Residents oppose proposed location of Safety Center

By Staff
A proposed location for a new safety center in Knoxville is drawing opposition from local residents. The center, which would house the Knox County Sheriff's Office and other law enforcement agencies, is planned for a site near the intersection of Interstate 75 and Interstate 275. The site is currently occupied by a parking lot and some commercial buildings. The proposed location is being considered by the Knox County Board of Commissioners. The board is expected to make a decision on the location in the next few months. The proposed location is being opposed by several local residents and community groups. They argue that the location is in an area that is already overdeveloped and that the center would be a eyesore. They also argue that the location is not accessible to the public and that it would be difficult to reach. The Knox County Board of Commissioners is expected to make a decision on the location in the next few months. The board is expected to make a decision on the location in the next few months.

Northwest 674 Why is there more litter along county roads?

By Staff
A recent survey conducted by Northwest 674 has revealed that there is a significant amount of litter along county roads. The survey found that the majority of litter is found along the shoulders of roads and in the areas around parking lots. The litter includes a wide variety of items, including plastic bottles, paper cups, and food wrappers. The survey also found that the amount of litter is increasing over time. This is a concern for the county because litter is not only unsightly but it can also be a health hazard. Litter can attract animals and insects, and it can also pollute the environment. The county is currently working to address the litter problem by increasing the number of litter receptacles along roads and by conducting more frequent litter cleanups. The county is also working to educate the public about the importance of proper litter disposal.
