playing third base but some shortstop as well," said Norman. "I had a coach – Jeff Bunch who may still live in Knoxville – who basically said I needed to learn to catch in order to improve my marketability with college and pro scouts.'

Furman Coach Ron Smith lived up to his recruiting spill and gave Derek plenty of opportunities to play.

"Ron was honest and up front with me during the recruiting process - which is a rarity on the recruiting trail," said Norman, who played under Coach Chris Lindsay at West High. "He said 'Come to Furman and I will give you every opportunity to play - even as a freshman."

Norman made his first start as a designated hitter. He also filled in some at shortstop.

"I was willing to play literally anywhere as long as I could contribute to the team," said Norman.

Derek's durability?

"I don't really have a great answer for that," he said. "Maybe I was just stubborn and wanted to play. I loved playing baseball and could not imagine sitting out a game unless there was a really good reason."

Norman is thankful for his that we were going to go to overtime. If I went for two and we didn't get it, everyone would be asking me the same question – the shoulda, coulda, wouldas."

I disagree with that assumption, too. I believe most Tennessee fans would have appreciated Jones going for two and the win in that situation. Tennessee was on the road. It had overcome all those turnovers and had the momentum.

The Vols also had suffered several injuries and from that standpoint were in better shape to end the game right then, instead of trying to continue and win it in overtime.

Let's go back to that night for a second and relive the play that gave Tennessee an opportunity to cap another great comeback win.

Malik Foreman gave us another miracle play with the Aggies leading 35-28 with just under two minutes left, and when he punched the football out of A&M runner Trayveon Williams' grasp and through the end zone for a touchback, I felt we were destined to win.

Maybe we were even destined to go unbeaten I thought moments after Foreman gave us new life. Flashing quickly through my mind was the recovery of the fumble in the end against Virginia Tech at Bristol Motor Speedway ... the remarkable second-half rally against Florida ... the Hail Mary to shock Georgia. And now this.

I had a strong feeling we were going to go down the field and score. I told the person sitting next to me we should start considering going for two. When we did score and the Bulldogs encroached, I thought it was a no-brainer.

Tennessee was a beatup football team but not for one. a defeated one. The Vols needed just one more play. It was Butch's turn to make it.

My heart sank when TV cameras showed Jones on the sideline declining the Georgia penalty.

I was very disappointed with Butch's decision. It reminded me of his decision to kick a field goal instead of going for a touchdown with the ball so close to the goal line in the game against Oklahoma last rocket science either. It's having a feel for the game. Look at it this way. In that moment, do you think the Texas A&M fans were glad the Vols didn't go for two? Sure they were. I bet 90 percent of them were relieved when the Vols went

So, Butch, when you have to make game-deciding decisions in the future, remember this: Just do what the opposition doesn't want you to do.

Jones has a lot of good attributes as a college head coach. But if he wants to take Tennessee to championships, he needs to recognize when the time is right to go for a win. Great coaches can feel it and pull the trigger.

Wolves in Sheeps' Clothing

Recently, I've considered leaving my column at The Knoxville Focus. I've written weekly essays for ten years, but that's not the issue. I ask myself, "What does it matter?" Maybe it doesn't, but my sense of duty is to "man-up" even if that verbiage is threatening to some college kids and progressives with sensitive ears.

We are told that Trump's words hurt us far more than Clinton's destructive acts. That's ridiculous and such absurdity must be challenged. Trump has no fingerprints on the destructive policies of the Obama-Clinton cabal. Furthermore, I'm loyal to those readers who regularly write to me with words of encouragement. These far outweigh certain serial detractors whose email verbiage causes me to picture them sitting at their computer in their basements in their underwear in the middle of the night.

A minister friend recently challenged me to pray and ask for the Spirit's insights before reading scripture. The Bible is a compendium of wisdom - more than it is a book of facts. American's are familiar with the metaphor of a wolf in sheep's clothing. Was it serendipity or the Spirit that caused me to open my Bible to Matthew 7:15-16, where Jesus advises his audience to "Beware of false prophets, who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly are ravenous wolves"? Obama is assuredly a false prophet. And Hillary Clinton is a deceitful ravenous wolf dressed in sheep's clothing (actually, Chairman Mao garb). All the while, their sycophant media acolytes sing their lies from the progressive choir loft.

For the first thirty years of my life I was more or less oblivious to events in our country and the world. I do remember the Cuban Missile Crisis, and my parents filling our bathtub with water one night in expectation of a nuclear attack from Cuba. I remember seeing Walter Cronkite reporting from Saigon during the Tet Offensive, and announcing that the Vietnam War was lost - and it became a fait accompli. And I remember sitting next to my future wife and reveling in the Apollo 11 moon landing of 1969.

As a young person, I was focused on my education, and then starting a family and a medical practice. I guess it was in my thirties that I really started paying attention to world events and the politics which shape them. I've paid close attention over the subsequent thirty-five years and can say with certainty I've never seen anything like the corruption, fraud and lies which swirl around Hillary Rodham Clinton. The Watergate scandal pales by comparison. The latest example of Clinton corruption stems from recently released FBI records. These show Clinton's State Department working with the FBI to reclassify Benghazi documents as nonclassified so she could then lie to We The People, again.

And it seems that each day there is more. Project Veritas has recently captured on video agents of the Clinton campaign bragging about inciting violence at Trump's rallies, paid for by George Soros. There is also her crony-capitalist corporate bankers of Wall Street who repeatedly paid Clinton $250,000 for twentyfive minute homilies. Make no mistake, these businessmen expect a return on their $20 million investment. And don't forget the corporate media who no longer even project the facade of objectivity and sing in lock-step Clinton's deceitful hymns.

Here are some facts to consider. During the week of Oct. 7-13, NBC, CBS and ABC spent more than four hours on Trump's 2005 locker-room bombast while spending only thirty-six minutes on the latest WikiLeaks revelations of Clinton's campaign emails. These detail her collusion with the White House, her changing political positions and allowing Clinton Foundation donors access to the corridors of government. How telling that Julian Assange's internet connection at the Ecuadorian embassy in London has now been severed after years of access. And if you still doubt collusion between the Clinton machine/crime syndicate and the corrupt media, remember everyone has personal bias which influences their objectivity. Would it surprise you that as of August 2016, 430 donors (96%) described as journalists gave $382,000 to Clinton, while only 50 journalists gave $14,000 to Trump? Dorothy discovered the truth behind the curtain in the Wizard of Oz. Fair and balanced is today merely a euphemism, and bears no resemblance to reality.

Even if you can ignore Clinton's Benghazi lies, jeopardizing National security with her unsecured basement internet server and using a military grade scrubber to erase 30,000 emails, her influence peddling at the State Department, and announcing at the latest debate that it takes the US four minutes to launch our nuclear missiles, you should realize that Clinton has serious medical problems. She has what is called the hypercoagulable syndrome which causes recurrent blood clots and necessitates lifelong treatment with drugs like Coumadin. Her fall in 2012 resulted in another blood clot, this time a cavernous sinus thrombosis in her brain. All the arterial blood delivering oxygen and nutrients to the brain is finally collected in the cavernous sinus before exiting the skull and flowing back to the heart. Many cranial nerves that control eye muscles run through the cavernous sinus. Clinton's double vision and balance problems are due to that thrombosis. Furthermore, the cavernous sinus also drains cerebrospinal fluid and when clotting occurs spinal fluid may dam up and produce gait problems and dementia.

This election is America's Armageddon. It will decide whether we continue the destructive policies of Obama and Clinton or choose a leader who is NOT of the Washington ruling class and can perhaps alter our path toward destruction. As I've said before, Trump wasn't my first, second or third choice, but if Obama and Clinton hate him, as well as Hollywood, the corrupt media, RINOs, crony-capitalist bankers of Wall Street, the donor class, the UN, George Soros and Media Matters and late term abortionists, then I'll side with their opposite, the underdog Trump. I'll vote to send The Donald to Washington to break up the ruling class' costume party of wolves in sheep's clothing.

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

The season has changed, the air is crisp and it's a great time to walk outside. Did you know there are walking tours of downtown Knoxville available?

Whether it's a guided or a self-guided tour there's so much to see in the historic and iconic downtown of our state's first capital. Some tours focus on history of Knoxville, some look at the music footnotes here, and other tours look at haunted places and legends.

Historic Tour

The Historic Walking Tour of Downtown Knoxville is a free event sponsored by Knox Heritage. You can go to Knoxheritage.com and ings or sites on the map for information. Or you can hoof it and walk yourself to places like the old JFG Coffee Building, Patrick Sullivan's Saloon, the old courthouse and more than 40 other interesting downtown locations like the Presbyterian Cemetery or the Southern Railway Depot.

Food Tours

New to downtown sidewalks are dining tours from East TN Tours. These tours give walkers a chance to learn more about Knoxville, its history and its restaurants. Each tour stops in five locally-owned

Knoxville Walking Tours

Do you like storytelling during a guided tour? In Knoxville Walking Tours, Laura Stills relives tales of pioneers, soldiers, outlaws and even fictional characters as she takes you on the streets in town. During October, Stills is also leading a walking tour of Knoxville's haunted history. Historian
