New system funded by city to aid homeless

Almost unnoticed in the Knox le City Council agenda recent ly was a resolution that may play a big part in coordi ing various programs to help the homeless in Knoxvil An agreement with the Uniof Social Work, requested by the Department of Commu nity Development, will create a Coordinated Entry System for use by the city and various search out shelter and housing programs for individuals and amilies. The vote passed unar imously without discussion.

The College of Social Work at UT currently administers a project that operates an internet-based multi-agency data base. The new CES program will enhance that support for the city office. The city agreed to fund $90, 450 which will mostly go toward staffing two new positions at UT that

Mike Dunthorn coordinator of Knoxville's Office of Home lessness, said the program rill provide oversight for those who deal with the issue

This is the next level," he said. He added the Coordinated Entry System will provide a database of available services and keep track of the homeless and their needs. The new system would standardize the intake and referral needs, find vulnerability and locate housing when available with the City's Homelessness Office to set metrics, review data to help the city in monitoring partner agencies and help implement the program

UT will develop and main tain the software which will list by name the individuals for housing and service priorities and list multi-agency housing and service cases through regular attendance and participation with the Mayor's Roundtable on Homelessi as well as the Knoxville-Knox County Homeless Coalition Knoxville's Community Devel opment Dashboard on the inter net shows 2,677 known homeless in the 3rd quarter of this year, up from 2,436 in the 2nd quarter. There were 934 new homeless in the 3rd quarter.

The Every Student Suc-ceeds Act was signed by President Obama on December 10, 2015. This bipartisan measure reau-thorizes the 50-year-old Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA), the nation's national education law and longstanding parents, and students across the country

One point of conten-tion that board members brought up was the require-ment that 95% of all students, in all subjects, in all subgroups, (like English as a Second Language) be tested. Representative Amber Rountree observed that Knox County has a

MPC membership questioned by County Commission

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

Resentment over policies of the Metropoli tan Planning Commission seems to be growing among some Knox County residents. The debate over requiring sidewalks in some new county subdivisions sparked ques-tions about the power of the commission

Commissioner Brad Anders, who has announced he may seek the office of Knox County mayor, asked pointedly in a meeting recent-Do we need the planning commission?"

The real guestion is whether the county will maintain its membership in the MPC and, if not, how would the county form its own agency

Scott Davis, a developer and former Knox County commissioner, told The Focus recently that something to be considered is a legal challenge to city appointees voting on county matters before the MPC. Currently Knox County Mayor Tim Burchett appoints seven MPC members and Mayor Mad-eline Rogero appoints six members. Both city and county members consider all issues coming before the commission, elect their own chair and vice chair, and pass most of their decisions to the Knox County Commission or the Knoxville City Council

Some issues, according to MPC Execu-tive Director Nathan Green, are MPC only decisions and don't go beyond the planners or need other approval. He told The Focus recently that the state code places the authority of subdivision requirements squarely with the MPC without any further approval or disapproval. That doesn't apply to zoning changes, which are forwarded to either the city or county government bodies

"If you live in Knox County you do not have the right to vote for the city mayor who is making appointments to the MPC," Davis said, adding that those appointees then vote on county zoning requests and land use

"Basically that's taxation with-out representation." he said.

Only county-appointed MPC members should be voting on county projects," Davis said. "In my opinion the city appointees have no right to be voting on Knox County projects. The ast majority of MPC votes are split between the city and county appointees," he said.

The reverse is true, of course, that county appointees also vote on city land use questions. In some city-county shared departments, such as the His-toric Zoning Commission, only city or county appoin tees vote on city or county matters. Each jurisdic-tion has separate Boards of Zoning Appeals groups

The 15 members of the MPC serve staggered four-year terms and work with an execu tive director and about 35 staff members. The executive director is chosen by both mayors.
