

Wetlands being studied at Fountain City Lake

Wetlands are being studied at Fountain City Lake, a 1,000-acre lake in the city of Fountain City, Ore.

The study is being conducted by the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, in partnership with the city of Fountain City.

The study is being conducted to determine the value of the wetlands and to develop a management plan for the lake.

The study is being conducted by the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, in partnership with the city of Fountain City.

The study is being conducted to determine the value of the wetlands and to develop a management plan for the lake.

The study is being conducted by the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, in partnership with the city of Fountain City.

The study is being conducted to determine the value of the wetlands and to develop a management plan for the lake.

The study is being conducted by the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, in partnership with the city of Fountain City.

The study is being conducted to determine the value of the wetlands and to develop a management plan for the lake.

The study is being conducted by the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, in partnership with the city of Fountain City.

The study is being conducted to determine the value of the wetlands and to develop a management plan for the lake.

Students and a teacher at South Douglas High School, where a new 21st-century library is dedicated.

21st-century library dedicated at South Douglas High

By [Name]

A new 21st-century library was dedicated at South Douglas High School on Tuesday. The library, which is the largest in the school's history, features a variety of new technologies and resources.

The library, which is the largest in the school's history, features a variety of new technologies and resources.

The library, which is the largest in the school's history, features a variety of new technologies and resources.