McMillan questions validity of Leadership Academy agreement

Mike McMillan, East Knox County's member of the Board of Education, says the agreement between the school system and the University of Tennessee may not be valid. The Board will be discussing the Leadership Academy or Center for Educational Leadership at tonight's meeting. Dr. James McIntyre, former superintendent of the Knox County School system, heads the Leadership Academy. After his resignation following a controversial tenure as superintendent, McIntyre chose to head the Leadership Academy. Before leaving the superintendent's office, McIntyre ran the academy on a part-time

McMillan was McIntyre's most persistent critic during much of McIntyre's time in office. McMillan contacted Richard "Bud" Armstrong, Knox County Law Director, in preparation of the discussion of the Leadership Academy, posing several questions. After asking one of the top administrators for a copy of the agreement between the Leadership Academy and the Knox County School system, McMillan said he was surprised to learn "apparently nobody could find a copy of the supposed agreement." McMillan then asked Law Director Bud Armstrong about the agreement. Armstrong wrote back, "I cannot find a record of an executed agreement with School Board approval or Commission approval regarding the Leadership Academy." Armstrong said "the only record" he is none of that happens? Can an actual marriage ceremony take place if one of the parties isn't even at the wedding? Surprisingly, the answer to this question is, yes, a marriage can still take place under Tennessee law, even if one of the parties is not physically at the marriage ceremony.

Tennessee Code Annotated section 36-3-302 states that in order for a marriage to be "solemnized," the parties shall state in the presence of a minister or officer, "that they accept each other as husband and/or wife." However, this requirement is waived if one of the people getting married is a member of the armed forces. If someone is a member of the armed forces, they may appear for the marriage ceremony via video conferencing.

Now, let me stop here, and say, I'm sure there are reasons for this exception, but if I was in the armed forces and I tried to appear for my wedding encing instead of just getting married before I was deployed, my wife would have probably declined to have married me!

Having said that, let's walk through what

Okay, so back to our original question, can someone get married without actually being physically present at the marriage ceremony, yes, it is possible.

Board Should End Jim McIntyre's Golden Parachute

By Steve Hunley, Publisher publisher@knoxfocus.com

The Knox County Board of Education will today begin discussions about the future of the Leadership Academy, otherwise known as the Center for Educational Leadership. This is the soft berth where Jim McIntyre landed after quitting as superintendent of Knox County Schools. The Center for Educational Leadership is supposed to be "a collaborative venture between the Knox County Schools and the University of Tennessee." If so, it is a rather one-sided venture as Knox County taxpayers pay almost all the freight, including McIntyre's $180,000 salary. Just so you know, that salary is more than that paid to the governor of Tennessee, the state Commissioner of Education, or any member of Congress. McIntyre makes about 90% of what curThomas earns annually.

Theoretically, McIntyre's mission as the head of the Leadership Academy is to train our future principals and assistant principals. McIntyre created the Leadership Academy and ran it in his spare time while still serving as superintendent. The success of the program was guaranteed initially, as McIntyre was able to appoint every leadership position within the Knox County School system. When he created the Leadership Academy, folks hoping to move up the ladder realized they had little choice but to try and enroll.

Virtually everybody in Knox County recalls McIntyre's own personal style of leadership; it was authoritarian, dictatorial and characterized by habitual overspending and micromanaging. When McIntyre resigned as superintendent, he cited the politically "toxic atmosphere" surrounding his incumbency. It was certainly true the atmosphere was toxic, but it was also a result of McIntyre's management style. Keep in mind, Jim McIntyre was never superintendent of anything before he got here and was never a principal or assistant principal. Whatever he knows about leadership, he learned here and it is beyond belief any- bureaucracy and driving up body would think he has much to impart in running a school, yet school officials seem content to allow him to train our future principals and assistant prin-leadership skills were so wonderful, we should have kept him in office as superintendent. If his leadership skills were lacking, why should he be training future generations of school leaders?

Admittedly, we already have numerous graduates of the Leadership Academy waiting for an appointment as either principal or assistant principal of a school. In fact, we currently have more graduates than opportunities, nor is there any evidence McIntyre's academy has made any real difference in the Knox County School system, other than further bloating an already bloated the cost to taxpayers. We already have a leadership program to train principals, which I recall is run in conjunction with Vanderbilt University and named for the governor. The difference is local taxpayers pick up the tab for McIntyre's operation. The Leadership Academy is supposed to be a program with statewide application, yet after seven years of existence, perhaps three folks outside Knox County have attended the Center for Educational Leadership. Were the same true for the University of Tennessee, it would have closed its doors long ago. There are ninetyfive counties in Tennessee and even more school systems than there are counties. It should be obvious to anyone there isn't a line at the door waiting to get inside.

Local principals are inexplicably paid a $5,000 stipend for having a teacher from his or her school attend the Leadership Academy. Just what additional hardship is supposed to be imposed on the principal, most of whom are very well paid, has never been adequately explained. The fact is, the cost of the entire program is pretty hard to justify on any rational basis, aside from creating a golden parachute for Teachers, who loudly complained about McIntyre's policies and style of leadership, seem not to give much thought to his training the principals and assistant principals they will eventually work under. Many of the current members of the Board of Education were elected because of their opposition to McIntyre and his style of leadership. McIntyre, seeing the handwriting on the wall, chose to quit rather than work under a Board whose majority was unfriendly to him. Reputedly, Laurens Tullock, former head of the Cornerstone Foundation, is lobbying Board members to save McIntyre and the Leadership Academy. Readers will recall Tullock was busy during the last election cycle sending out emails from his Cornerstone account to raise money for the opponents of Board members Jennifer Owen and Susan Horn, as well as Law Director Bud Armstrong. The Cornerstone Foundation was supposed to be a non-profit organization and above politics. Rumors continue to circulate that Tullock was goaded into trying to help McIntyre by former superintendent Buzz Thomas, who worked closely with McIntyre in his capaci-

Schools Partnership. It is certainly true Buzz Thomas did everything he could to keep Bob Thomas from succeeding him as superintendent. Jim McIntyre was always the darling of the big business interests and Chamber-types and evidently they are working overtime to try and save him now.

The Board members, most of whom were elected as opponents of McIntyre, should not be hypocrites. If Jim McIntyre was not good enough to remain as superintendent, he's not good enough to train future generations of principals and McIntyre's golden parachute makes D. B. Cooper look like a piker and the Board should end it as quickly as possible.

aware of is a "single page document with a concept paper attached" which was signed by Dr. Jim McIntyre and Robert Rider, Dean of the University of Tennessee College of Education, Health and Human Services. According to Armstrong, the space for the signature of UT Chancellor Jimmy Cheek remains blank. Armstrong who was not Law Director at the time of the agreement, says he can find no evidence the document was ever reviewed by the Law Director's office. McMillan, a former member of the Knox County Commission, pointed out the expenditures for the Leadership Academy amount to almost $1 million annually and that would require approval by both the Board of Education and County Commission. "The Commission is

"While it may be pro forma, it still must be done and considering the amount of the expenditure, it would have to be done yearly."

McMillan says he does not believe the Leadership Academy is cost effective. "It was created by Dr. McIntyre while he was still superintendent of the schools. Dr. McIntyre personally picked every person to attend the academy while he also had the singular authority to appoint every principal and assistant principal at every school in this county."

The Leadership Academy was founded with the idea of McIntyre training future principals and assistant principals, whom he personally trained. "Of course," McMillan added, "nobody has ever explained how the Leadership Academy functioned without a full-time director until Jim resigned as superintendent." McIntyre is paid $180,000 annuCounty School system.

Mike McMillan referred to a white paper authored by Clint Sattler, Supervisor of Research and Evaluation, whose findings were presented to the members of the Board. "The findings as presented by Mr. Sattler were less than overwhelming," McMillan said. McMillan observed when Sattler cited data, it was usually for the first two years of the program, but that Sattler seemed to conclude after two years there was insufficient data to draw a conclusion. McMillan pointed out that during the first two years of the Leadership Academy's existence, McIntyre was still superintendent of Knox County Schools. "Jim pretty well had complete control of everything at that point," McMillan said. "He not only decided who got to attend the academy, which is funded by the Knox was pretty clear if someone wanted to get into a leadership role in the school system, they had to go to Jim's academy." In his findings, Clint Sattler noted "41.3% of new principal placements have been Leadership Academy alumni and the percentages of Leadership Academy alumni who were appointed principal within 2 years of their fellowship generally decreased each year of the program." Sattler suggested, "This may signal a need to examine candidate selection" as well as "Leadership Academy cohort size" or even "district placement practices." Still, Sattler says in his report there was "some evidence of consumer confidence in the quality of the program", although McMillan questioned that assertion. "I presume Mr. Sattler is referring to those attending the Leadership Academy when he refers to the consumers," McMillan stated. "I'm not sure just after having attended the Leadership Academy those folks fully expected to be appointed as an assistant principal or principal. I didn't see it measured or quantified in any way."

Picking two new members of the Knox County Ethics Committee turned a bit political last week. It took several rounds of voting to select Billy Stephens and Michael Covington to fill the vacant seats.

Mayor Tim Burchett's selection of Jennifer Roche was approved in the commission's work session the previous week. Things should run a lot smoother for Lady Vols this season

Holly Warlick, UT women's head basketball coach, speaks to the Rotary Club of Knoxville. She said last season's team chemistry was "zero," but she expects much better results in that area in the 2017-18 campaign.

By Steve Williams

The past two seasons of Tennessee women's basketball felt much like a rollercoaster ride for its fans. And for Coach Holly Warlick, there probably were nights when she felt like screaming ... and pulling her hair out.

Based on her comments to the Rotary Club of Knoxville last Tuesday, Warlick is feeling much better about the makeup of her team and the task at hand as the 2017-18 season draws near.

"Our team last year, what happened?" asked Warlick before those in attendance at the Foundry in World's Fair Park brought up the

"You heard there were a lot of things going on," started Warlick. "You've got to have leadership. We didn't have any leadership. We didn't have anybody step up consistently.

"Our team chemistry was zero. The bottom line, we didn't like need to go in our recruiting," she each other."

Since the loss of the great Pat Summitt, Warlick has coached longer than anyone inside the doors of the UT Athletics Department, having started as an assistant for Pat in 1985.

There have been a lot of changes over the past 32 years, and a big one Warlick has noticed is how some players treat the sport today.

"We're in the age of 'I want to be rich and I want to be famous, but I really don't want to do anything to get there. I just want it'," said Warlick.

"It's opened my eyes to where we want to go in the future. And for me, it started with recruiting."

It's easy to pick out the most talented players on the court, says Warlick. But which of those have

"That to me separates where we pointed out.

Warlick said her incoming freshmen, who make up the No. 1 class in the nation, are not perfect, but "they're good kids."

Harrell Road Park has River Trail

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

When Shauna Godlevsky spoke at the Northwest Knox Business and Professional Association recently she was asked about how many people use greenways and responded.

"I don't have the recorded numbers of people using specific greenways but we do see a lot of people are using them and the greenways have become very popular," she replied, adding, "The benefits to a community include health and increased property values."

Speaking further on the benefits of greenways and parks, the director of Parks Planning and Development spoke on the new Harrel Road Park between Karns and Powell.

Officially called the Harrell Road Stormwater Park, which opened in May of this year, the park is unique because it was designed to control stormwater runoff and features a rain garden, wetlands, native grasses, wildflowers and shrubs with interpretive signs along 400 feet of graveled walkways.

Located at 7221 Harrell Road between Karns and Powell the 19 acres was donated to Legacy Parks Foundation in 2008 and the group's Land Conservation Committee decided to turn the land into a neighborhood park.

Their effort turned an exposed clay soil mining area into a passive public park that can be used by professionals to teach about stormwater management and provide public recreation.

Most unique is that Harrell Park offers a canoe/kayak launch to the Beaver Creek Water Trail.

Roy Arthur of Legacy's Land Conservation Committee took the project on and put together public and private partnerships, coordinated federal and local employees and volunteers, and obtained about half of the cost in donations.

Carol Evans, Executive Director of Legacy Parks, told The Focus Tuesday that the foundation is acquiring about four acres near Strawberry Plains. The land, at the historic McBee Ferry Landing, will give people access to the Holston River and the waters of the Tennessee River.

The site, which will become another park, is part of the Foundation's Head of the Tennessee Initiative. A grant from the Tennessee Heritage Conservation Trust Fund is being used to purchase and enhance the area, which was once a major river crossing for early settlers

The foundation combined the funds with TVA and Knox County funding to improve the scenic property with environmental and shoreline preservation measures. Being added is interpretive signage, a gathering place and parking for residents and Sergeant Sammy Shaffer speaks during the PARC meeting Wednesday about what to do in an active-shooter incident. He explained the "Run, Hide and Fight" guidelines.

PARC meeting draws crowd

In their last quarterly meeting the Police Advisory and Review Committee voted to disagree with an internal review of an off-duty city policeman during an incident in Jefferson County. During the PARC meeting Wednesday Director Clarence Vaughn Jr. was asked about it.

Vaughn told a sizable crowd at Wesley House in Lonsdale that he has met with the police and made suggestions about more training and cultural awareness. He said he is now a member of a use-of-force committee within the department and is addressing quarterly training during mass roll calls of officers.

Chair Rosa Mar, elected by PARC in July, told the audience that the vice chair chosen in that last meeting, Ann Barker, had decided not to serve and she selected LaKenya Middlebrook for that position. The advisory committee reported that five internal affairs cases are being reviewed. Police Sergeant Sammy Shaffer spoke to the committee and the audience about how a person should react to an active shooter incident including "Run, Hide and Fight" guidelines.

"If you can't get away, the first option is to hide, turn off the lights, pull the blinds, barricade the door, call 911 but silence your phone," Shaffer said.

Moving On

There's no way I can calculate the number of times I have moved when I was a child. Now wait a minute! There's also no way to speculate the number of moves I've made since being an adult either. Why is that? I think the economy has a lot to do with it; the economy, the easy access to promising jobs in other areas of states, cities, and small towns. Or, perhaps, personal mishaps in families can constitute a move. Then, there's the old "keep up with the Jones" theory. Buy a bigger house, in a more outstanding neighborhood, near an exclusive school. Back in my day, the Depression era, people moved constantly because they were unable to pay the rent even when it was considerably low.

So, once again I have moved. It's amazing the things you find that you thought you had lost when you move. It's also amazing when you find items that you thought you gave away or that you wanted to keep for some future event.

The really startling thing about moving is the fact that it's a mystery where the sun shines--in the bedroom, kitchen, or living room in the mornings—where is it in the evenings? You have to be aware of this fact when distributing your plants around the house. It also helps to know which windows face North, South, East and West. You have to learn to move around your new home with agility. It's hard to put the same items in a different cupboard.

I actually know people who have lived in their homes for fifty, sixty years and I envy them sometimes. Oh, to stay put that long! Then I think, do they sometimes wish for a different scene, a different outlook on their surroundings? One never knows.

It's nice to rearrange different items in different locations. I like my new home. I'm anxious to meet new friends and neighbors. That's something to look forward to. Last, but not least, God moved right along with me. He followed me here and He's with me wherever I go.

"Fight when there's nothing else to do," he said, adding that the sheer number of people fighting an attacker is the best weapon.

"And be ready for our response because everybody is a suspect until we know where the shooter is," he said.

Shaffer said when officers first arrive at an active shooter site, they need to know where the shooter is. He said first aide and interviews can wait until the shooter is located.

When asked if threats at work or school should be reported, Shaffer said that a report should be made to the staff as well as to the police or sheriff's department.

Middlebrook reported that PARC currently has two complaints pending and Rosa asked why one officer had been terminated. She was told the firing came because of insubordination and refusal to work overtime in order to pick up five prisoners to be taken to jail.

A report on incidents brought to PARC so far this year indicated that of the 68 cases, 58% involved white residents, 42% involved African Americans, and one involved a Hispanic person. The majority of cases were brought by citizen advocates and involved

failure to investigate or injustice regarding investigations and unbecoming or unprofessional conduct. Since the creation of PARC in 1998 a total of 2460 cases have been reviewed by the committee. Sixty-two of the cases were resolved by the Executive Director, 17 by mediation, 13 referred to the appropriate agency, and seven resolved by the police department. During the public comment portion of the meeting Yvonne Stephens praised Officer Darren Carden for helping a homeless man who passed out during a community meeting. She also applauded the police department for peacefully handling gatherings at Krutch Park and at Fort Sanders. She complimented the city mayor and police department for being "pro-active."

For some reason, my favorite old pictures are of Jim and me as we grew up. Both of us were unfortunate looking little people. Our heads looked too large to have been supported by slender necks. In later pictures, our stomachs grew such skinny legs could prop them up. Pictures of us riding bikes in circles in the basement or wearing cowboy outfits complete with holsters and guns bring back smiles. So do the ones Mother snapped of our friends and dates before proms or during our 18th birthday party. It all seems to have taken place just a snap ago.

Maybe what we all would like is to be able to jump into some of those photos and hit the "run" button. For the next while, we'd be able to once again have time with the folks in those photos. I'd like another chance to sit on the towel atop the ice cream freezer as some adult cranked the handle. Then I'd spend a few minutes running and playing with cousins in the yard. It would be wonderful to have a family photo come to life just long enough to give special hugs to Mother and Daddy and my brother and to tell them how much I love them.

My goal is to pull out those pictures and share them with them my children. I want them to know who the people are in the photos and then share some tales or information about each of them so that they don't die with me. I'm sure a couple of tears will fall and smiles will spread across my face as I look at the faded photographs. Most of all, I just want to remember-good and bad times, all the things that have made this life of mine be such a glorious adventure to this point.

Tennessee and the League of Nations V

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill rayhill865@gmail.com from constituents and his own political party, Senator John Knight Shields of Tennessee remained determined to vote his convictions as the United States Senate considered the Treaty of Versailles. John Knight Shields had been the only Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to break ranks and support the treaty and American participation in the League of Nations with reservations. Henry Cabot Lodge, a Massachusetts Republican and Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee had agreed to America joining the League, but only if the Senate adopted a series of reservations, or amendments, that he believed would protect the United States. President Woodrow Wilson, crippled by a stroke, lay in the White House as determined as ever to reject any and all reservations. Wilson demanded Democrats and the Senate approve the Shields reiterated his position when speaking before the Senate in November of 1919. "I am pledged to support these reservations. I took that pledge when I appeared at the bar of the Senate and took the oath of office as a Senator to uphold the Constitution of the United States Senate," Shields explained. Senator Shields said there had been a time when the people of the United States had been now the Senate was being asked to "go into an alliance with the whole world of the most complex and difficult character."

Despite intense pressure

Naturally, the independence of John Knight Shields did not stand him in good stead with the White House. Even before Shields persisted in supporting reservations to the Treaty of Versailles, President Woodrow Wilson had not liked the Tennessean. Only the pleading of Shields' junior colleague, Senator Kenneth D. McKellar, persuaded the President from writing a public letter to the people of Tennessee denouncing Shields as no friend to the administration. Had Wilson written the letter, John Knight Shields would almost certainly have lost the Democratic primary to Governor Tom C. Rye in 1918. While Shields was opposed to the position taken by Wilson, Senator McKellar was backing the President wholeheartedly. The White House began to favor McKellar in matters of patronage over the senior senator. One such example was the matter of selecting the U.S. Marshal for the Middle Tennessee Vernon Sharp had been perceived as the leading contender once McKellar and Shields had protested the appointment of George Witt, which had been made by Attorney General Thomas Gregory just days before resigning his own office. The Witt appointment had been made without consulting either Tennessee senator and Vernon Sharp of Nashville was Senator Shields' choice to fill the U. S. Marshal's office. McKellar was backing Edward Albright of Gallatin, Tennessee. Prior to the debate over the treaty, most politically connected people in Tennessee believed Sharp was the heavy favorite for the appointment. The Nashville Tennessean reported there would likely be "reprisals" against the senior senator's patronage recommendations and McKellar's choice was expected to be nominated by the President. Likewise, McKellar's pick for Tennessee's commissioner for the enforcement of prohibition, Lewis Elkins, was expected to be selected. Nor was Shields expected to have much to say about the appointment of a postmaster for Nashville.

When John Knight Shields arrived in Knoxville from Washington, D. C. on November 21, 1919, he responded to a resolution approved by the Memphis Cotton Exchange and the Memphis Commercial Appeal. "I have no time now to prepare a statement concerning my support of reservations to the proposed League of Nations," sions of the Senate. The resolution of the cotton brokers and the editorial to which you refer are no surprise to me. When I took my stand for American sovereignty and the rights of the American people against the proposed League of Nations without proper reservations to protect them, I expected such opposition." Shields pointed to special interests backing the treaty and the League of Nations, saying, "Great capitalists who desire to speculate in the deprecated bonds of the bankrupt nations of Europe and dealers in cotton and food products, who desire to exploit those countries for selfish purposes and wanted the United States as provided in the League of Nations to stabilize those governments and make their bonds and contracts valid, have spent over a million dollars under the auspices of the League to Enforce Peace in organizing branches of their league, paying public speakers and subsidizing newspapers to have the treaty ratified." Senator Shields said he "expected opposition from these men" who cared less about the sovereignty of America than their own pocketbooks. Shields stressed his belief the proposed reservations were,

with only one exception, "necessary to protect and maintain the sovereignty of our country and the rights of our people."

"I cannot see how any American could object to a reservation to protect the interests of our own people," Shields snapped. To the charge he had been less than candid with the people of Tennessee while he was seeking reelection in 1918, Senator Shields offered a reasonable explanation. "The fourteen points of President Wilson were not an issue in my campaign, and I never at any time pledged myself to support them," Shields pointed out. "We were then in a war and if I had discussed the terms Shields said, "but I hope to of peace I would have prob-Shields said he refused to blindly follow any president, including Woodrow Wilson. The senator said the editor of the Commercial Appeal had "obeyed orders so long that it is possible he cannot now comprehend that a man and public officer can have convictions of his own..." Shields said not only would he not resign, but might well run again "if > I live so long." Much of the press in Tennessee ignored the senator's comments, or simply roasted him on the editorial pages yet again. The Bristol Herald-Courier in particular claimed Shields, while running for reelection "was a good and great friend of President Wilson" and flatly declared the senator had been "a firm believer in the Fourteen Points." The Herald-Courier bitterly said Shields could have been reelected on no other platform other than one of support for Woodrow Wilson. The Herald-Courier sneered at the notion John Knight Shields had either a conscience or convictions of his own.

attitude Tennessee's junior senator, Kenneth D. McKellar did nothing to alleviate the pressure upon John Knight Shields. McKellar had already been elected to Congress when Shields was first elected to the United States Senate in 1913. McKellar arrived in Congress in a 1911 special election, preceding the election of Woodrow Wilson as president in 1912. McKellar was an ardent supporter of Wilson and throughout his long congressional career and to the end of his life, believed Wilson was the greatest of the seven presidents he served with. Senator McKellar was also strongly in favor of the position taken by President Wilson for the Treaty of Versailles and the League of Nations. McKellar had toured the state of Tennessee speaking on behalf of the League. Senator McKellar missed few opportunities to drum up support for the League and in March of 1919, of the League of Nations. McKellar sent the president of the Kiwanis Club a copy of a telegram he had wired President Wilson, who was in Paris negotiating the Treaty of Versailles. McKellar told the President, "Ninety percent people of Tennessee, irrespective of party, favor League of Nations. Fisher concurs." Fisher was Congressman Hubert Fisher, McKellar's successor as the congressman from Shelby County and a former student of the President.

While speaking in Shelbyville, Tennessee for the League of Nations, the Nashville Tennessean, a newspaper not usually friendly to the senator (he had defeated Tennessean publisher Luke Lea), noted McKellar's presentation was both clear and logical. The Tennessean was also careful to note McKellar's speech was frequently interrupted by applause from the audience.

patronage in Tennessee, although there is no indication of personal hostilities between Tennessee's two senators. McKellar made a speech on the floor of the Senate in September of 1919 strongly defending President Wilson and assailing the President's McKellar concritics. ceded there were foundations for some of the criticism hurled at Wilson, but in the senator's opinion, most of it was "without rhyme or reason" as well as "without regard to facts." Wilson's Fourteen Points, the League of fourteen Democrats. John leery of making alliances do so as soon as I rest a ably been denounced as spoke before a Kiwanis Nations, and the Treaty of Knight Shields was one of with foreign nations and little after the arduous ses- a pacifist and a coward." Club in Nashville on behalf Versailles caused McKellar the fourteen Democrats to believe "everything the President did or said was exactly right." Once the peace was won, McKellar told his colleagues the President's "political enemies" descended upon Wilson and "politics superseded patriotism." "They knew of course," McKellar thundered, "that the chief honor of winning the war would naturally fall to President Wilson, and immediately upon the realization of that fact every one of those who during the war had claimed to be his friends but who were not, who claimed to be for his policies but who were not, began their tirade of abuse and vilification, and their machinations to prevent his getting credit for winning the war or secursaid he was wrong, but he was wrong even when they, during the war, for their own political reasons, had said he was right," Senator McKellar charged. As the treaty languished in the Senate under the Republican majority and with president Wilson gravely ill in the White House, Senator McKellar presented his own compromise plan. McKellar attempted to peel off the votes of some Republican senators who were believed to be "mild reservationists" not entirely sympathetic to the position taken by Henry Cabot Lodge. Along with Senator John B. Kendrick of Wyoming, McKellar prepared a draft for presentation to the Senate. The heart of the McKellar -Kendrick proposal made clear the United State "assumes no obligation to protect foreign territory by use of her armed forces or an economic boycott without specific action and approval by Congress..." McKellar had stopped in Memphis for two days following his journey to Alabama to attend the funeral of Senator John H. Bankhead of Alabama. Senator McKellar was then called back to Washington, D. C. by Senator Minority Leader Gilbert Hitchcock who said the Tennessean was urgently needed at the Capitol for ratification of the Treaty of Versailles. Before departing for Washington, McKellar told a reporter, "The situation looks more hopeful than ever for agreement on reservations and speedy ratification of the treaty. It now looks like we are going to do something right away." Senator McKellar's optimism turned out to be unwarranted. When the Senate voted on March 15, 1920, all ten of the reservations promoted by Henry Cabot Lodge were approved by a two-to-one majority, which included voting with the Republicans for adoption, while K. D. McKellar voted against the measure. It was not long before Woodrow Wilson nemesis, Henry Cabot Lodge, moved to pass a resolution to return the treaty to the President stating it could not be ratified by the U.S. Senate. Both Senators McKellar and Shields voted against the proposal. Forty-nine senators voted for ratification of the treaty with the Lodge reservations, while thirtyfive senators voted against it. It was the fourth time the treaty had failed to be ratified by the Senate.

The treaty was dead for the time being and the only hope for ratification was the opinion of the American people as expressed in the 1920 election.

The Knoxville FOCUS Change at the Crossroads

By Ralphine Major ralphine3@yahoo.

At times, it is hard to remember what the landscape was like before the much needed red lights. For years, it seemed nothing changed at the fourway stop at Harbison's Crossroads. Our school bus ride always passed by the late Neva Cardwell's home on the right before reaching the crossroads. Mrs. Cardwell was the much loved first grade teacher for over 40 years at Gibbs Elementary School. A couple of homes were on two corners of the intersection, and businesses were on the others. It was before Exon, Weigel's, Walgreen's, and Home Federal located on the four corners; before turn lanes, bicycle lanes, and red lights were installed; and before the dips turning either way onto Emory Road were raised. Newcomers to the community may not notice that many of the landmark homes and hayfields have been replaced with banks, businesses, and restaurants.

No longer do Gibbs residents have to go to Halls or toward Smithwood and Broadway for many of their needs. From the site of the new Gibbs Middle School all the way to the gap of the ridge, there is an influx of new businesses, including the IGA grocery store, drug stores, auto shops, beauty shops, a church, and even Rural Metro.

The new growth of the community is great. But somewhere in the pages of my mind, I look back on the crossroads that existed before the recent growth. I see a big yellow school bus pull up to the four-way stop before turning onto Tazewell Pike toward Gibbs High School. It is so important to remember where we came from to appreciate where we are today.

Spooks!

After the end of World War II there was a need to step up observations of the Russian government and its military.

Three days before the end of WW2, August 29, 1945, the Russians were already shooting at our airplanes over Korea.

In 1952 President Truman, through a Presidential Directive, (NOT an act of Congress) opened an office called the National Security Agency. Without Congressional oversight, our electronic spooks could operate all over the

They operated between 100 fathoms deep in the waters and 100 miles in the air. An air crew would consist of frontenders to fly the plane, and backenders behind closed doors to operate and perform secret duties and missions. The backenders did not disclose what they were doing to the frontenders. Their roles were totally separate, operating on a need to know basis. Flight 60528 was shot down and crashed in Armenia. The Russians denied shooting the plane down. The Americans denied doing anything wrong. Six frontenders died along with 11 backenders who were not doing anything they should not have been doing according to both governments.

Over 200 air crew members died in service to their country working in these conditions. Walter Cronkite, Chet Huntley and David Brinkly would report the downed planes as training accidents. 200 gave their lives to test the responsiveness of the Russian military. If you listen to the news, you will hear occasionally about Russia planes doing the same to us in Alaska. Testing our responses. These Cold War Warriors were sworn to silence. Their sources and methods protected above all else at all costs. To disavow and misinform the public was a tactic to do the same to the enemy. Tom Clancy called them SHADOW WARRIORS, the proper term would be: Silent Warriors. Routinely crossing and entering into the teeth of our enemies. And when downed,

Silent Warriors

What is the make-up of this breed.... these strange and special few? Where do they come from, year-on-year? What is it that they do?

They are like shadows in the night or vapor in the air so seldom seen and rarely heard but rest assured, they're there

They come not from a single place they come from far and wide the open plains, the city streets the rural countryside

They are the farmer's little boy, the girl who lived next door the uncle of a high school friend who gave his life at war

They are the barber's youngest child who heard his country's call or friends with whom we laughed and sipped whose names are on "THE WALL"

And what they do, you needn't ask for none will ever tell in silence based on "need to know" they proudly serve so well

They're much the same as all before who vanquished freedom's foe they are the ones who fuel the fire which keeps THE TORCH aglow.

Central wins elimination game to make playoffs

By Steve Williams

Central played its way into the state playoffs with a 13-7 overtime win at Gibbs Friday night.

The Bobcats (5-5), Class 4A state runners-up last year, earned the No. 4 seed in Region 2-5A with the victory and will play at Region 1 champion Daniel Boone (8-2) in first-round action this Friday night.

"I couldn't be more proud of the players, coaches and everyone a part of the program," said Central Head Coach Bryson Rosser. "To battle adversity the way we did this season and end it on a note such as this is a compliment to the way we kept things in perspective and were able to continue our season.

PREPS OF THE PAST: Forty-five years ago, on Thursday, Oct. 26, 1972 - Bobby Neff's 18-yard field goal with 31 seconds remaining lifted visiting South to a 16-14 win over previously unbeaten West. Neff, a junior, also was a standout on defense and Coach Willard Brown complimented his blocking.

The winning kick was an early birthday gift for Neff, who turned 16 the following Monday.

Teammate Gary Rogers' 98-yard kickoff return was the biggest scoring play in the game and pulled the Rockets into a 7-7 tie in the second quarter.

The following night, Oct. 27, 1972, Central (9-0) turned back visiting Clinton 48-6 as three interceptions in the first quarter - two by Jeff Dykes and one by Tom Mabry - sparked Coach Frank "Boomer" Boring's Bobcats to a 24-0 lead.

Mike Huskisson ran for three touchdowns and passed for another to lead the Central attack. Defensively, Dykes, Mike Hensley, Rex Sexton, Jeff Sharp and Keith Garren were instrumental in holding the Dragons to minus 34 yards rushing.

Clinton, which had come into the game with three straight shutouts, including a 9-0 decision over Oak Ridge, had become known for starting the same 11 players on offense and defense under Coach Ken Honea.

KAHA veteran Mackle takes the reins for Knoxville Warriors

Ed Mackle is a familiar face in Knoxville youth hockey and for the past few years he's served as an assistant coach for the Knoxville Warriors, a team in the Knoxville Amateur Hockey Association's high school league. Mackle, a Toronto, Ontario native, obviously has a passion for ice hockey. Now, he'll get the chance to share the game he loves as a high school head coach in East Tennessee.

He was recently named to replace longtime Warriors coach Dave Roulier. Mackle coached Knoxville during the second half of the 2016-17 season. He guided the Warriors on a postseason run that saw them make the State Tournament (along with the 2016-17 State Champion Farragut Admirals). Mackle coached after an illness forced Roulier to leave the bench, although he would return and play a limited role during the playoffs.

season, which opens Wednesday night when the Warriors tangle with the Knoxville Knights at 6:40 p.m. at the Icearium. The Knights also have a new head coach in Steven Barnard. "This is a great opportunity," Mackle said. "I love

Mackle said that he's looking forward to the upcoming working with the kids. Hockey is a great sport. It's life. It teaches life lessons just like every other sport."

Mackle's son Nick plays for the Warriors and is one of the KAHA High School League's top scorers.

Ed, who is an avid Toronto Maple Leafs fan, has been with KAHA for nearly two decades. He also plays in one of KAHA's men's league. "Hockey is a lot of fun and it's a way of life," Mackle said. "I love teaching kids the game and I've been with KAHA for almost 20 years.

"I play in a men's league and I watch a lot of hockey. Hockey is a full-time job." Mackle is one three new coaches in the high school league. Only Farragut's Jeff Lindsay returns. Like Mackle, Lindsay is a Toronto native and a Maple Leafs fan. The other new coaches are Barnard, who replaces longtime head man Greg Maine and Bearden Ice Dawgs coach Mike Raleigh.

Raleigh replaces Aaron Barnes, who departed after last season.

Hardin Valley shocks Farragut 37-36 By Alex Norman

What a game...

Hardin Valley Academy understood the situation. They needed a win over Farragut on Thursday, October 26, and then some help to make the playoffs.

The Hawks played inspired football, gave up a huge halftime lead, but rallied just in time to knock off Farragut 37-36. This coming less than a week after a 42-3 loss at Bearden. "We went in and challenged our team, it was about pride," said Hardin Valley head coach Wes Jones. "We knew we had a small chance, but that we'd also have no chance unless we competed to win. We decided to buckle down and get after it. This was a tribute to our kids and I'm proud of them." On Hardin Valley's second drive, the Hawks faced 3rd and goal from the Farragut 9. Hardin Valley got tricky. The handoff went to running back Aaron Dykes, who then threw the football into the waiting arms of Cartez Campbell for The two-point conversion was no good, but Hardin Valley had a 6-0 lead in the final seconds of the first quarter. On HVA's next drive, Dykes scored on a three yard touchdown run. It was all Hardin Valley in the early going, leading 13-0 with 10:55 to go in the first half. On the night Dykes had over 160 rush-

Things went from bad to worse when Wilkinson was sacked in the end zone on the first play of the next drive by Eduardo Martorell, making it 15-0.

After the Admirals free kick, Hardin Valley (5-5, 3-3 in Region 1-6A) took possession at their own 45. Dykes broke multiple tackles and gained 51 yards to the Farragut 4. Dykes finished that drive with a touchdown run on the very next play, making it 22-0 with 10:25 left in the first half.

Jones knows better than anyone just how important Dykes is for this Hawks

"He's paramount. He's a fantastic football player and one of the best we've had here at Hardin Valley," said Jones. "When we put hats on hats he can do special things and our guys gave him an opportunity tonight." Farragut's offense was able to move the football into Hardin Valley territory thanks to a couple of nice catches by Jacob Warren, but Wilkinson would be picked off again, this time by Cameron York at the HVA 5. At the half, it was 22-0 Hardin Valley.

In the third quarter Farragut (8-2, 4-2 in Region 1-6A) once again moved the football into Hardin Valley territory. They'd face 4th and 8 from the HVA 25, but EJ Caldwell picked off Wilkinson at On Farragut's next drive the Admirals finally got on the scoreboard. Josh

Moses ran it in from 3 yards away, and with 2:46 to go in the third it was a 22-7 After forcing a turnover on downs, Farragut got on the scoreboard again.

Gibbs ran around the right side for 15 yards, and it was 22-14 with 11:45

remaining in the game. It looked like Farragut had all the momentum. But Grayson Vaughn hit Campbell for a gain of 36 yards to the Admirals 30. Two plays later that combo worked for a 17 yard touchdown toss, and it was 29-14 with 10:33 to go.

Back and forth these rivals went, throwing haymakers. Wilkinson threw it to Braden Collins on a 13-yard hookup. That Farragut score made it 29-21 Hardin Valley with only 8:38 to go.

A Dykes fumble was recovered by Farragut's Nnamdi McSwine, and the Admirals had the football at the HVA 23.

From there it only took one play. Wilkinson to a wide open Jaden Gibbs for a touchdown. They went for two and got it when Wilkinson's pass was grabbed by Lucas, and incredibly, with 7:20 to go, the game was tied at 29. HVA would go three and out, and punted the football back to Farragut and with 5:22 to go, Farragut took over on their own 30.

But then Gibbs fumbled. Braylin Pryor recovered for the Hawks at the Farra-HVA would go for it on 4th and 9 but couldn't convert, giving Farragut the football right back with 3:32 to go. On 3rd and 7 from the Hawks 47, Wilkinson found Collins on a 23 yard

And Moses seemed to put the capper on the comeback, as he went 15 yards pretty much untouched for the score making it 36-29 with 1:20 remaining. But HVA wasn't done, and with 8 seconds remaining Vaughn somehow found Noah Moro in the end zone for a 38 vard touchdown. Hardin Valley could have kicked and forced overtime but went for two and the win. Vaughn rolled out, and found a wide open Travis Griffin for the victory.

Unfortunately for HVA, they were eliminated from postseason play when Bearden defeated Morristown West taking the 4th and final seed in Region

Coach J.D. Overton made several changes in the early going for the betterment of the team and the end result was a Region 2-5A championship and the No. 1 seed in the playoffs that goes with it.

The Red Devils capped their turnaround with a 47-6 win over Seymour Friday night at Dink Adams Field.

The victory gave Halls a 5-1 record in the region and evened its overall mark at 5-5 - an impressive climb from 0-3.

The young Seymour team, which had only four seniors, finished 0-10 but never stopped battling.

Oak Ridge's Defense Stifles Fulton

By David Klein

The old adage, "defense wins championships," proved true Friday night in a Region 3-5A game at Fulton that decided the regular season regional championship between the Fulton Falcons and the Oak Ridge Wildand got just enough offense to prevail 21-12.

With the win, Oak Ridge earned a number one seed and will face Soddy-Daisy at home in the first round of the Class 5A Playoffs. Fulton will be the number two seed and hosts Lenoir City at home.

Oak Ridge scored the goahead touchdown in the first half with 38 seconds left on a 41-yard touchdown pass from Johnny Stewart to Caleb Martin to put the Wildcats up

Before Martin's touchdown catch, the Falcon defense had been limiting the Wildcats. On a 3rdand-10, J'Coryan Anderson stepped in front of Stewart's pass and ran the interception back 43 yards for a touchdown with 2:46 left in the first quarter. Fulton would miss the extra point but led

In the third quarter, Oak made key plays on defense the clock, the Wildcats drove the ball to the Falcons' 5-yard line. Oak Ridge got a delay of game penalty on 4th-and-1 to force the Wildcats to kick a field goal; Oak Ridge missed the 26-yard field goal.

However, Fulton could not take advantage of the missed field goal and gave the ball right back to Oak Ridge. Herbert Booker intercepted Malone's pass, his second interception he threw. On the next play, Caelan Thompson ran for a 3-yard touchdown. The score put the Wildcats up 14-6 with 1:18 left in the third quarter.

"The ones (turnovers) we got from them were big turning points in the game and momentum stoppers," Gaddis said. "I thought the defense did a heck of a job creating the turnovers," he added.

Fulton had its best offensive possession of the night at the beginning of the fourth quarter. Malone threw a 32-yard pass to Fenderson to get the ball into Wildcats' territory. Six plays later on a 3rd-and-goal, Malone threw a 6-yard touchdown pass to Fenderson. Fulton missed the 2-point conversion but cut the Wildcats' lead to

"I've never had a game where everybody, news media, Knoxville, even a lot of people in Oak Ridge, knew we were going to lose this game. I never thought we would. Our players didn't. But, it was pretty much a consensus, whether it was the news media on TV or whoever else. I'm proud of our guys for winning the game that I knew if we played well, we would." Before the game, Fulton honored former player Zaevion Dobson on Senior Night by retiring his #24 jersey number. Dobson would have been a senior this year, but was killed when he shielded three girls from gunfire nearly two years ago. Zenobia Dobson, his mother, and brothers Zacklyn and Markastin joined on field for the ceremony before the game. Balloons were released in Dobson's honor. "We've known this for a long time that we were going to do this and we wanted to do it on his (Zaevion's) senior night," Fulton Head Coach Rob Black said. It was Black's idea to surprise Zenobia. "I can't imagine anybody else being more deserving," he added of the decision to honor Zaevion.

The Doctor is in a weekly column by Dr. Jim Ferguson

Moral Psychology

How can we have common sense if we have nothing in common? The word community derives from the root word common and refers to a people who have commonly held interests. Does common sense or community still exist in our divided United States of America? I've always wondered how two sane people from similar backgrounds can see or hear the same thing and yet have vastly different perspectives and conclusions. I encounter this phenomenon all the time. Perhaps it's my inherent curiosity or my training that focuses my attention on human behavior. Perhaps the internist in me just wants to know why. I'll admit at the onset of this essay that my bias (like everyone else's) shapes my perceptions.

Bias is defined as prejudice (pre-judging) of one perspective over another. As a Christian I am warned about judging others. But, I believe the implied admonition is against condemnation rather than discernment. I make judgments all day long as I navigate roads and relationships. It's not prejudice when I drive carefully; it's common sense that I share with most -but not all - travelers on Alcoa highway. Nor is it prejudice when I speak and act carefully in our toxic, racially and sexually charged politically correct environment.

I listened to a fascinating interview on WUOT last week. The program On Being hosted Jonathan Haidt PhD, whose research is focused on morality, a concept which interests me. Mr. Webster defines morality as principles relating to right and wrong. You may find it shocking that a fundamental tenet of our postmodern era is that everything is relative and there is no absolute right or wrong. Obviously, I disagree with this modern zeitgeist.

Dr. Haidt believes humans cooperate because we inherit a transcultural moral psychology which binds humans together in clans and community. But does it any longer? The doctor describes himself as a liberal-secular-atheist, a philosophy with which I disagree. Despite the doctor's bias, he recognizes that moral psychology is best realized in a sacred setting (i.e. religion). Haidt contrasts religion with other cohesive ideologies such as politics. And he notes that modern passions and controversies regarding marriage and economic equality often run counter to the traditional notions of American values and family.

What really intrigued me about the doctor's research was his identification of what he sees as five fundamental moral perspectives and how liberals and conservatives differ. Haidt found that liberals and conservatives both juggle notions of compassion and fairness in dealing with life's issues. However, the doctor's research showed that conservatives also consider the perspectives of loyalty, authority and sanctity in their deliberations while liberals do not. And because liberals consider fewer domains, they find it hard to understand conservatives. Numerous surveys have shown that liberalism is the dominant philosophy of the media and academia. As a result a conservative perspective is rarely considered and felt to be odd in Washington DC, the media and in universities. Amazingly, the academic Haidt admits he had never read a conservative viewpoint until he was forty years old!

While sweeping generalizations, even if predicated on research data, are fraught with error, conservatives seem to prefer order and predictability while liberals prefer variety and diversity. To me these intuitional proclivities, and those described above, explain why people draw such different conclusions to the same situations. We may be born with "moral receptors (like taste buds)" which cause our minds to perceive "pleasure or displeasure" in a given situation. It is apparent that America is now divided into two camps, and if we are to rise above our inability to communicate we must consider our own "moral matrix" and the matrix of those who view situations differently.

Years ago I wrote about the Myers Briggs psychometric instrument which analyzes how humans receive and then act on information. I am an ISTJ and my wife, Becky, scores as an ENFP. I am an introvert (I) who is a sifter of data (S) who acts upon this information objectively (T) and expeditiously (J). Becky is an extrovert (E) with superior reasoning skills (N) and methodically acts upon her conclusions (P) with empathy (F). Both composites have gifts differing as the Apostle Paul described. There are no inherently wrong perspectives nor is conservatism or liberalism inherently right or wrong. It's just the way the Master constructed us. We do not convert others with arguments. But, with humility we can make a difference through building relationships. In other words, the messenger is more important than the message.

It should be obvious the fabric of our DNA. why understanding the philosophy of others is important in a civilization or a community. Understanding leads to tolerance of different perspectives, and in a stable community liberal diversity is important. However, if variety promotes racial, sexual and social class warfare, the United States may become "balkanized" (a good concept to understand). Dr. Haidt says "liberalism is by nature divisive," but, in a stable group, promotes justice. The trick is to maintain the structure afforded by a conservative philosophy in which group integrity and comity promotes getting things done.

Social sciences aside, I believe morality and the way of a virtuous life is more than research data. I believe the construct is imprinted on us by our Maker. Perhaps God does this through our DNA; after all, almost everything else is determined by genetics. This perspective was articulated by the noted scientist, Francis Collins, the former director of the human genome project and now head of the NIH. Dr. Collins was once an atheist, and is now a Christian. He wrote "The Language of God" and believes our nature is written upon

The Psalmist sang, "We are fearfully and wonderfully made." Surely, we can all agree on that.

God Helps Those Who Help Themselves

By Mark Brackney, Minister of the Arlington Church of Christ

You have likely heard or said the phrase, "God helps those who help themselves." According to Barna Group, a Christian polling firm, they found that eight in ten Americans think this phrase is in the Bible. Actually, it can be traced back to Greek mythology in the 5th century B.C., but has been made popular in America due to Ben Franklin who put it in his book, Poor Richard's Almanac, in 1736. This phrase sounds biblical, but is it? Yes and no. God does bless us with jobs, with food, and with shelter. But along with what God does, we are to be a part of the process. For example, I can pray all day for God to give me a job, but praying alone will likely not be enough. I need to avail myself to job recruiting firms, to polishing up my resume, networking with others, looking for job openings, submitting applications, preparing the process.

es he planted that Jesus was ferent as Me). I highly recomcoming back and His return could be imminent. This caused some people to quit their jobs and wait for His return. Paul had to tell them to get back to work and put food on the table (2 Thessalonians 3:10-12). Faith in God should move us to action. We are God's instruments, His hands and feet. We use our influence and domain to do what we can to stand up for justice, provide for our families, and do what we can to help others.

phrase, "God helps those who help themselves" is used by people as a way to ignore their responsibility to help others. We are called by God to love our neighbors and to help those who can't help themselves. There is a current movie out right now same name that shows how 121:1-2).

God wants kingdom people to help the poor, the orphan, the widow, the foreigner and the needy (Leviticus 23:22; James 1:27; Galatians 5:6; Proverbs 19:17; 21:13;

God uses people like you and me to help others. God will put opportunities in your path, but also be discerning. We want to create independence, not dependence in our helping. That can be hard to know at times, but What I fear is that the what is not debatable is that we are to help.

One final thought: we all need God. God is our only hope. We have descended too far in our sin and despair and thus cannot help or save ourselves. God wants us to do the very best we can, but we need to recognize that based on the book with the we need God's help (Psalm
