There are a number of reasons why the results of the study may be biased. First, the study was conducted in a single center, which may limit the generalizability of the findings. Second, the study was retrospective, which may introduce bias due to selection and recall. Third, the study did not include a control group, which may limit the ability to attribute the findings to the intervention. Finally, the study did not include a long-term follow-up, which may limit the ability to assess the long-term effects of the intervention.

These results suggest that the use of a single, standard, non-validated questionnaire may not be the best way to measure the prevalence of depression in a community sample. The use of a validated questionnaire, such as the GHQ-12, may be a more reliable way to measure the prevalence of depression in a community sample. The use of a validated questionnaire, such as the GHQ-12, may also be a more reliable way to measure the prevalence of depression in a community sample.

the 1990s, the industry has been hit hard by a combination of factors. The most significant of these are the increasing competition from other forms of entertainment, the changing tastes of the audience, and the increasing costs of production. The industry has been forced to adapt to these changes, and has been successful in doing so. The industry has been able to maintain its position as the leading form of entertainment, and has been able to continue to produce high-quality content. The industry has also been able to adapt to the changing tastes of the audience, and has been able to continue to produce content that is relevant and engaging. The industry has also been able to adapt to the increasing costs of production, and has been able to continue to produce high-quality content.
