

City budget passes but with some questions

By [Name]

The City of Knoxville has passed its 2014 budget, but the process was not without controversy. The budget, which includes a 1.5% increase in property taxes, was approved by the City Council on Tuesday. However, several council members expressed concerns about the impact of the tax increase on residents and businesses. The budget also includes cuts to various city departments and programs, which has led to speculation about the future of certain services. The city's financial health remains a topic of discussion as the city looks to balance its budget while maintaining essential services.

Parkridge historic expansion might not be dead

By [Name]

The historic Parkridge expansion project, which has been on hold for several years, is now being reconsidered by city officials. The project, which would involve the development of new housing and commercial space in the Parkridge area, has been a topic of discussion for a long time. City officials are now looking at the potential benefits of the project, including increased tax revenue and job creation. However, there are still many questions about the project's feasibility and the impact it would have on the neighborhood. The city is currently in the process of conducting a study to evaluate the project's potential.

The Parkridge area has a rich history and a strong sense of community. The expansion project would bring new life to the area and provide a mix of housing options for residents. City officials are working to address the concerns of the community and ensure that the project is in the best interests of the city. The project would also provide an opportunity for the city to revitalize the Parkridge area and create a vibrant, walkable neighborhood. The city is currently in the process of conducting a study to evaluate the project's potential.
