These authors suggest that the 1990-1991 season was characterized by a relatively low level of rainfall in the Amazon basin, which may have contributed to the low levels of rainfall in the Amazon basin.

The authors thank Thomas J. Coughlin, Jr., for his comments on earlier drafts of this paper.

The members of the committee will continue to work closely with the National Commission on the Status of Women, the President's Council on the Status of Women, and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, as well as with the various state and local commissions on the status of women.
