

...the education department, mobile speakers, and a public area with free activities for kids of all ages.

EarthFest is excited to celebrate Earth Day at the new venue as well as the Friends Science Center, which offers plenty of green space, views of the mountains and access to public transportation.

Guest speakers and activities include:

- Keynote Speakers whose topics include Microplastics, Data, Energy and More.

- Exhibits hosted by local environmental-friendly businesses, organizations and nonprofits, many with live demonstrations.

For a detailed list of activities, sponsors, parking info, to register, food orders and more visit www.earthfest.org.

Candidates for Sheriff Tom Spangler had the wedding of his daughter as a trial run for tomorrow's event didn't work the enthusiasm of the supporters. They created a "Cruiser" down Kingston Pike from Nashville to Knoxville showing their support for Spangler. Left: Tiffaney Carver, Shelia Pollock and Tricia Roberts put the finishing touches on a VW Camper. Top-right: Jim and Tanya Smith decorate their Camper preparing for the "Cruiser for Spangler" down Kingston Pike. Right center: The group is ready to go. Bottom-right: The VW Camper led the way during a recent "Cruiser for Spangler" down Kingston Pike. Photos by Mike Brady.

Old Supreme Court Hotel taking shape

By Mike Brady
mbrady@knoxnews.com

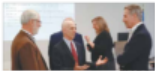

Developer Rick Carter and his partner, Chicago-based Foster Development, shared their tentative plans for the restoration of Knoxville's former first Supreme Court building with city council members Thursday afternoon.

Empty for years, the complex takes up a block of corner between Third, Cumberland, Second and Church streets, opposite the Knoxville Convention Center. Deputy Mayor Bill Lyons spoke to the council's general work session about the project last Thursday.

Lyons detailed the building's history beginning in 2005 when the state agreed to work with the city for the municipality to restore the building. He said two previous proposals had failed for development before the city finally acquired it in 2015. Last year

Continued on page 2

Councilman Richard Henderson, Deputy Mayor Bill Lyons and Board member Rick Foster share their plans for the former Tennessee Supreme Court Building during a special City Council Thursday.

Twin Creek Road neighbors

Summit Hill