

The Pink Ribbon Celebration Committee enjoys a moment at the photo booth. Pictured left to right: Janice Mingie, Tammy Pickles, Nic Mingie, Ramona Watson, Ann Marie Hatfield and Deborah Moulden.

Right, Emily Ann Roberts, rising country star and graduate of Karna High School, performs during the Pink Ribbon Celebration Thursday evening. The breast cancer event highlighted cancer survivors and one person present was celebrating more than 45 years as a survivor.

Pink Ribbon Celebration has huge turnout

By Mike Stealy
stealmike@knsn.com

The house was packed Thursday

6:37 p.m. Michele Silva welcomed the full house and introduced guests and speakers. Breast attended "We had 63 tables and some one was at every table," she struggle. Other speakers included Becky Dodson, Nic Mingie, Deborah Moulden and Mingie

the Leadership Academy of Center for Educational Leadership at tonight's meeting. Dr. James McIntyre, former superintendent of the Knox County School system, heads the Leadership Academy after his resignation following a controversial tenure as superintendent. McIntyre chose to head the Leadership Academy. Before leaving the superintendent's office, McIntyre ran the academy on a part-time basis.

McMillan was McIntyre's most persistent critic during much of McIntyre's time in office. McMillan contacted Richard "Bud" Armstrong, Knox County Lee Director, in preparation of the discussion of the Leadership Academy, posing several questions. After asking one of the top administrators for a copy of the agreement between the Leadership Academy and the Knox County School system, McMillan said he was surprised to learn "apparently nobody could find a copy of the supposed agreement." McMillan then asked Lee Director Bud Armstrong about the agreement. Armstrong wrote back, "I cannot find a record of an executed