Tom Spangler for Sheriff Campaign Opens Headquarters

By Focus Staff

With the holidays over and a new year underway, the 2018 political season has begun. Tom Spangler, Republican candidate for Knox County Sheriff, opened his campaign headquarters last week on 1601 Western Avenue.

In a two-day event, occurring over Thursday and Saturday, Spangler treated guests to appetizers, coffee, tea and desserts and a big welcome. The Spangler headquarters was packed with visitors on Thursday when The Focus visited.

Tom Spangler worked his way up through the ranks of the Knox County sheriff's department, serving at various times as a patrolman, SWAT team member, narcotics detective and chief deputy to the sheriff. Spangler eventually became the interim sheriff of Knox County. Spangler dedicated his life to law enforcement after a stint in the Air Force.

The number of retired and current sheriff's deputies and other law enforcement professionals joining Spangler for the opening of his headquarters was amazing. It was impossible to miss that Spangler has deep and strong support from his fellow law enforcement officers, but there was a big crowd of ordinary citizens in attendance as well. That a large crowd turned out was not surprising at all as Spangler is known for being forthright, honest, and less a politician than a law enforcement professional. One thing is for certain, Tom Spangler is off to a great start and isn't the usual courthouse type of candidate.

Matt Fagiana, Campaign Aid and former Knox County officer and State Trooper, had this to say about Spangler:

"Tom Spangler is the only candidate with the full experience and background in law enforcement. He has served in leadership roles. He has led the training academy, worked in the jail and on patrol and has truly walked in the shoes of the officers he wants to lead.

"At the end of the day you want to elect someone who has that kind of experience and understanding of what it takes to run the department that keeps our community safe. Tom Spangler is one of most ethical and moral men I know and he has the passion and qualities to lead the sheriff's department. The 1000+ employees can trust the leadership of someone who has the experience to lead the department.

"Tom Spangler is a candidate we the taxpayers can trust to make the most of the county's resources. If given the opportunity by the voters he will make a great sheriff for the citizens of Knox County."

MPC talks sidewalks again

By Pete Gawda

At their meeting on Thursday, January 11 the Knoxville-Knox County Metropolitan Planning Commission (MPC) once again came up against the issue of sidewalks when a developer protested what he called "a sidewalk to nowhere."

Primos Land Company presented for concept/use on review approval a proposed 37-lot subdivision on the north side of Crippen Road and the west side of Recreation Lane. One of the conditions for approval was that a sidewalk be constructed outside the subdivision along Crippen Road. The developer requested that condition be removed. He noted that it would not connect to an existing sidewalk and that he had plans for sidewalks within the subdivision and a sidewalk going to a nearby ball field.

"I really have a problem requiring a sidewalk that does not have a connecting sidewalk or where there should be a county sidewalk," was the opinion of

Chair Rebecca Longmire. "That just doesn't make sense to me."

In response to a question staff stated that there are no plans for a county sidewalk in that area.

The MPC granted approval without the sidewalk requirement.

Jim Sullivan's request for concept/use on review approval passed with no opposition and no discussion. His proposed 115 lot Hickory Creek Farms

2018's political year update

By Mike Steely

The primary election deadline for filing is a month away but already there are several races drawing opponents, most of them Republican. So far of the 24 announced candidates for the various county offices only four are Democrats. The at-large seat 10, where county mayor candidate Bob Thomas now serves, has two Republicans and two Democrats who have petitions for election.

February 15 is the filing deadline for the county races. Given the August 2 primary date for state and federal filings, 2018 looks like a long and political year for Knox County, the state and the national offices.

Thus far there are few Democrats stepping forward to get petitions for election. County Democrat Chair Emily Gregg told The Focus that there are potential candidates but they have not declared yet.

Superintendent Thomas gave his report to the Knox County Board of Education in their regular meeting Wednesday. He stated that he had been directed by the board at the December meeting to appoint a committee to help him organize a new Leadership Academy with the University of Tennessee. Thomas reported that the committee had been chosen and that the first meeting was scheduled for January 12, 2018.

Thomas also reported that the first of many strategic planning meetings had been held at West Valley Middle School on Tuesday night with approximately forty people in attendance. South-Doyle High School, Thomas relayed, has been chosen as a Lighthouse School of Distinction. Also, Julie Thompson was named Supervisor of the Year by the Tennessee Principals Association. Lastly, Thomas congratulated Melissa Glover as being named Assistant Principal of Hardin Valley Middle School and Scott Reed as being named Assistant Principal of Gibbs Middle School.

Fourth district member Lynn Fugate inquired when Knox County Schools and the University of Tennessee will be ready to solicit candidates for the next Leadership Academy and Thomas replied, "in February."

Miss Davis talked briefly about drug addiction and overcoming issues related to addiction in family members and loved ones. She has devoted her reign to speaking to over 50,000 school age children all over Tennessee about alcohol and opioid addiction. What is a Holographic Will and is it a Legitimate Will?

You may have never heard of the term, "holographic will." What does it mean? A holographic will is a will that is handwritten and signed by the person making the will.

By Jedidiah McKeehan

handwriting of the testator and the testator's handwriting must be proved by two (2) witnesses."

What does that mean? That means that the entire will must be handwritten by the person making the will and after the person dies, their handwriting must be confirmed by two witnesses.

So, can you write out your own will in Tennessee. Yes, you can. While I do not recommend it, it can be done.

Jedidiah McKeehan is an attorney practicing in Knox County and surrounding counties. He works in many areas, including criminal, personal injury, landlord-tenant, probate, and estate planning. Visit attorney-knoxville.com for more information about this legal issue and other legal issues.

Some states do not recognize holographic wills as valid wills and they are definitely not preferred as they are usually considered to be less professional and do not cover all of the bases that a professionally done will does.

Holographic wills are legal in Tennessee. That means that if someone handwrites out their will, that will is an actual, valid will that can be probated.

Tennessee Code Annotated section 32-1-105 deals specifically with holographic wills. It states, "No witness to a holographic will is necessary, but the signature and all its material provisions must be in the

Briggs and Massey face some tough questions

By Mike Steely
steelym@knoxfocus.com

In recent weeks members of the local state legislature have been meeting with various groups including the Knox County Commission and the Knoxville City Council.

When Knox County's two state senators, Dr. Richard Briggs and Becky Duncan-Massey, sat before the League of Women Voters recently neither of them probably expected to be asked some hard ball questions. It was obvious that the audience welcomed both elected officials but it was also obvious that some audience members had some strong disagreements with the two senators.

Questions about gun control, vouchers for special needs students, medical marijuana, guns on campus, and deportation attempts of foreign born children stirred some comments and audience resistance. But probably the loudest response from the audience came when Senator Briggs mentioned rumors of voter fraud.

"I think I'm hearing different things," he said, adding, "There's no controversy on voter fraud?"

The mention of "voter fraud" prompted the president of the League of Women Voters, Linda Maccabe, to immediately step forward as the crowd yelled "No" at Briggs' remark.

"We work very closely with our election officials here in Knox County," Maccabe said.

"I believe the Knox County Election Commission has done an exceptional job," she said, adding, "I am absolutely confident in their ability to make sure that the voting is clean."

Senator Massey agreed that "Knoxville is best" and the election commission "does a really fine job."

"I agree, I think it's that way everywhere in the United States. That's not what I said," Senator Briggs said.

"What I said is that it's being brought up. To say it's not been in the news is denying reality. What we have to do is that when we register people to vote we need to make sure it's ironclad and defensible. We do a great job in Knox County and I think we just need to put it to rest," Briggs said.

He went on to question registering people to vote when they get a driver's license.

"Do you have to be a citizen to get a driver's license?" he asked, mentioning undocumented workers may want to get a license.

Massey then brought up her bill that will change the underage license format beginning this summer. The new vertical ID could make it more difficult for underage drivers to buy alcohol. On allowing the use of medical marijuana in the state Briggs said the issue will be back before the legislature this year. He said he served on a "joint taskforce" in the last session but voiced no opinion on the issue.

Massey and Briggs were praised for their stand for "Insure Tennessee" and Briggs lamented the closure of 11 rural hospitals in the state. Briggs also commented that the hospital association will be bringing up the issue of health care up again.

On the issue of school vouchers and charter schools Massey said she supports charters but not vouchers. Briggs said, "We don't need vouchers in Knox County," adding that a parent can change a child's school with a request to the school board.

Massey said she supports charter schools because they are controlled by the local school board.

Speaking to a question about undocumented college students Briggs said permitting that attendance by tuition passed a senate committee but failed in a house vote.

Massey said that an opioid bill will probably come back before the legislature this year and Briggs said he's concerned with the growing number of "private prisons" in the state.

Fullington.

Democrats in the race for Congress are Joshua Williams, a Knoxville psychologist, and Renee Hoyos, executive director of the Tennessee Clean Water Network.

State Legislature

Knox County Commissioner and former Chairman Dave Wright is so far the only Republican to file to replace retiring State Representative Harry Brooks. Democrat Edward Nelson has also picked up a petition for that State District 19 seat.

State Senator Richard Briggs has a petition for re-election as does District 13 State Representative Eddie Smith, District 14's Jason Zachary, and District 15's Rick Staples. Staples is the lone Democrat to declare for the state house.

County Commission Seats

There are two at-large seats on the ballot since Thomas and Ed Brantley have both announced they are leaving the council. Both candidates for Brantley's Seat 11 position are Republicans: Justin Biggs and R. Larry Smith. Although Vivian Underwood Shipe's name appears on the petition pick-ups she cannot run because of her employment with the U. S. Post Office.

In competition for the at-large Seat 10 are Republicans Ronnie W. Rochelle and Larsen Jay. Democrats Tori Griffin and William P. Stone are seeking their party's nod.

Rochelle describes himself as a "moderate Republican" and is past chairman of Parks and Recreation, a Chamber Ambassador, a former Planning Commissioner, a UT graduate and a current member of the Board of Zoning Appeals.

Jay is the founder of Random Acts of Flowers, a UT graduate, a film and TV producer on the boards of Joy of Music, Bijou Theatre, Knoxville Symphony, and Alliance for Better Non-Profits.

Griffin is a Knoxville native and Fulton High School graduate. She's a Moreland College graduate and was a White House Intern and now is a community activist.

Stone is a graduate of Florida State and a retail store manager.

Current Commission Chairman Randy Smith is so far alone in his Republican Primary bid. Democrat Cody Biggs has picked up a petition for that District 3 seat.

Charles Busler is unopposed thus far for re-election to Commission District 7.

Circuit Court Clerk

Four Republicans have picked up petitions: Don Ridings, Scott Smith, Charles D. Susano, III, and Tom Wheeler.

Knox County Mayor

Commissioner Bob Thomas announced early for the office and has been joined in the contest by fellow Republicans Brad Anders and Glenn Jacobs.

Knox County Sheriff

Republicans Tom Spangler and Lee Trammel face each other in this race for the county's top law enforcement office.

County Court Clerk

Current State Legislator Roger Kane will face Sherry Witt who is the current Knox County Register of Deeds.

Knox County Board of Education

These races are non-partisan and three people have filed to replace outgoing 1st District member Gloria Deathridge. They are Andre Canty, Dametraus Jaggers and Evetty Satterfield.

Running, so far unopposed, is Virginia Bap for the 4th District seat to replace outgoing member Lynne Fugate.

Also unopposed in their bids for re-election so far are Terry Hill, Amber Rountree and current BOE chairperson Patti Lou Bounds.

Mayor of Farragut

Ron Williams is, at present, the only candidate to pick up an election petition for mayor of Farragut.

Also unopposed thus far in the upcoming primary are, Ed Shouse for Trustee, Mike Hammond for Criminal Court Clerk, and Nick McBride for Register of Deeds. All these candidates are Republicans.

School board hears from auditors, decides on lobbyist

The next order of business was the discussion of the ongoing audit by Gary Spencer and Garret Raiden. Raiden elaborated on the definition of "internal school funds" as any monies that are paid by parents as fees and/or contributions for fundraisers, sports activities, field trips and driver's ed. Such funds are property of the schools and are the principal's responsibility.

Next month, findings of the audit will be presented to the board. "Findings" means "discrepancies."

According to a new law, PL 383, a corrective action plan must be submitted for each "finding." Principals are responsible for these plans.

Raiden lamented that by the time the audit is complete, we will be six months into 2018 and this is not the way to do business.

Third District representative Tony Norman explained that the renovations to Inskip Elementary School will include a Rain Garden which will allow the students and teachers to take advantage of a structural abnormality in a productive and scientific way.

Discussion followed regarding retaining a lobbying group, Milsaps Gowan Government Relations, for 2018 to represent the interests of Knox County Schools in Nashville. Norman went on record that he did not think this expenditure was necessary as did Eighth District's Mike McMillan. Sixth District representative Terry Hill reported that to date, one hundred ninety-nine education bills have already been introduced this year. All other school board members voted to retain Milsaps Gowan for 2018.

After much discussion in favor, the school board voted to add two new administrator positions to the staff at Vine Middle School. Vine Middle will have seven principals: one executive principal, two grade level principals for each grade 6-8, one for curriculum and instruction and one for discipline. Vine Middle School has only a 9% proficiency rate on TCAPs and a 20% special education population. First District representative Gloria Deathridge expressed sincere appreciation to the board for being willing to give Vine Middle the tools it needs to move forward.

Board members agreed that Knox County schools all have disparate needs. Representative Fugate pointed out that all schools need more than "we can afford."

The board approved the request for rezoning of Dogwood, Green, Sarah Moore Greene, and South Knoxville Elementary after public forum contributions from Carolyn Williams, Dr. Celeste Carruthers and Reverend John Butler.

Reverend Butler also spoke to the board about Knox County Board of Education 2018 Legislative Priorities. Butler agreed with the priorities except for the one about School Grading which would detrimentally impact Vine Middle School.

Publisher's Position

Trump Economic Accomplishments Are Real

By Steve Hunley, Publisher
publisher@knoxfocus.com

It is an undisputed fact the American economy is picking up and one of the big reasons why is because of President Donald Trump. It is no coincidence the stock market has hit a historic high after the passage of the tax bill. Unemployment is currently at a 17 year low; unemployment for African-Americans is also at a 17 year low. The same is true for Hispanics, as job growth for Hispanic-Americans has also improved. Economists have noted "total earnings" are up almost 5% from last year. Job cut announcements have also been the lowest since 1990. A host of big businesses, including Exxon Mobil, Delta, Hyundai, Toyota, and Bayer AG have announced plans to make vast investments and significantly increase hiring. Labor productivity almost doubled in the third quarter, while household wealth increased by $1.7 trillion. Quite nearly 1.4 million Americans fell off the food stamp rolls since Trump took office. Claims for unemployment have fallen to the lowest level in 44 years. The Dow Jones average has increased more than 32% since Trump's election last year. Broadcom Limited has announced it is returning its headquarters to the United States, bringing with it $20 billion in yearly revenue. Corning is investing $500 million and creating 1,000 new jobs; Foxconn Technology is investing $10 billion, building a factory in Wisconsin, which will create 3,000 new jobs and may benefit another 22,000 employees. We've felt the effect here in Tennessee, too. Tennessee is one of 12 states that have reached record low unemployment rates. Since Trump took the oath of office the number of people working is up by almost 1.9 million. President Trump's insistence on tax cuts and deregulation has obviously been good for growing jobs for Americans. Every demographic --- from those with no high school or college diploma to those with degrees --- has seen a decline in unemployment. The notion, espoused by some leftists, that Trump is the beneficiary of an economic pump primed by his predecessor, Barack Obama, is blatantly absurd. Under Trump there has been positive Gross Domestic Product growth, while just the opposite was true under Obama. In fact, Obama is the only president in the history of the United States not to reach 3% of the GDP in a single year. Even the New York Times published a headline: "The Trump Effect: Business Anticipating Less Regulation, Loosens Purse Strings." The Times even ruefully acknowledged a "wave of optimism" in the country, which has resulted in an expansion of the economy. Still, the Washington Post is twisting itself into a mutant pretzel to attempt to give Obama the credit for the economic upswing. Nor does anyone seem to recall both Bill Clinton and Barack Obama at one time supported reducing the corporate tax rate. It has been both amusing and disgusting to hear liberals wail about increasing the deficit, something they only seem to acknowledge when a president proposes to cut taxes. The national debt almost doubled during Barack Obama's presidency and for the life of me, I cannot recall Democrats and liberals being the least bit concerned about it. The National Association of Manufacturers surveyed its membership and found almost 95% of those responding had a positive outlook for the future of their businesses. The Bloomberg Consumer Comfort Index has just reached a 16-year high. Companies like Comcast and AT&T and North Carolina's BB&T have doled out bonuses for employees. Summit State Bank in Santa Rosa, California has issued $2,000 checks to its employees. More than 60 businesses have announced they are raising wages for their employees. You may not hear much about these accomplishments from the mainstream media, but it doesn't make it any less real.

Hartung discusses new tax laws at FCBPA's monthly luncheon

By Ken Lay
The Fountain City Business and Professionals Association had its first monthly lunch meeting Wednesday, and in carrying on its January tradition, taxes were discussed as Knoxville residents and other Americans prepare to settle their tabs with the federal government. Area Certified Public Accountant and current FCBPA treasurer Andrew Hartung addressed those in attendance at Central Baptist Church, Fountain City at his annual appearance before the FCBPA. Hartung, a past president of the organization, discussed the recently passed Tax Cuts and Jobs Act. The controversial legislation was passed in December and it will be implemented during the 2018 tax year. Hartung addressed the changes in both the individual and corporate tax codes, which take effect. He was able to discuss and answer questions on some parts of the newly-passed Tax Cuts and Jobs Act. But some remain a mystery and currently up for interpretation. "Well, there's a new tax law this year. You may have heard about it once or twice on the news once or twice," Hartung said. "There is absolutely no guidance out yet and we don't know what this is going to look like on a tax form." The Tax Cuts and Jobs Act was passed by Congress and signed by President Donald J. Trump on Dec. 22, 2017 and calls for tax brackets to shift downward for most taxpayers. It also raises the Standard Deduction from $6,500 to $12,000 for single and from $13,000 to $24,000 for married couples filing jointly. Personal and dependent exemptions are eliminated along with home equity debt deductions. Employees will no longer be able to deduct work expenses not provided by employers. University of Tennessee football season ticket holders may no longer make a deduction for the donation they make to the school for the right to buy tickets. That could previously be deducted as a charitable donation. The medical deduction drops from 10 percent to 7.5 percent for 2017 and 2018 only before returning to the previous rate in 2019. The Child Tax Credit increases to $2,000 for children under 17. Businesses will be taxed at a flat 21 percent rate after previously being a progressive tax for C-Corps. This results in a huge break for bigger business entities that previously were taxed at a rate as high as 35 percent. The Alternative Minimum Tax, which was originally repealed, was re-added before the final bill was passed. Corporations, however, will no longer have to pay the AMT. "This really affects the upper-middle class, especially in wealthy states like New York, New Jersey and California," Hartung said. "We call them wealthy states, but they're overpriced states." Alimony payments will also be affected in 2019. Alimony will no longer be considered taxable income for the recipient. It will no longer be a deduction for the payer for any divorce finalized after Dec. 31, 2018. "This was supposed to go into effect in 2018 but I think they had problems getting the divorce attorneys together," Hartung said, with tongue firmly planted in cheek. "So if you're planning on getting a divorce, you better do it before Dec. 31."

OUR VETERANS NEXT DOOR

Courage and PTSD

By Randall Baxter

On a recent trip up north, I got to do something I love to do. I got to walk through an antique store and something that caught my eye. A stack of Classics Illustrated comic books. Most issued right after and during World War II.

Included in my find was issue number 98, "THE RED BADGE OF COURAGE." In Stephen Crane's "The Red Badge of Courage," Henry Fleming leaves home as a young man to join the Union Army during the American Civil War. He faces external conflicts from his war enemies and authority figures, but he also faces internal conflicts, such as leaving home and demonstrating courage.

I never was a soldier, but I played one as a child, and my idea of masculinity, and also that of Henry Fleming, was a brave soldier rushes headlong into battle. Whether we call it bravery or courage, it means "the ability to do something that you know is difficult or dangerous." It allows us to find the moral or mental strength to face our fears and make unthinkable choices.

You are inside Henry's head all throughout the story. At one moment, Henry succumbs to his fear and runs away during a battle. He feels the fear and shame of being called a coward. After a time, Henry joins a column of wounded soldiers. He is deeply envious of these men, thinking that a wound is like "a red badge of courage"—visible proof of valorous behavior. He meets a tattered man who has been shot twice and who speaks proudly of the fact that his regiment did not flee.

Henry wishes that he had a red badge of courage (a wound) like many of the other more seasoned soldiers. He sees the injured soldiers around him and wishes he had something to show from battle. Henry becomes wounded when he stops another fleeing soldier, who injures Henry trying to escape the melee of another battle.

Eventually Henry, with the help of his red badge of courage, becomes a leader on the battlefield.

My friend Howard experienced these same thoughts in Vietnam. His orders were to stay inside a bunker to do his job. The battle outside was increasing in velocity, and Viet Cong were running into the bunkers with TNT strapped to themselves and exploding the bunkers, with few survivors.

Howard would never know if the doorway to his bunker was guarded or not. He was to stay at his post and if a VC ran in, it would be too late. That intense fear of wanting to vacate his post and guard his entrance created a mental anguish I have never experienced.

Howard held his post and after the battle found a dead VC strapped with TNT near his entrance.

Sometimes the wounds a soldier receives are not marked with a red badge of courage. The wounds are deep in the mind, and heart, and gut. The experience keeps returning and does a little more damage each time. Over time the hidden wound begins to shape behavior, it effects your personal life, and that of your family. There is a reason the word POST is present in PTSD.

No red badge for that type of injury, but it still exists.

Sunhouse Fountain being restored

By Mike Steely
steelym@knoxfocus.com

The City of Knoxville boasts about being a community of great neighborhoods. Tuesday's City Council meeting will see a neighborhood effort to preserve its history being authorized and praised.

The Kingston Pike Sequoyah Hills Association is moving into Phase Two of its efforts to restore its historic features. Following the restoration of Talahi Park, the community, on the National Registry of Historic Places, is now ready to start restoration of the Sunhouse Fountain at the park's entrance.

Efforts to bring the fountain back to its original glory were boosted in October with a $30,000 grant from the State of Tennessee. The fountain sits on city property in the middle of Cherokee Boulevard. Chad Weth, Director of the Public Service Department, told The Focus that once the city approves the donation of design plans, supplies and a labor on the fountain the work will get underway and should be completed by the end of March.

"The fountain would then be maintained by the city. Their efforts will make it a lot easier to maintain," he said.

Weth also said that Dennis Jessee of Tile and Stone has done the design work.

The association reportedly raised an additional $50,000 for the project and the next restoration goal is aimed at restoring Panther Fountain, located further along Talahi Drive SW from the Sunhouse Fountain. That's Phase Three and there are plans also to restore and improve the Mall footpath area.

The Talahi Park section of Sequoyah Hills was originally designed as one of Knoxville's first suburban neighborhoods. The up-scale neighborhood was named for Sequoyah, inventor of the Cherokee Alphabet and the development took on a Native American feel with stone gateway and structures. The footpath down Cherokee Boulevard runs along the middle of the street and eventually passes over a historic Indian Mound.

The wording of the resolution expresses the city's appreciation for the association's efforts and authorizes a "Limited Use Agreement" to the group to the fountain restoration as a donation to the city.

In other action the city council will consider giving an additional $35,000 in Emergency Solutions Grant money to the Community Action Committee for the Homeward Bound Program.

subdivision is to be on both sides of Nora Mae Lane and the north side of Hickory Creek Road. He also received concept plan/use on review approval for Harpers' Cove, a proposed 15 lot subdivision to be located on the northwest side of South Northshore Drive, northeast of Charlottesville Blvd.

Sullivan was not so successful with his proposed 45 lot The Cove in West Hills. The site is on the southeast side of Broome and northeast of Marlboro Road. Several nearby residents appeared to protest the subdivision citing lack of notification, traffic and drainage problems. The MPC voted to delay considering the matter for 30 days. In the meantime the developer was urged to meet with area residents to consider their concerns.

With no opposition MJM Development received approval of its concept plan for 61 lot Boulder Point to be located at the northwest terminus of Popular Grove Lane, northwest of Boulder Point Lane.

Turning to zoning requests, the MPC denied the request of Mike Frazier of Knox Rail Salvage for a change in zoning from General Commercial to General Industrial for property on the northwest side of East Depot Ave. and northeast of North Central St. The requested change, if approved, would have allowed for the operation of an equipment and material storage operation.

Jeffery Nash, representing the Courtland Group which is involved in real estate and commercial development, stated that the application was not in line with what most people had in mind for Old North Knoxville. He said current developments are retail and commercial.

The MPC approved Aleksandr Botezat's request for a change in zoning from Agricultural to Planned Residential for property on the north side of Cain Road, northeast of Amherst Road. However the MPC only authorized a density of 3.5 dwelling units per acre. The applicant had requested a density of 5 units per acre. Approval came despite the objections of neighboring property owners.

John Huber was successful in having the zoning changed from Neighborhood Commercial with restrictions to Neighborhood Commercial without restrictions. This action removed restrictions from the types of businesses allowed in a Neighborhood Commercial zone and paved the way for his anticipated request next month for a self-service storage facility in a Neighborhood Commercial zone. The property in question is located on the southeast side of South Northshore Drive, northeast of Choto Road.

GBS Engineering was successful in their request for approval to open a hardware store in a Planned Commercial zone on the north side of Hardin Valley Road, east of Westcott Road.

Parkridge organization is rebuilding

By Mike Steely
steelym@knoxfocus.com

Last year's Historic Overlay expansion debate in the East Knoxville community of Parkridge left the neighborhood organization bruised and divided. Last week more than 40 residents met at the Cansler YMCA to begin to restore trust and cooperation with one another.

The Office of Neighborhoods' Debbie Sharp, who has led the group beyond the division when the overlay plans were put on hold, led the meeting and, at the end, asked who would be interested in serving on the nine member board. That vote comes in their February meeting when all dues-paying members will elect a board. The new officers of the Parkridge Community Organization (PCO) will then select a president, vice president, secretary and treasurer.

Among those who voiced an interest in serving on the board were Kenny Riffey, Danny Sullivan, Peggy

Albert Nelson, Rebecca Lloyd, Michael Goins and Megan Burnett. Johnson Harwell, an attorney with

questions that were discussed in the meeting: What are some good reasons to have an organization? What do you like about the neighborhood? What would you like to see changed? What should be priorities be in 2018?

A large amount of feedback came from the 40 plus residents of Parkridge. The crowd included past board members, supporters and opponents of the historic district's expansion, city council members Gwen McKenzie and Lauren Rider, State Representative Rick Staples, and Jesse Mayshark and Dawn Michelle Foster of the City Administration.

Foster told the homeowners and renters that the Magnolia Avenue Streetscape project is in a process of securing right-of-ways and that ground breaking should take place this spring starting

County offers winter weather safety tips

Mayor Burchett: Check on elderly, homebound during extreme weather

As temperatures in the teens continue the next few days, Knox County Mayor Tim Burchett is urging citizens to take time to check on homebound seniors and anyone who may not be able to easily care for themselves. In addition to the elderly, other at-risk populations include young children, anyone with an altered mental status or mental illness, those who remain outdoors for extended periods of time and pets.

"Too many seniors are homebound and have no one to care for them," said Mayor Burchett. "With the extremely low temperatures expected to continue through the week, I hope neighbors, friends and relatives will take time to check on the elderly and others who may be homebound and in need of help."

Cold weather also brings an increase in residential use of portable/supplemental heating equipment. These items should be used with caution as heating equipment is a leading cause of home fires. According to the National Fire Protection Association, half of home heating equipment fires are reported during the months of December, January and February.

Anyone finding themselves in an emergency situation should call 9-1-1 immediately.

Tips from the Knox County Fire Prevention Bureau and Knox County Health Department:

- Check on elderly neighbors, friends and relatives – make sure they have adequate heating, food,

Our Neighborhoods

Knoxville's Neighbors: Blaine, Kodak and Louisville

By Mike Steely
steelym@knoxfocus.com

The smaller communities on the outskirts of Knox County contribute much to our local economy not only with commuters who drive here to work but also those residents who come to shop here. Many Knoxvilleans and especially newcomers know very little about these important places. Sometimes we get so caught up with our own county and cities that we forget how important our neighboring communities are.

Blaine is growing

Blaine is located just outside Knox County along U. S. Highway 11W, better known locally as Rutledge Pike. Originally called "Blaine's Crossroads" the Grainger County town was established at the intersection of that old route with Emory Road, the first route built through Knox County before statehood.

Later it was a stopping place of the Knoxville-Bristol trains which rolled along what was known as the Peavine Railroad.

Located 19 miles northeast of Knoxville and 14 miles south of the county seat Rutledge, Blaine has a town area of just over 9 square miles. It is named for early settler Robert Blaine. Nearby is Shield's Station, once a well-known tavern and inn built in the 1830s. Clinch Mountain rises just north of Blaine and House Mountain is just to the southwest.

Blaine is a growing community. The 2010 census listed 1,856 residents, up 271 over the earlier at Jessamine Avenue.

Sharp urged residents to take part in an 11-week "Enriching Neighborhoods" series hosted by Ron Davis. She said it would help develop neighborhood leaders and aid in restoring the trust in the area.

She also announced that Bill Murrah has agreed to be the local consultant as the new board creates a Bylaws Committee. She noted that fliers distributed by some of the residents helped generate the crowd including a 53-year resident who was attending the neighborhood organization meeting for the first time.

The group brainstormed on the positives of Parkridge which included racial, economic, religious and age diversity, proximity to downtown, architecture, affordable housing, concerned citizens, and its parks, sidewalks and walkability.

When asked what they might want to change about Parkridge the group's answers included the traffic problems, adding kids programs, getting churches involved, more compassionate and caring neighbors, playgrounds, better bus stops, a Beautification Mob, more organized events, block captains and block meetings and cooperation between former historic zoning residents.

Among the priorities for this year are youth projects, getting involved, mentoring, starting with a clean slate in relationships, fire and safety training, more police patrols or community policing, a community grocery store and "just having fun."

"That's what a neighborhood organization can do," Sharp told the crowd.

count. The town sports a Food City, a branch of the Citizens Bank and Trust, Okie's Pharmacy, and several convenience stores.

Blaine was known for years as the nearest community to Indian Cave, located to the east along the waters of Holston River. The cave, now closed to visitors, was used for thousands of years by Native Americans and later commercialized and a popular place for tourists.

Kodak

The community of Kodak, just east of Knox County, is a bit different than most rural communities in that it's not that rural anymore.

Founded in 1892 by Harvey N. Underwood, who named the place for the introduction of the Kodak Camera with the permission of George Eastman of Eastman Kodak, the Sevier County village had its own post office and several businesses along State Route 139. It languished as a farming community until the development of Sevier County's tourism industry.

The construction of Interstate 40 passed just north of Kodak and, along with the growing popularity of Gatlinburg, Pigeon Forge and Sevierville, brought many businesses to Kodak. The city of Sevierville saw the growth and annexed land all the way to beyond the interstate. Today the interchange features the Smokies Stadium, a Bass Pro Shop, the Great Smokies Flea Market and many other tourist-type and real estate businesses.

Near Kodak is Tennessee's newest recreation and bird-viewing area. The Seven Islands State Birding Park is located along the river and has 416 acres and about 190 different bird species. The park is undergoing improvements and the loop there is currently closed.

Louisville

Pronounced "Lewis-ville" and not "Louey-ville" this growing Blount County town has jumped from about 750 residents in 1990 to more than 4,000 residents nowadays. Located on Fort Loudoun Lake just south of the Knoxville Airport, the town dates back to the 19th Century as a trade center and river port.

Louisville was founded around 1840 and was the home of the Foster family who operated a storehouse, a historic building that now guards the road going into the Louisville Point Park. The storehouse became the Harper Brothers General Merchandise and operated until 1938.

When the railroad reached Louisville in the 1890s the commerce there shifted from the river to the rail. The construction of Fort Loudoun Dam flooded about 70% of the historic town. A park was built along the lakewaters. Much of the Louisville story is compiled by the Town History Committee. Members are nominated by the mayor and aldermen.

Tim Bickers is mayor of the Board of Mayor and Alderman. The City Hall and Community Center is a 7,200-square foot building at 3623 Louisville Road. The town of Louisville is on the internet and Facebook and you can also get information by calling (865) 661-1983.

Preservation Groups Seek Redevelopment Proposals for the Historic Gilley's Hotel

Knox Heritage and the East Tennessee Preservation Alliance (ETPA) are assisting the Bulls Gap Railroad Museum & Community Development Corporation (BGRMCDC) with finding a new owner to redevelop the historic Gilley's Hotel property in Hawkins County. Located at 157 Main Street South, the property is within the Bulls Gap Historic District which is also a National Register District. This is an exciting opportunity to transform this historically significant property.

The Gilley's Hotel is a reminder of an era when the railroad served as the primary mode of passenger transportation. By 1912, according to a pamphlet printed by the Bulls Gap Board of Trade, as many as 14 passenger trains stopped in Bulls Gap every day. Gilley's Hotel was built close to the railroad track so that it could serve rail passengers. Travelers could exit the train, go down a set of stairs, and enter directly into the dining room. According to the National Register nomination, an 1885 account cited the Gilley's Hotel as "one of the best hotels found on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad."

At this time, the Gilley's Hotel is greatly endangered. After railroad passenger service ended, some rooms were converted into apartments, but the building is now vacant with some areas used for storage. The roof has leaked over the years and there is damage to some ceilings, walls, and floors. Paint and wallpaper have long faded. However, the building boasts many useful spaces, a beautiful staircase, and lovely wood trim. There is great potential to repurpose this iconic building into a new and exciting use for the Bulls Gap community.

BGRMCDC is seeking a new owner for the Gilley's Hotel who has a vision for the development of the building that blends well with the surrounding community, can offer a reasonable timeframe for completing the renovations, and has the financial resources needed to complete a successful project. The building will require substantial investment to maximize the use of all spaces. The selected respondent will be expected to remedy any structural deficiencies, replace or repair mechanical, electrical and plumbing systems and construct any other improvements required to meet current building codes. All rehabilitation work must be consistent with the Secretary of Interior's Standards for the Treatment of Historic

George W. Norris of Nebraska

Father of the Tennessee Valley Authority

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill
rayhill865@gmail.com

George W. Norris, although a Nebraskan, has a relevance and importance to our community with the help of the railroad many may fail to realize. Norris Dam and the community of Norris are named for George William Norris. One might think it odd for landmarks in Tennessee to be named for a Nebraska lawmaker. Yet, G. W. Norris has a special significance for our region and state for he was the "Father of the Tennessee Valley Authority." George W. Norris was born on July 11, 1861 in Ohio, the eleventh child of poor farmers. Norris was still a young child when his father died and his forty-six year old mother was pregnant with her twelfth child. The Norris family had to endure a hardscrabble existence and were quite poor, but Mary Magdalene Norris instilled a strong sense of right and wrong in her son, as well as a strong religious faith. George W. Norris managed to eke out an education and graduated from Valparaiso University with a law degree.

Norris took his law degree and moved to Beaver City, Nebraska. Norris also found love in Nebraska, marrying Pluma Lashley and the couple had three daughters together before Mrs. Norris died in 1901, following the birth of their third daughter. After the death of Pluma Norris, George's sister hurried to Nebraska to help him care for his daughters. That also allowed Norris to pursue his own political ambitions.

In 1903, George W. Norris remarried and Ella Leonard and her husband had no children born of their union; Ella, a former schoolteacher and principal, was content to be stepmother to the Norris daughters. Ella Norris remained with her husband to his death more than forty years later.

George W. Norris enjoyed a relatively successful law practice and dabbled in real estate. Norris was comfortable enough to build an impressive office building in Beaver City, renting out space to others. The building also housed Norris' own law practice.

The political career of George W. Norris began with his election as prosecuting attorney for Furnas County and he was later elected to a judgeship. Norris moved from Beaver City to McCook, Nebraska as he felt the latter city was more centrally located in the heart of his judicial district.

1903 was special year in the life of George W. Norris; not only did he remarry, but took his seat in Congress. Norris had been elected in 1902 and served a decade in the U. S. House of Representatives. Congressman Norris was a man who tended to look at issues in black and white terms; those of right and wrong. Originally, Norris had been elected to Congress with the help of the railroad interests. Most everything in the country was transported by rail at the time, making the railroads a powerful special interest. The railroad magnates were both shocked and dismayed when Norris supported a reform proposed by President Theodore Roosevelt to regulate the rates charged by railroads. Norris believed the regulation of railroad rates would benefit the small businessmen of his district, as well as the average consumer. George W. Norris would become the scourge of Wall Street, special interests and big business throughout his long Congressional career.

Congressman Norris studied the issues that interested him and quickly mastered the rules of the House and became one of the more able parliamentarians in Congress. As a young legislator, Norris became increasingly disheartened by the domination of the House of Representatives by Speaker Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois. Norris' attitude hardened and he became disturbed by the rule of the tyrannical Speaker, who was also deeply conservative. Congressman Norris decided to make an effort to curb the powers of Speaker Cannon. Norris picked his moment shrewdly, launching consideration of his resolution to scale back the Speaker's power when many of Cannon's allies were not on the floor of the House. Norris had helped to organize a coalition of insurgent Republicans and all the Democrats who proceeded to defeat "Uncle Joe" and his allies.

Norris' victory over Speaker Cannon helped to propel him into the United States Senate in 1912. Norris was a strong proponent of direction election of senators, as well as unicameral legislatures. Nebraska remains the only state in the nation without two legislative bodies.

George W. Norris was an isolationist when he entered the United States Senate in 1913. There is a common misconception that most isolationists in Congress were also reactionaries or mossback conservatives. The fact is most of the isolationists were liberals and progressives. William E. Borah of Idaho and Hiram W. Johnson of California, Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota, and Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin were all progressive Republicans. Isolationism was not confined to one political party and there were powerful Democrats who were rabid isolationists. David I. Walsh, the first Irish Catholic ever to be elected governor and

FROM THE AUTHOR'S PERSONAL COLLECTION.

Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska walking from the Capitol, 1940.

United States senator from Massachusetts loathed the British Empire and was an isolationist. Burton K. Wheeler of Montana was so progressive he had been denounced as a radical socialist or worse and was fiercely isolationist. Bennett Champ Clark, son of the late Speaker of the House Champ Clark of Missouri, was one of the leading spokesmen in the U.S. Senate for isolationism.

The Midwest had a strong tradition of isolationism as well as a significant population of German immigrants. George W. Norris was one of six senators who voted against American entry into World War I. Robert LaFollette, Asle Gronna of North Dakota, both Republicans and progressives, joined Norris in voting against war. Democrats William J. Stone of Missouri, Harry Lane of Oregon and James K. Vardaman of Mississippi also voted against a declaration of war against the Central Powers of Europe. Many voters in states represented by the six men were outraged their senators had voted against the war. The senators were reviled, burned in effigy and Senator Lane was facing an effort to recall him from office when he died suddenly in 1917. Vardaman had been the most popular politician in Mississippi before voting against war and subsequently lost his reelection bid in 1918.

Senator Norris believed most wars were fought less for territory or other valid reasons and more for profit, due to corporate greed. Norris felt the only people who benefitted from war were the munitions manufacturers and the financiers.

Norris did not alter his isolationist course one single iota and was reelected in 1918. Senator Norris was profoundly opposed to the Treaty of Versailles, which sowed the seeds of World War II. Norris was also deeply opposed to American participation in the League of Nations.

Unlike many of his fellow progressives, George W. Norris was a prolific legislator, although it often-times took his years to achieve his goals. Norris tried hard to abolish the Electoral College and was ultimately unsuccessful. Norris was the sponsor of the Twentieth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, called the "lame duck" amendment. Prior to the passage of the Twentieth Amendment, the president and the Congress took office on March 4, having been elected the previous November, leaving a frequently "lame duck" president and Congress to legislate for four months following the election.

A passionate believer in public power, Norris labored for years carrying bills that foreshadowed the creation of the Tennessee Valley Authority. Norris found himself at odds with Tennessee's own senator, Kenneth D. McKellar. Senator McKellar disliked several provisions of Norris' original legislation, which he felt did not help farmers and their need for fertilizer, as well as other provisions, which the Tennessean believed, put the Volunteer State at a disadvantage. Once Norris and McKellar resolved their differences, the Tennessee senator worked hard to pass the Nebraskan's bill. The two were finally successful, only to see the bill vetoed by President Calvin Coolidge.

Coolidge's successor as president was Herbert Hoover and Hoover's candidacy caused Senator George Norris to bolt the Republican Party. Norris endorsed the Democratic nominee, Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York. Smith, a dripping wet Irish Catholic with a pronounced accent, was hardly a popular candidate in the Cornhusker State. Oddly, Norris was himself an ardent supporter of prohibition.

Many Republicans found George W. Norris so distasteful, they went to extraordinary lengths to defeat him in 1930. Those same Republicans induced a grocer of the same name to enter the GOP primary in the hope it would confuse voters. "Grocer" Norris did nothing to help defeat Senator Norris, who won both the primary and general elections easily. In 1932, unchastened, Norris once again refused to support President Hoover, who was largely discredited following the advent of the Great Depression. Courted by the Democratic nominee, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, Norris endorsed the New Yorker over Hoover. Senator Norris lent FDR the prestige of his name when he headed a league of progressives backing the governor.

With the election of Franklin Roosevelt, Senator Norris was personally selected to sponsor the bill creating the Tennessee Valley Authority. Norris' rival, Senator McKellar, a loyal Democrat and enthusiastic backer of President Roosevelt, remembered it as the greatest disappointment of his life.

McKellar harbored some jealousy toward the old Nebraska progressive, yet also gave Norris grudging respect. Like McKellar, Norris employed a relative on his Senate staff. McKellar's youngest brother, Don, served as his Chief of Staff, while that position in Norris' own Senate office was filled by his son-in-law, John P. Robertson.

Senator Norris joined with another liberal Republican, Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, to sponsor the Rural Electrification Act, which provided cheap public power for much of rural America. LaGuardia, New York's "Little Flower", would go on to become the most celebrated Mayor of New York City.

Norris sought reelection to the United States Senate in 1936, but quickly realized he likely could not win a Republican primary. Senator Norris announced his candidacy as an Independent candidate. Norris faced two former Congressmen in the general election, one a Republican and the other a Democrat. Norris beat them both.

While Senator Norris supported most aspects of the New Deal, he refused to go along when President Roosevelt sought to enlarge the U. S. Supreme Court in 1937. That same year, George W. Norris changed his point of view on foreign policy. Norris had seen a photograph, which was quite famous at the time, of a badly burned Chinese baby crying while sitting in the midst of the rubble of what had been a train station. The train station had been bombed by the Japanese and the baby's dead mother lay nearby. It became one of the most famous of all war photographs in history, viewed by as many as one hundred and thirty some-odd millions of people. Like many other Americans, George Norris had been both deeply moved and horrified by the picture. Senator Norris minced no words in describing the Japanese aggression in the Far East. According to Norris, the Japanese were "disgraceful, ignoble, barbarous, and cruel, even beyond the power of language to describe."

The once fiercely isolationist Senator Norris became just as fired in his determination to punish the Japanese Empire. While he had been an isolationist, George Norris was certainly no pacifist. After the attack on Pearl Harbor, the Nebraska senator declared the United States would "burn Jap cities off the face of the earth."

Widely respected and even revered by many Americans, George W. Norris had intended to retire in 1942 when he was eighty-one years old. Once Senator Norris stated his intention to retire, thousands of people begged him to remain in public life and run one more time. Norris changed his mind and sought reelection as an Independent candidate yet again. Senator Norris had hoped the Democrats would not field a candidate, as he had been quite supportive of the Roosevelt administration. He was disappointed and faced a serious Republican opponent in Kenneth S. Wherry, a glad-handling former mortician. A Democrat entered the race, sure to pull votes from George Norris. The war was not going well for the Allied forces, causing many incumbents political problems. After forty years in Congress, George W. Norris lost.

The loss of his Senate seat stunned and embittered Senator Norris. Norris termed his defeat as a "repudiation of forty years of service." Norris lamented his rejection by the "people I love."

Norris had once said, "I would rather go down to my political grave with a clear conscience than ride in the chariot of victory." Yet when defeat came, George W. Norris had difficulty believing his constituents would turn him out of office.

Senator Norris, with tears in his eyes, plaintively asked, "Why are the people so mad at me?"

Sadly, Senator Norris returned to Washington, D. C. to close his senatorial office and his Congressional career. When asked by one interviewer, Norris summed up his career in Congress by saying simply, "I have done my best to repudiate wrong and evil in governmental affairs."

President Roosevelt offered the old progressive any number of posts and appointments, all of which Norris declined. The former senator chose to return to his home on Main Avenue in McCook, where he lived out the remainder of his life. Norris kept himself busy by writing his autobiography, Fighting Liberal. Norris' autobiography sold rather well and was reprinted almost thirty years after its original publication.

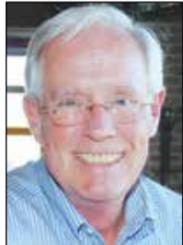

The former senator celebrated his eighty-third birthday in July of 1944 and was fatalistic about his own end. Norris had been quite active for a man of his advanced years, but confessed, "I never expected to live this long; this birthday only means it's getting closer to the end."

The end was not long in coming. On August 29, 1944, George W. Norris suffered a cerebral hemorrhage, which left him partially paralyzed. Originally, doctors thought there was a "good chance" Norris would recover. Instead, George W. Norris grew gradually weaker and died on September 2, 1944.

Senator Norris' former home in McCook is now a museum dedicated to his life and career. Yet, the greatest monument to the life of George W. Norris are the many achievements of his long tenure in Congress. Those of us in Tennessee, more than seventy years after George Norris' death, have more reason than most to be grateful.

haps, we might connect with another person who has experienced similar circumstances.

A little more than four years ago, Amy and I had the props knocked out from under us. She woke up one morning during our vacation to discover that she had lost her job. In the blink of an eye, the majority of our income disappeared, and all that was left was my retirement check and any cash I earned from writing.

Our lives were a mess. We fretted and stewed over the entire situation. Along with that, we plotted what we could do to recover the income we'd lost. For hours, we sat together and road the tides of anger and worry.

What remained throughout everything was a belief in a higher being that watched over us. Our responsibilities were to do all things possible to correct a negative situation; after that, we had to let things go and trust that His watchful eye would be with us.

Even though I tried to be of good faith, questions and pure anger bubbled to the surface. I wondered why events such as these happened, especially since Amy and I had tried to do those things that we thought we were supposed to do. After much questioning, prayer, and discussion, I accepted that "I wasn't driving the bus" in this situation, and I have had to try to let it go. No, that realization didn't come early or easily, but slowly its revelation appeared to my stubborn mind.

Over the last four years, I've gone back to work. First, I moved cars for a rental agency; next, I worked moving customer vehicles at a car dealership; then I substituted in high schools, and now, I am teaching a couple of English classes at Byington Career and Technical Center.

Amy has worked at temporary jobs. On a couple of occasions, she was to be hired permanently, but companies pulled the plug on that just as the temporary periods ended. It appeared that they had no intentions of hiring anyone on a full time basis. Those disappointments put us back at the starting blocks and left us, once again, wondering where the help that we believed would come was.

What we have once again remembered is that God is with us, regardless of our situations. No, we have no clues as to why things have occurred as they have. We have certainly tightened our belts and stopped much of our spending, but we still are doing all right. Each day, we wake up and wonder what will happen. The anger is no longer there. We simply have faith in our God and believe that He will watch over us. The questions linger, but we know that God's time is not our time. We must continue to do the best we can and have faith in someone we can't see but whom we know is ever-present.

Some might look at Amy and me and shake their heads at what they perceive is our naiveté. That's all right. We still have faith that grows stronger in the face of difficult times. Having just completed that special season that celebrates the coming a savior who defeated death so that we have life everlasting, our problems seem small in comparison to what we've received. Yes, I still hope that we find a bit more financial stability, but I also know that we must do our best and leave to God the rest.

Tennessee Tuberculosis Hospital, the facility's main purpose was to treat tuberculosis patients. The beautiful country setting, surrounded by lots of trees, grass, and even a herd of cattle, seemed the perfect place for convalescing patients.

In the late sixties and seventies, our mother worked at the state-run facility as an assistant to the dietician and later as assistant to the purchasing agent. By then, the name had been changed to East Tennessee Chest Disease Hospital to encompass a broader range of chest diseases in addition to tuberculosis. When I started classes at The University of Tennessee, mother and

I carpooled in our commutes. I actually looked forward to stopping by her workplace each evening. The open fields and towering trees were a stark contrast to the city streets and sidewalks where I had spent the day on campus. She worked there for twelve years until the hospital was closed during the late seventies. I was always intrigued by the corner across from the hospital where remnants of the very first building once stood.

Today the building looks much the same as it did back then. It is now Beverly Park Place Health & Rehab which is operated by Knox County Government. Beside the older hospital is a much newer building, which is a very nice complement to the original structure. The beautiful setting atop the hill at the end of the long driveway is still intact today.

clothing and necessary medications.

• If using space heaters, make sure to follow the instructions properly and keep them away from any flammable materials.

• Check the batteries in your smoke and carbon monoxide detectors and test all devices to ensure they are working properly.

• Never leave candles, fireplaces or other open flames unattended.

• Bring pets indoors, if possible. Otherwise, ensure adequate shelter and bedding to keep them dry and warm.

• Avoid going outdoors. However, if you must go outside, dress warmly in layers to limit exposure to the cold.

Fire Prevention

• Keep any portable/space heaters at least three feet from anything combustible, including furniture, draperies and bedding, and follow manufacturer's instructions. Also, do not leave a portable heater on and unattended, or leave it on while you are sleeping or away from your home.

• Never use your oven or stove top as a heat source.

• If using a fireplace to heat your home, be sure to follow manufacturer's instructions.

• Dispose of any fireplace ashes in a metal container with a lid that can be secured from the top. Store the container at least 10 feet from any structures, as ashes can maintain their heat for several days.

• Never leave a fire burning in a fireplace while you are sleeping.

• Never plug a generator into an outlet in your home, there is a danger of shock and electrocution.

• Be careful not to overload extension cords, doing so increases the risk of electrical fire.

• Never use any portable heating device designed for outside use inside your home. Propane-fueled heaters and other camping equipment are not safe for inside use.

• Make and practice a family fire escape plan. And take in to consideration the cold weather when identifying a meeting place that will provide you and your family shelter from the weather.

• Never run a generator or any gasoline-powered engine outdoors in an open window, door or vent where exhaust can vent into an enclosed area.

• Never run a generator or any gasoline-powered engine indoors, even if the doors or windows are open (including garage, basement or attic).

Hypothermia

• Results from exposure to cool or cold temperatures and the loss of body heat faster than the body can warm

• Signs of hypothermia in adults: shivering/exhaustion, confusion/fumbling hands, memory loss/slurred speech and drowsiness

• Signs of hypothermia in Infants: bright red, cold skin and very low energy

Frostbite:

• Results from exposed skin becoming so cold it freezes

• Signs of frostbite:

Early on - red painful skin

Later - yellow or pale skin

Skin feels waxy, firm and numb

• Can result in loss of affected finger(s) or toe(s)

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning:

• Carbon Monoxide (CO) is an odorless, colorless gas that can cause sudden illness and death if inhaled.

• The most common symptoms are headache, dizziness, weakness, nausea, vomiting, chest pain and confusion.

• Alternative sources of fuel or electricity for heating, cooling or cooking can cause CO to build up in a home or garage and poison the people and animals inside.

• CO is found in combustion fumes, such as those produced by small gasoline engines, stoves, generators, lanterns and gas ranges or by burning charcoal and wood.

If CO poisoning, frostbite or hypothermia are suspected, consult a health care professional right away.

• Never use a gas range or oven to heat a home.

• Never leave the motor running in a vehicle parked in an enclosed or partially enclosed space, such as a garage.

• Never run a motor vehicle, generator or any gasoline-powered engine outside an open window, door or vent where exhaust can vent into an enclosed area.

• Never run a generator or any gasoline-powered engine indoors, even if the doors or windows are open (including garage, basement or attic).

HIGH SCHOOL BOWLING TOURNAMENT TIME

HVA boys, South-Doyle girls 'strike' gold in District 4

By Steve Williams

Hardin Valley Academy's boys and South-Doyle's girls captured team championships in convincing fashion in the first-ever District 4 bowling tournament Wednesday at Family Bowl.

The Hawks toppled Bearden 21-6 in the finals, while the Lady Cherokees rolled past HVA 20-7.

The addition of three new Knox County schools to the sport within the past two seasons, including South-Doyle, allowed the TSSAA to form the new six-member District 4. Central and L&N STEM Academy joined this season.

"We had to face Bearden and we're big rivals, so it felt really, really, really good to beat them," said Matthew Owens, who led Hardin Valley's veteran squad with games of 233, 240 and 210 for three wins over his opponent in the lineup's No. 1 position.

Blaine McAmis and Cody Ozias each rolled a 208 game as the Hawks flew to a 13-3 lead in the first two games.

Ozias finished with three wins and Ryan Baker two.

Timothy Fortune, freshman Jordan Huber and sub Gabe Anderson chipped in one win each.

South-Doyle's girls got off to a slow start and led Hardin Valley only 4-3 after the first game before pulling away.

The key to the victory was the bottom three bowlers in the lineup winning eight of nine possible points and also contributing to the total pin fall advantage, which netted an additional three points.

Seniors Regan Riffey,

Dakota Brown and Vanessa Del Valle were the No. 4-5-6 bowlers.

South-Doyle freshman Lucy Edwards, the District 4 leader who entered the tourney coming off a sizzling regular season finish, lost her first game but bounced back with the team's best series (451). Brown posted a 157 for the team's top game.

Senior Kendall Rollins and freshman Hannah Burnette contributed in the No. 2 and 3 positions, respectively, for the Lady Cherokees.

In the boys' semifinals, Hardin Valley ousted Central 24-3 behind Owens' 223 game and 631 series. Huber, No. 6 in the lineup, gave the Hawks a boost with a 221 first game.

Bearden trounced Catholic 22-5 behind Ben Whitaker's 185 and 183 games and Corey Ramey's 495 series. The Irishmen's Austin Humphreys, the District 4 boys' leader, rolled 230 and 192 in a losing cause.

The girls' semis saw South-Doyle crush Central 24-3 as Edwards posted a 172 game and 483 series.

Senior Jennifer Kelley had a sparkling 212 game and 584 series as Hardin Valley eliminated Bearden 18.5 to 8.5.

Seymour girls advance to sectionals

District 4 teams eliminated in Region 2 tourney

By Steve Williams

Seymour High's girls bowling team knocked off previously unbeaten South-Doyle in the Region 2 tournament semifinals but still couldn't get past Heritage Thursday at the Pigeon Forge Community Center.

"We've only lost five games this season, but four of the five have been to Heritage," said Seymour Head Coach Andy Jackson after his Lady Eagles' 17-10 loss in the finals.

Both teams qualified for the sectionals.

Seymour will go against Region 1 champion

Cherokee today (Jan. 15), starting at 1 o'clock at the East End Lanes in Rogersville. Heritage will host Region 1 runner-up Dobyns-Bennett.

Gatlinburg-Pittman defeated Heritage 16-11 in the Region 2 boys' finals and will host Dobyns-Bennett in the sectionals. Heritage travels to Cherokee, the Region 1 boys' champion.

Despite its loss to Heritage, Seymour's 15.5 to 11.5 win over South-Doyle assured the Lady Eagles of a sectional berth.

In addition to South-Doyle, District 4's three other region qualifiers also were eliminated in the semis. Hardin Valley Academy's girls were ousted by Heritage 21-6.

HVA's boys bowed to Gatlinburg-Pittman 21-6 and Bearden's boys fell to Heritage 20-7.

In the Region 2 boys' finals, G-P defeated Heritage 16-11.

Vetrovec had three wins and a team high 436 series to lead Seymour in the region title game. Baird, who rolled a team high 166 game, and Porter had two wins apiece.

Marissa Hamblen led

Heritage with three wins, a 183 game and a 495 series.

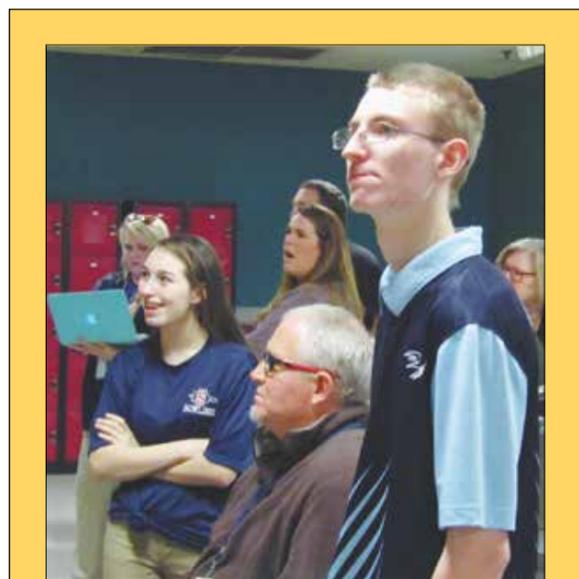

In the District 3 tourney Wednesday at Pigeon Forge, No. 3 seed Seymour upset No. 2 seed Gatlinburg-Pittman 19-8.

The Seymour girls had Heritage on the ropes in the district finals.

"We won the first two games," said Coach Jackson, "but they had such a big third game, they also took total pin fall (worth three points), which gave them the win (15-12)."

Wyatt had three wins for Seymour. Vetrovec and Baird won two each and Porter one.

The Seymour boys' season ended with a loss to Pigeon Forge in the District 3 tourney.

Bearden avenges loss to Farragut, stays perfect in league play 51-37

By Ken Lay

Bearden Middle School's boys basketball team hung on to its share with a Knox County Middle School Basketball victory at home Thursday night. The Bruins also turned the tables on rival Farragut.

Bearden (17-1 overall, 10-0 in the KCMSBC) kept its perfect conference with a 51-37 win over the Admirals. The Bruins also avenged its only loss of the season. Farragut (10-8, 4-6) knocked off the Bruins on Dec. 28 at the West Valley Holiday Basketball Tournament.

The Admirals had hopes of beating Bearden for the second time in two weeks and Farragut hung tough for three quarters after getting off to a rather sluggish and lackluster start.

Early on, Farragut fell behind 9-2 before closing in the inaugural frame with an 8-1 run to pull to within 12-10 by the end of the quarter.

The game remained tight throughout the first half and into the third quarter. Farragut, which led late in the first half, managed to knot the game at 24 by halftime.

Dillon Atwell scored 10 of his 13 points before the break. Eli Jones had four points in the first half Isaiah Smith scored five points in the opening half.

"I thought that we played well in the first half," Farragut coach Randy Swartzentruber said. "When we hit shots, we're pretty good. But we struggle when our shots aren't going down, we struggle.

"We know that Isaiah and Dillon are going to get their points but we need some of the other guys to step up a little bit more for us.

Bearden, which entered the night in a first-place tie with Vine, led 35-32 by third quarter's end and coach Ben Zorio attributed the Bruins success to defense, rebounding and foul shooting after halftime.

"We did a good job in the second half," Zorio said. "We rebounded well, we played better defense and we did a good job hitting our free throws late.

"We knew that this was going to be a tough game because Farragut has a lot talented players on their team. They're well-coached. Randy does a great job. They almost always have five good shooters on the floor."

Despite being in a tight game much of the night, Bearden finally pulled away in the fourth quarter. The Bruins, who had just two field goals over the final six minutes, were a perfect 10-for-10 from the free throw line in the final stanza.

Defensively, Bearden didn't allow the Admirals to score from inside the paint in the second half and the Bruins' Grant Sterchi clamped down as he was guarding Smith.

"We made some adjustments and our kids executed. They did a good job with the adjustments," Zorio said. "Grant Sterchi did a great job guarding Isaiah. He's one of the best players in the county."

Bearden's Ryan Neal led all scorers with 20 points. Altin Perry added 14 and Will Biven finished with 11.

Looking to 2018: The Tennessee Sports Scene

By Alex Norman

Hello there! Hope that you had a good new year's. I wish you all a happy and healthy 2018. I understand how busy everyone is these days. Work, school, family... it can get really easy to miss out on some of the good stuff with regards to the Tennessee sports scene.

So I've taken my crystal ball out of storage to find out what's going to go on in the great state of Tennessee this year.

Let's light this candle. (Editor's note: Alex is not being serious for all of these. Please don't send us hate mail. It hurts our feelings.)

January is halfway done so we move on to...

February 2018

Jeremy Pruitt closes the deal on a Top 15 recruiting class. Considering that running back John Kelly, defensive back Rashaan Gaulden and defensive tackle Kahlil McKenzie are all going pro early, Pruitt is going to need players to contribute right away. This class will help fill some holes.

March 2018

Tennessee's men's basketball team makes the NCAA tournament after a four year absence. The Vols win their first game but lose to Creighton at the buzzer, costing them a spot in the Sweet 16.

Head coach Rick Barnes holds a press conference at Pete's Restaurant to announce that he will retire at the end of the 2018-2019 season.

The Lady Vols finally advance to the Final Four for the first time since 2008. This sets up a matchup with UConn. ESPN devotes 45 consecutive hours of coverage to the game. The Huskies win by 40.

April 2018

The Vols complete spring practice with 100,000 fans packing Neyland Stadium. After the game quarterback Jarrett Guarantano announces that he is switching positions and will now play offensive line. News leaks that defensive tackle Shy Tuttle would prefer to be called

"Introverted Tuttle" during media interviews but won't say anything about it because... you know... he's shy.

May 2018

Tennessee's baseball team completes an unheard of winless season. First year head coach Tony Vitello is given a ten year contract extension. The Lady Vols softball team completes an undefeated regular season. Former Tennessee athletic director Dave Hart is escorted out of Lee Softball Stadium after trying to climb a pole to remove a flag with the Lady Vols logo.

June 2018

The Lady Vols softball team advances to the College World Series, where they end up finishing in third place. Co-head coaches Ralph and Karen Weekly are given 20 year contract extensions.

July 2018

Tennessee brings quarterback Quinten Dormady to SEC Media Days, at which time he announces that he has switched positions to wide receiver. In an ugly incident, new Tennessee head coach Jeremy Pruitt dodges a punch by Alabama fan and tree poisoner Harvey Updyke because, "He wasn't Bama enough." Updyke is given probation and a new show on the SEC Network.

August 2018

The Vols open Fall camp. There is no tackling, or hitting of any kind. Apparently Pruitt got very "Zen" after the Updyke attack, and now believes that physical football is bad for the soul. This should normally cause fans to flip out, but after the past decade, Tennessee fans just take it in stride. That's not even in the top ten of terrible things to happen to the athletics department in recent years.

September 2018

Pruitt snaps out of his mind freeze in time for game week preparations for West Virginia. This game is played in Charlotte, and Michael Jordan is on hand for the ceremonial coin toss. Unfortunately, West Virginia quarterback Will Grier plays Jordan to the Vols Patrick Ewing in a 35-21 Mountaineers victory. The Vols exit September with a 2-3 record.

October 2018

The schedule makers really hated Tennessee. They ended September with Florida and Georgia, and now play Auburn, Alabama and South Carolina. The Vols get out of the month with a 2-6 record. Jeremy Pruitt wonders aloud where all the 5-star talent he had in Tuscaloosa went.

November 2018

Tennessee quarterback

Will McBride leads the Vols to a 4-0 finish, including a victory over Missouri, and their offensive coordinator Derek Dooley. The Vols win that game after Tigers quarterback Drew Lock thought the clock struck zero and threw the ball out of the back of the end zone in celebration, giving the Vols a safety and a one point win.

The Vols finish the season 6-6, earning a Music City Bowl berth.

December 2018

The Vols lose the Music City Bowl to Purdue 11-10. Tennessee has big things to dream about, after Pruitt secures four 5-star players during the early signing period for the Class of 2019.

As always, hope springs eternal on Rocky Top.

Farragut downs Lady Bruins in MS girls hoops

By Ken Lay

Farragut Middle School's girls basketball team held on to its share of first place with a big victory at Bearden Thursday night.

The Lady Admirals got off to a fast start and boasted a balanced scoring attack. And those ingredients provided the recipe for Farragut to notch a 49-16 Knox County Middle School Basketball Conference victory.

The Lady Admirals scored the first 11 points of the contest and would cruise to an easy win over the Bruins, who finally got on the scoreboard when Jameya made the second of two free throws with 2 minutes, 38 seconds remaining in the first quarter.

The Bruins (9-5 overall, 6-4 in the conference) endured another long scoring drought before Maddie Brillhart hit Bearden's first field goal with 3:47 left in the second quarter. That made the score 20-3. Brillhart would make one more bucket before halftime. Farragut (14-2, 9-1), which entered the game in a first-place tie with South-Doyle (with the Lady Cherokees holding the head-to-head tie-breaker thanks to their road win over the Lady Admirals in November), led the Bruins 24-5 at halftime.

"This was a good game for us coming off the break," Farragut coach Susan Davidson said. "We had points tonight where we were a little sluggish. But overall, it was a pretty good game for us.

"Our scoring was balanced and we got to work on our handling with some of our younger kids. We've had some illness going around on our team; we had Ella McFerran change some things about her game. She had to be a post player tonight and she did well. Macy McWhirter had a big game for us as well."

McWhirter led all scorers with 11 points. She made three 3-pointers. Keeliegh Rogers added nine. Ashlyn Sheridan and Avery Strickland, the reigning Most Valuable Player, scored eight points apiece. Aubrie Stackhouse finished with six. McFerran scored five and Emmie Harville scored two.

Brillhart had eight (including six after half-time) to lead the Lady Bruins.

Bearden coach Clark Bowling said he was pleased with his squad's effort against the Lady Admirals.

"We knew that this was going to be a tough game because Farragut is a great team," Bowling said. "We showed a lot of fight and I don't think we ever quit."

"I like the fight that we showed."

Brabson could have hands full of trophies, too

By Steve Williams

Eric Brabson is performing double duty as basketball coach at South-Doyle Middle School this season. He's coaching the boys and girls teams.

And both are expected to challenge for championships in the upcoming annual Knox County Middle School post-season tournament.

"There's been a turnover here year after year on the girls' side for the last six years," said Brabson, who took over as the school's boys head coach last season. "Every year they've had a different coach."

"It got to the point where I wanted to step in to give the girls program some continuity. I have no intentions of leaving next year, so they can start having a consistent coach."

Last year's girls coach, Tony Cooper, is now an assistant girls coach at Fulton High School.

During his career, Brabson has been a girls' head coach at Austin-East and South-Doyle high schools. He also was a boys' assistant coach at SDHS prior to coming to South-Doyle Middle last season.

"The biggest thing with coaching both teams is the time issue, having to split up time a little more than you would like," he said.

Normally, Brabson will have a three-hour practice, with the boys going the first half and the girls the second half and then 30 minutes when they are all together.

Gresham boys start fast, run past Halls 51-25

By Ken Lay

A fast start helped Gresham Middle School's boys basketball team notch a crucial road victory over a longtime rival Tuesday night.

The Gladiators were hot early as they captured a 51-25 Knox County Middle School Basketball Conference victory at Halls.

The victory enabled Gresham (8-6 overall, 4-4 in the conference) to complete the regular-season series season sweep over the Demons (2-10, 1-8). The Gladiators darted out to a 19-5 lead and never looked back on a night when they dominated the glass and boasted a balanced scoring attack in the second chapter of the Black Oak Ridge rivalry.

"We did a good job rebounding," Gresham coach Joel Sampsel said. "But Halls is getting better and their coach is doing a great job with his team."

"When we played them at the first of the year, we beat them by 30-ish points and today, it was by 20 or 25 points. So they've gotten better."

The Gladiators routed the Demons 68-39 when the two Black Oak Ridge rivals met at Central High School on Thursday, Dec. 9 but Halls coach Nathan Sherrod, who like Sampsel, is a first-year head coach in Knox County, didn't exactly agree with the Gresham coach's assessment of the Demons and their performance last week.

The Gladiators won the rebounding battle handily and it was one of Gresham's smaller players who hustled and hit the boards early Austin Ellis grabbed eight rebounds in the first quarter and scored second-chance points to help the Gladiators put things away early.

Ellis would finish the game with 12 points.

"Austin Ellis did a great job on the boards, especially for a smaller guy," Sampsel said.

Darion Bailey also scored 12 points in the contest. He had a bucket to give Gresham a 9-2 lead with 4 minutes, 49 seconds remaining in the first quarter. From there, the Gladiators would finish the frame with a 10-2 run.

"Darion Bailey also had a big game for us," Sampsel said.

Bailey scored half of his points before halftime and Blake McCarty scored all eight of his points in the opening half. Carson Jessie also scored eight points for the Gladiators.

Vann Kirkland and Ethan Shaffer each scored five points for the Demons.

CAK's Amber Heatherly scores a gem

By Steve Williams

Amber Heatherly recently reached a special milestone in her high school basketball career.

The Christian Academy of Knoxville senior scored her 1000th point in the Lady Warriors' 58-54 win over host Cleveland High in the championship game of the Under Armour Tournament Dec. 29.

Heatherly and her teammates also notched wins over Hampton and Walker Valley in the holiday tourney. Heatherly scored 30, 19 and 14 points in the three games.

Amber, who has a 4.2 GPA, will be attending the University of Tennessee in the fall.

"I am so very proud of Amber for accomplishing such a special milestone in her career at CAK," said Coach Caitlin Hollifield.

"She has worked very hard the last four years; both on and off the court. It's fun to see that time and commitment in both academics and athletics pay off. Not to mention, Amber is also a great young lady!"

Amber is the daughter of Roger and Angel Heatherly of Halls.

TRIPLE DOUBLE: Central sophomore Ashton Blair had 20 points, 13 rebounds and 12 blocked shots in a 61-57 loss to Scott High on Jan. 6.

Amber Heatherly has piled up the points in her basketball career at CAK and also sparked in the classroom.

RAINING THREES: Jordan Crawley of Grace Christian Academy hit five 3-pointers and tallied 20 points in the Rams' 83-52 win at CAK on Jan. 9.

Paige Gentry of Hardin Valley Academy swished in four treys and 14 points in the Lady Hawks' 72-48 win at Fulton on Jan. 3.

CLUTCH TIME: Trent Stephney scored 20 of his 22 points in the second half as Bearden, the No. 1 ranked Class AAA boys team in the state, pulled out a 74-67 win over upset-minded West on the Bulldogs' floor Jan. 9.

FLYING HIGH: Fulton Falcons' Trey Davis had a game-high 30 points and eight rebounds in a 73-51 win over rival Austin-East Jan. 6.

Unranked Lady Hornets focus on 'what we can control'

By Steve Williams

Some folks in Strawberry Plains might have been a little upset last week when they didn't see their Carter Lady Hornets listed anywhere in The Associated Press' first high school basketball state rankings of the 2017-18 season.

But it didn't bother Bo Lewis, Carter's head coach.

"As far as the AP state rankings go, we can't get worried about or wrapped up in rankings," Lewis replied when asked for a comment.

"Our goals are still the same regardless. One of those goals being not to pay attention to any noise outside of our program. Control what we can control. No point in getting tore up over something that doesn't really matter at this stage of the season.

"Our focus should be on one another as a team/family and how can we make one another better each day."

The rankings came out on Jan. 9 and Carter notched a 53-44 road win at Pigeon Forge that night to improve to 12-1 overall and 4-0 in District 3-AA.

With first place in the district on the line Friday night, the Lady Hornets lost 54-44 at Northview Academy (17-1, 5-0).

Carter's next assignment will be at Grace Christian Academy tonight (Jan. 15).

The Lady Hornets are in their third season of causing a buzz in East Knox County under Coach Lewis. And this year they already have enjoyed special victories.

According to Lewis, a 60-56 win at Jefferson County on Jan. 6 was the first in school history. Carter also defeated Gatlinburg-Pittman for the first time in over eight years and toppled Alcoa, which is at the top of its district on the other side of the region.

The win at Pigeon Forge was the Lady Hornets' fourth in the last five meetings and Carter had never beaten Pigeon Forge until two seasons ago. Being tied in first place in the district hasn't happened since 2000.

Carter lost at Powell 68-62 on Jan. 5, but bounced back with the win at Jefferson County.

"It has been a complete team effort," said Lewis. "We talk on a daily basis about being a great teammate first. You have to care about one another.

"We have a group of players that are just really good people on and off the floor."

The Lady Hornets were averaging close to 68 points per game and holding their opponents to 40 when the first AP rankings came out.

Big games remaining in the regular season also include a trip to G-P on Jan. 23 and home contests against Northview Academy (Feb. 2), Pigeon Forge (Feb. 6) and Powell (Feb. 8).

OTHERS: Hardin Valley Academy was the only Knox County girls' team listed in The AP rankings. The Lady Hawks were listed among "others" receiving votes in Class AAA. They lost their first district game Thursday night to Maryville 49-39.

Top ranked girls teams in the state were Bradley Central in Class AAA, Upperman in Class AA, Clarkrange in Class A and Brentwood Academy in Division II.

Gresham survives late comeback effort from Lady Demons 32-25

By Ken Lay

After getting off to fast start Tuesday night in a rivalry game, the Gresham Middle School girls basketball team had to hang on for a 32-25 Knox County Middle School Conference victory at Halls.

The Lady Gladiators started fast and led 16-7 at halftime. Gresham (7-6 overall, 6-2 in the KCMSBC) extended their advantage to 23-12 by third quarter's end.

But the Lady Demons finally came alive in the fourth quarter. Halls (3-9, 3-6) scored the first seven points of the final frame and made five consecutive free throws en route to pulling to within 23-19 when Anna Jo Mullins converted an old-fashioned three-point play with 5 minutes, 17 seconds remaining.

Mullins, who finished the contest with 10 points to lead the Lady Demons, had two other free throws during her team's comeback attempt. Kiera Eyertze hit two more to shift momentum in the home team's direction.

During Halls Middle's surge, The Lady Gladiators struggled to take care of the basketball as they committed three turnovers.

Gresham, despite struggling and committing seven turnovers in the fourth quarter, never led by less than three down the stretch.

Lady Gladiators coach

Kiley Gray said that she was pleased with the way her team handled adversity on the road.

"We really showed a lot of poise when we could've flipped out," she said. "At times, things really weren't going our way and Halls played tough.

"They've gotten better and we hadn't practiced in a while."

Aaniyah Johnson led Gresham with 11 points, including six in the final stanza. Macaiah Harrison added 10. Cadence Horner finished with six.

Halls coach Richard Lee has watched his young team struggle all year but he was certainly pleased with his team Tuesday.

"These kids play hard and seven of them are sixth graders," Lee said. "I'm really proud of them because they play hard.

"There's not an ounce of quit in them. They play hard but we just have to learn to put the ball in the basket."

"I do enjoy it," he said. "There are definitely differences in coaching high school and middle school. Obviously, the skill set is more developed at the high school level. One of the fun things is actually getting to develop the middle school player."

Brabson is assisted by Kelby Arrowood and Nate Roach and calls them "solid backup."

After last Thursday's games against visiting Vine, the South-Doyle girls improved to 9-1 in league play with a 38-18 win before the S-D boys slipped to 8-2 with a 40-39 loss.

Brabson pointed out that every team in Knox County will finish the season with a loss, except for the girls' and boys' championship teams in the post-season tournament, which gets underway Feb. 1.

"I want our teams to have that winning feeling at the end," said Brabson. "The quality of play and the talent is here on both sides."

The Lady Cherokees are led by Terryauna Griffin, Jamia Simmons and Ranaisha Gates. They are eighth graders and have played together since the sixth grade, said Brabson.

Leading the way for South-Doyle's boys are Taishawn Cates, Quentin Carr and Parker Williams.

Brabson also said two key post players, Nick Martin and Cameron Monday, are beginning to develop this year after getting little experience last season.

Podagra

Every week I wait for a story to find me. Sometimes a story is obvious like Trump versus The Swamp. Sometimes a story line just strikes you on the toe.

When Becky and I built our retirement home we were sure to include a wood burning fireplace. There's something about fire which is embedded deep in the psyche of human beings. In ancient Greek mythology, Prometheus was an Olympian god who gave fire to mankind. Though I discount this myth, somewhere in our distant past, the light and warmth of fire was discovered and became embedded in our genetic memory.

I was a conservationist and was recycling before it was cool. Years ago, I ran into a liberal friend at a recycling center. He was obviously puzzled to see me, and asked, "What are you doing here?" Obviously, my recycling challenged his bias and preconceived notions of conservatives. The word conservative derives from a Latin verb meaning to conserve.

Since our home is in the woods, we had to sacrifice some trees during the building process. We waste little on our Thistle Farm. Our table scraps feed chickens which produce eggs which we use and give to neighbors and friends. We're still using pine boards, milled on our property during our barn raising five years ago, for pasture fencing. With the new home project we harvested a white and red oak and milled the wood for cabinets, fireplace mantles and door frames.

Winter's cold is hard on an older internist, but a crackling fire warms my chilled bones and makes our home cozy. The only problem is that wood has to be split after it's cut. Fortunately, my neighbor loans me his gas wood splitting machine. And I did wise up and installed a gas firestarter which works much like a gas grill. This is a decided improvement. I no longer have to split kindling to build a fire. This spares cold fingers the dangers of a hatchet.

Unfortunately, a log is sometimes missed when splitting and must be split the old fashioned way with a sledge hammer and steel wedges which I've done for forty years. And that's where the problem began.

Podagra is a medical term referring to pain in the bunion joint of the toe. However, the implication is more than bunion pain often caused by stylish women's shoes. Shoes with pointed toe pinch the forefoot, and together with high heels make women appear so fetching. Nonetheless, stylish shoes are hard on the forefoot and the bunion area of the foot.

Podagra connotes in a doctor's mind not only pain but inflammation with associated swelling, redness, warmth and loss of function of the first metatarsal joint (bunion joint). The cause of podagra is often gout, although other similar conditions such as pseudogout can produce similar inflammation of the great toe.

You might find it curious that gout preferentially inflames the great toe. However, other arthritic conditions have predilections for certain joints. An example is osteoarthritis (aka degenerative arthritis) which preferentially involves the terminal joints of the fingers. On the other hand, rheumatoid arthritis preferentially affects the middle finger joints.

Uric acid is a waste product of metabolism which is absorbed into the bloodstream and is filtered by the kidney and finally eliminated. Higher levels of uric acid can precipitate an exquisitely painful attack of gout. There is a concept in medicine called the solubility product which describes the equilibrium of partially dissolved substances in the body's water medium. If you increase the substances or decrease the volume of water, a point will be reached when the substances no longer stay in solution and crystallize. That's not a healthy situation.

Consider the bunion joint which carries the entire weight of the body as you stride/walk. Uric acid and other dissolved salts accumulate in heavily used joints during daily activities. Then at rest, the extruded joint fluid is reabsorbed just as edema subsides with elevation of the legs. Because physiologic (semipermeable) membranes allow the movement of water faster than salts, the concentration of salts rise as fluid is absorbed favoring crystallization. That should be more than enough medical science for purists. Now let me tell you about another cause of podagra and the picture I've posted to the internet!

I found three logs I'd missed with the gasoline splitter, so I decided to get out my trusty sledge hammer and steel wedges to render these logs fire-place-ready. Normally, I cut and split wood in heavy coveralls and with boots, but not for three logs I told myself. This was a big a mistake. Though I've used these tools to split wood for decades, I'm not perfect. On the third log I missed the center of the wedge with the sledgehammer. It ricocheted off the wedge and mashed my big toe between the hammer and the frozen ground.

Curiously, when people hear this story they invariably ask me if I cursed. Perhaps they assumed that I would; I didn't. Perhaps they imagined they would have done so in a similar situation.

People often consult me with injuries and whether they should seek immediate attention. A sign of significant injury is immediate swelling of the injured part, often indicative of internal bleeding. I find this a better sign than the degree of pain which is subjective.

From the picture you can tell that an eight pound sledgehammer slung from shoulder height onto your big toe, hurts. And from the immediate swelling I knew there was bleeding. I immediately iced my toe to reduce the bleeding, but the damage was done and by that evening the toe was, to use the vernacular, "athob'n." Yes, the doctor confirmed the cause of my podagra was a fracture, but it's telling when he saw my toe and said, "Oh, wow." My toe was actually shattered like a plate dropped from shoulder height onto concrete.

The doctor gave me one of those strap on walking shoes which I referred to as my Christmas boot. It's been five weeks now and I'm much better, but I won't be kicking soccer balls anytime soon. I am back in normal shoes. And that's a good thing because your toes get cold in winter in a "Christmas boot."

Healthy ways to weigh less

By The University of Tennessee Medical Center News Service

Did you make a New Year's resolution to lose weight? Dr. Greg Mancini, medical director of University Bariatric Center at The University of Tennessee Medical Center, offers the following tips that can improve your chances of weight loss success.

- Choose a diet that works for you. "Diets are not one size fits all."
- Eat a healthy, well-balanced diet. "Don't starve yourself or eliminate entire food groups."
- Plan what you will eat each day. "Planning will help you avoid quick decisions and poor choices. Packing your own lunch and snacks is a good way to make better choices."

- Eliminate unhealthy snacks and desserts from your home. "Replace unhealthy foods with healthy fruits and vegetables."
- Begin every meal with a salad or broth-based vegetable soup. "These foods are low in calories, and due to their high water content, they help you feel full. Also, avoid high calorie salad dressings."
- Track your eating habits. "Keeping a record of what you eat makes it easier to see what does and does not work."

- Exercise. "Any weight loss effort should include exercise. A mix of aerobics, resistance training and stretching is best. Resistance workouts build muscle and muscle burns more calories."
- Consult your healthcare provider. "Before beginning any weight loss plan or exercise routine, talk with your healthcare provider. He or she will help you choose a diet plan that works best for you and an exercise plan that will help you avoid injury-related setbacks."

"The key to overall weight loss success is balance and moderation," says Mancini. Should you need additional help with your weight management, Mancini suggests seeking the guidance of healthcare providers like herself at University Bariatric Center.

"Our weight loss surgery options include laparoscopic gastric bypass surgery, laparoscopic adjustable gastric banding (LapBand) and laparoscopic gastric sleeve surgery," explains Mancini. "The center complements every surgery with pre-surgery counseling, additional nutrition education, after-surgery information and counseling."

Mancini says you can schedule a one-on-one consultation or receive more information on weight loss options by calling University Bariatric Center at 865-305-WELL.

Additionally, for reliable information on taking care of your health or a loved one's health, contact UTMC's Health Information Center at 865.305.9525 or online at www.utmedicalcenter.org/hic. Staffed by medical librarians and certified health information specialists, the Health Information Center offers an extensive health library, digital and printed resources, walk-in assistance, and help with research on specific health conditions - all free of charge and available to the public.

Celebrating Train Your Dog Month

Nature versus nurture: how the genome shines light on the age-old question

By Howard Baker, RN BSN

January is National Train Your Dog Month. We hope you included dog training as part of your New Years Resolution. The importance of basic training and socialization is essential to enjoying your dog in more places. A strong training foundation starts with the dog owner understanding proper dog etiquette and becoming an active participant in training their dog. Nothing is more rewarding than enjoying the company of a well-behaved dog in a social setting. Good manners and proper dog etiquette opens a whole new world for you and your dog to enjoy together.

The American Humane Association estimates approximately 1.2 million dogs are euthanized yearly and about 10% are related to behavior issues. These statistics are staggering and emphasize the importance of having a well-behaved dog. No one likes being in the company of an ill-behaved dog. However, a dog with good manners and proper etiquette can be the life of a party—especially if Fido has a few entertaining tricks to perform.

Hobo the Wonder Dog was abused, frightened, and despondent when he was rescued. With love, patience, and a professional dog trainer Hobo thrives. Hobo exemplifies the spirit and value of professional dog training. Hiring a professional can be a daunting task; here are a few tips to help select a trainer best suited for you and your dog.

Background: What experience, certifications, and education does the trainer have qualifying them to train your dog. Does the trainer belong to a professional association, and if not, why? Trainers may have a specialty such as behavior, obedience, tricks, or agility. Trainers with a specialty and passion in the area of your goals will deliver better results. Request references and call them.

Methods: Trainers may use different methodologies such as punishing bad behavior while others use positive reinforcement and rewards for good behavior. Hobo the Wonder Dog only trains with positive reinforcement and rewards for good behavior methods. Request references and call them.

References: I say again request references and call them. Hobo's trainer came highly recommended by another dog trainer because of their background, personality, method of training, and experience with dogs having special needs. I stress the importance of references because they can attest to the trainer's promptness, professionalism, results, manners, and methods. This is where you dig in and ask the questions you may not want to ask the prospect.

Our celebration of National Train Your Dog Month is a celebration of Hobo's life. We believe wholeheartedly in the skills, heart, experience, education, and the person who helped bring Hobo back to life. You can see the transformation on Hobo the Wonder Dog's YouTube channel video titled "The First Five Months." If you will spend fifteen minutes three or four times a week and incorporate training into everyday life and outings; before you know it—you'll be Celebrating Train Your Dog Month every month.

Life is better with a well-trained dog—woof!

Knox County Public Library invites the public to join UT alumnus Dr. Jason Fletcher for a discussion of his book "The Genome Factor: What the Social Genomics Revolution Reveals about Ourselves, Our History, and the Future" at noon on Wednesday, January 24 in the East Tennessee History Center auditorium at this month's Books Sandwiched In program. Bring your lunch or pick up something downtown. Drinks are available for fifty cents. Reading the book is optional. Books Sandwiched In is generously sponsored by the Friends of Knox County Public Library.

"I'm very excited to be returning to Knoxville to share my research," Fletcher said. "My first experience doing research was as an undergraduate at UT in the economics department and the center for business and economic research (CBER), which gave me many opportunities to learn how to work across disciplines and gather evidence on many policy topics."

In The Genome Factor, Fletcher and co-author Dalton Conley take us on what one reviewer called, "an exhilarating and accessible exploration of dangerous and disputed territory: the role of genes in economic and social life." They reveal that there are real genetic differences by racial ancestry, but differences that don't conform to what we call Black, white, or Latino. Genes explain a significant share of who gets ahead in society and who does not, but instead of giving rise to a genocracy, genes often act as engines of mobility that counter social disadvantage.

Fletcher is currently Romnes Professor of Public Affairs at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. He completed a B.S. in economics and public administration at the University of Tennessee-Knoxville, and a doctorate at the University of Wisconsin-Madison in Applied Economics.

Dealing with Temptation

Right after Jesus was baptized we are told he was led by the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted while fasting forty days and forty nights. After leaving John the Baptist, Jesus likely headed due west across a flat desert peppered with scrub brush. There is not a lot to see between the Jordan River and the mountains of the wilderness. According to tradition, Jesus passed just north of Jericho in the Judean wilderness to a rugged and barren mountain known today as Mount Quarantal. Quarantal means forty. The mountain is so named because it is thought that Jesus spent his forty days of temptation here.

The wilderness where Jesus went is not a tropical forest. It is a dry, arid, desert. It looks similar to the desert South West, like many places in New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, or Nevada. This is where Jesus spent forty days praying, fasting, and wrestling with the devil in temptation. If you were to journey there today, you would find a cave halfway up the mountain that was the traditional spot where Jesus spent the night. Today standing over the cave is the Monastery of the Temptation. You can walk up there or take a tram and journey to the back of the cave to see the supposed place where Jesus slept.

While we don't know the exact place where Jesus spent these forty days and nights, we do know what he did. He prayed. He fasted. He slept alone under the stars or in a cave. He lived with the wild animals. The wilderness is often used as a metaphor for a place we don't want to go. It describes when life gets hard and we are wrestling with evil or the devil.

You can't help but think of Elijah who fled to the wilderness when Queen Jezebel wanted to kill him. David fled here when Saul wanted to kill him and he composed many of his Psalms here. Moses lived in the wilderness of Sinai for forty years as a fugitive from Pharaoh. These stories have something in common: God met each of them in the wilderness. Elijah heard God's still small voice here. Moses saw a burning bush and God spoke to him out of it. David received comfort knowing that God was his shepherd. And God will meet us when we enter into our wilderness. We often feel alone and hopeless, yet God is there. When we pay attention and listen, God will come to us and use our experience in the wilderness to strengthen us.

Jesus' temptations and his time in the wilderness was a way for him to connect with God's people of the past. It also served as a test for Jesus before he began His ministry and as an example for us to resist similar temptations we face. Satan used these temptations to try to break Jesus, but instead God used them to strengthen Him.

We each have moments of temptation. At those times God speaks to us through Scripture, through others, or through a still small voice. The devil attempts to do the same. He will quote Scripture, attempt to work through others to capture our hearts, or speak a word to your mind. But we can be like Jesus. When these times come, we can quote Scripture back and resist him, being strengthened in our faith. Jesus can empathize with us because He was tempted in every way yet was without sin (Hebrews 4:15-16). Go to Jesus with confidence so you may receive mercy and find grace.

The Knox County Imagination Library program will celebrate its own milestone as well: since 2005, the program has mailed out 2.5 million books to Knox County children under the age of five.

Children of all ages, including infants, qualify for a children's card, which has some restrictions. Children must be present to apply and parents must provide identification and address verification in order to receive the special children's card. All new cards are free for Knox County residents.

When children have their own library card, they are more excited about reading and coming to the library, and they begin to learn responsibility for the items they check out.
