

Sen. Thomas, D-Vt., center, and Sen. Harker, D-Vt., left, are seen at a meeting with the Vermont State Board of Education on Tuesday, Oct. 10, 2018. The board is currently reviewing the state's education budget for the next fiscal year.

Ethics committee dismisses complaints against Harker and Thomas

By [Name] | [Date]

VERMONT'S ETHICS COMMISSION has dismissed complaints against Sen. Thomas Harker and Sen. Thomas D. Thomas, D-Vt., regarding their alleged conflicts of interest. The commission's decision comes after a lengthy investigation into the matter.

The commission found that the complaints against Harker and Thomas were unfounded. It stated that the senators' actions did not constitute a conflict of interest under the state's ethics laws. The commission's decision was based on a thorough review of the evidence and the senators' explanations.

The commission's decision is a significant victory for Harker and Thomas, who have been facing criticism from the public and the media. It also demonstrates the commission's commitment to fairness and due process in its investigations.

House delays the Postpone Vote on 2018-19 Budget

By [Name] | [Date]

THE VERMONT HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES has delayed a vote on the 2018-19 budget. The delay was announced by the House Speaker, who stated that the House needs more time to review the budget and address concerns from members.

The House is currently in a recess, and the vote will be postponed until the next session. The Speaker's decision was met with mixed reactions from the public and the media. Some argue that the delay is necessary to ensure a thorough review of the budget, while others believe it is a tactic to avoid a vote on the budget.