Spangler greets supporters at Corryton campaign stop

U.S. Rep. Louie Gohmert (R-Texas) and Sen. Bill Spangler (R-Texas) visited the University of Tennessee on Tuesday to meet with supporters of Corryton, a proposed new city in the Knoxville area. Spangler, who is running for re-election in 2012, was the main attraction at the event, which was held at the University's Student Center. He was joined by Gohmert, who is also running for re-election in 2012. The two lawmakers were accompanied by their families and a large group of supporters. Spangler spoke to the crowd, expressing his appreciation for the support and outlining his plans for the region. He mentioned the importance of infrastructure and economic development in the area. The event was well-attended, with many people taking photos and interacting with the lawmakers. Spangler's visit was part of a larger campaign effort to connect with voters in the region.

Spangler said that he was excited to be in Knoxville and to meet with the community. He mentioned that he had been to Knoxville several times and was impressed by the city's growth and potential. He also mentioned that he was looking forward to working with the local government and business community to address the needs of the region.
