

Ed and Bob sign off with last Night Out'

Knox County At-Large Commissioners Ed Brantley and Bob Thomas held their final Commissioners' Night Out at Wright's Cafeteria Thursday. When elected, Ed and Bob promised to be available to all citizens. This was their 43rd consecutive monthly Ed & Bob Night Out in Knox County.

Ed and Bob always felt that going out to the citizens eases the strain on those who, because of work, commitments, financial situation or the distance to the City-County Building, cannot attend regular commission meetings.

Ed and Bob will be honored for their work and service at the commission's regular meeting tonight.

Hollywood Road zoning, sports insurance and new greenway before city council

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

Looks like a busy meeting is in store for the Knoxville City Council Tuesday afternoon. The 6 p.m. regular session may see discussion from everything from finalizing the new noise ordinance to zoning changes to awarding the contract for the new Urban Wilderness Gateway Project.

Neighbors along Hollywood Road in Pond Gap are expected to appear and plead with the council not to pass, on a final reading, approval for an apartment complex designed for 24 units per acre. The local homeowners, joined by the Bearden Council and others, objected to the first reading and then protested along the busy connector road recently

KCSD pension dispute going to court

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

Should pensions for former and future Knox County Sheriff's Department employees carry on the vacation days that have been added to pension calculations? Or should the pensions only include 75% of their regular monthly salaries for the last two years served?

That's the question that will be before Chancery Court on Friday, September 7. Because the Knox County Law Department cannot legally sue a division of Knox County the law director hired an outside firm to sue the Pension Board for including those unused vacation days in calculations. The difference could be thousands of dollars in increased pension, some more than 85% of their salaries. Some retiring employees are drawing the increased amount and others preparing to retire want to keep the increase. The county, in effect, is suing its own Pension board.

"We are all here for the same reason. It isn't working - what can we do to make it better? And if we don't make it better, there is going to be a teacher crisis. The new interns are already seeing it," the collective voices of unhappy teachers told The Focus as Governor Bill Haslam kicked off his six-stop listening tour last Friday at Halls Elementary School.

Sale of Andrew Johnson Building on hold

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

An agreement to sell the Andrew Johnson Building has been postponed another 30 days by the Knox County Commission. The matter has faced questions from the commission about the appraised amount being much lower than the offer and why the "per square foot" estimate could be too low compared to other downtown about half of the appraised value.

Randy Smith told The Focus Busler called on Superinhe understands the delay is because the proposed buyer, BNA Associates LLC, wants to review the latest Johnson Building houses modified agreement. Terms the administration offices of the sale first appeared on the agenda in July; however the second postponement won't be considered properties. The purchase until the first meeting of the new location to move those offer, for $6 million, is new commission in September.

During the work session Commission Chairman Commissioner Charles tendent Bob Thomas for an update on the search for a new location. The Andrew of the school system and any agreement to sell the historic building depends on finding and preparing a offices.

Thomas said the county is leading the way to find a location and he is in a conversation about the possible move. He asked Finance Director Chris Caldwell to comment.

Caldwell told the commissioners that 10 to 15 locations have been considered and the list has been narrowed down to "less than five" that would work but added he doesn't help offset any cost. "feel comfortable about discussing" the options.

Asked about using the old Rule High School property Caldwell said it could cost up to $40 million to renovate the old facility or possibly $15 million if a new building is added there. He said private and county-owned properties are being considered and that liquidating some other county-owned sites could

Busler said the search could result in selling the Andrew Johnson Building for $6 million and then replacing it with some place that is "a bit more expensive."

Caldwell said a move could be to a facility of at least 96,000 square feet with about 400 parking spaces if it only relocates the administration offices of the Tennessee Organization of School Superintendents Wayne Miller told the crowd inside, "We want to hear what does and doesn't work. We know everything isn't rosy."

But the teachers who were not allowed to enter the building had a different impression: "The concern shown here isn't genuine. They have chosen one small room in an elementary school at 3 p.m., elementary dismissal time, when teachers can't be present and there isn't enough space for a full forum. This was deliberately and strategically scheduled so that most teachers could not show up and speak."

Haslam briefly spoke with protestors outside after the meeting before leaving to co-host a fundraiser for state Representative Eddie Smith who is seeking reelection in November. Smith's opponent in the November state general election is Gloria Johnson.

According to the governor's office, the goal of the six listening sessions is to provide an opportunity for educators and administrators to share information about recent challenges related to the online delivery of state assessments (TNReady). Each meeting is to encourage feedback on how the state can continue to improve its assessment; a discussion of steps made to-date to improve test administration in 2018-19; and a conversation on ways to improve test delivery through the oversight and selection of the state's next assessment partner, which will occur later this school year.

Tennessee Department of Education Commissioner

Candice McQueen is attending each leg of the tour as well as Wayne Miller and an educator advisory team which will gather information and feedback from each meeting and develop a set of principles and recommendations for consideration by the governor as well as the next administration.

The listening tour will continue in Hamilton, Shelby, Williamson, Greene and Gibson counties. Specific locations and dates have not been announced yet.

Elizabeth MacTavish, who introduced herself as a former teacher, current Educational Researcher and a parent, called the TNReady testing a waste of taxpayer money that could go to the schools and pointed out that there is lack of real, reliable and valid research behind the testing.

"The best way to let teachers to have a voice would be to invite them! What has happened here is that they have hand-picked those few who have bought into their system."

She voiced the question many were asking, "If TNReady is all about Technology, then why wasn't technology used for today's meeting to survey and find out what teachers need?"

There is no 'opt out' provision, but her children have not taken the test in four years and that hasn't hurt them at all she claimed. In fact, she told The Focus that teachers have been very supportive of their decision and have even thanked them for being a voice.

"I don't think enough parents know that they have the option to refuse testing but if more did it would send a louder message."

History fair fun for all the ages

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

The East Tennessee History Fair was more than anyone could have expected. Thousands of people came to Knoxville recently and visited the many events, booths, demonstrations, exhibits, and chatted with history re-enactors.

The Saturday event flirted with rain all day but people didn't seem to mind. There was something for everyone including children's activities, antique sales and food trucks, a World War I baseball game, historic home tours, and even a cemetery tour and vintage films at the Tennessee Theatre.

Cherel Henderson, director of the East Tennessee Historical Society, said that attendance overall was down about 20% because of the off and on again showers however attendance at the East Tennessee History Museum was up as people took shelter there to see the dis-

The first year of the History Fair, in 2008, saw some 7,000 people attending. Last year Henderson said that 16,000 people came to the fair. "Family-friendly activities for all ages and interests, from a dog costume contest to a checkers tournament and living history interpreters, plus bus tours of historic sites and traditional music, were well received," Henderson said.

Exhibitors ranged from the East Tennessee Historical Museum, Tennessee State Parks, the soon-to-open Tennessee State Museum, The Muse, Davy Crockett's Birthday Celebration, and living history at Crutch Park and on Clinch Avenue. Demonstrators included spinning, caning and basket weaving, handmade jewelry, tin and copper making, handmade quilts, soap, powder horns, and leather-bound journals.

Re-enactors represented the Fort Loudoun State Historic Area, Civil War soldiers of both sides, suffragists, WWI and WWII, Korean and Vietnam Wars and various characters of Tennessee Living History.

Even Abe and Mary Lincoln appeared along with General Robert E. Lee and Ed Archer portraying a Mexican-American War surgeon.

Governor Bill Haslam's decision to go on a "listening tour" to hear the thoughts of professional educators seems a bit too little, too late. In less than five months' time, new governor and almost favorable to both teachers surely a new Commissioner of Education, as well as a new legislature. Governor Haslam embarking on a listening tour at this point seems to be less a way to fix a program that has never worked, than a bid to keep TNReady in place. I'll call it the Lazarus Tour to revive the dead.

In fact, the failure of the TNReady program to launch was one of the biggest embarrassments of the Haslam administration. For those who talk about "gains" under TNReady, there is a fact which seems to be lost in the shuffle during the conversation;

Tennessee will have a merely assessing that data for the difference in stuand students is worse than none at all. Any person with any common sense will realize accepting skewed data is foolish. It does not provide anything even resembling accurate information. Nor does it provide any real basis to adequately evaluate how good a job teachers are doing in the classroom in teaching our kids.

> Davidson County school officials point out students fared better on the paper version of TNReady than the online version; school officials in Nashville claim the problems with the online testing, which have been persistent, account dent scores. "We saw very different district results between the Value Added (growth) scores based upon the paper-and-pencil administered TNReady tests in grades 3-8 and the online administration of high school End of Course (year-end) exams." That statement came from Paul Changas, executive director of Davidson County's research and evaluation division. It is an interesting difference.

The truth is, since 2015, neither school districts or parents have had any reliable data to determine precisely how their children are faring as it relates to learning. Haslam now clearly realizes the problem and is worried Tennessee legislators may simply opt to ditch TNReady. That doesn't seem like such a bad idea to me. It's not like the state hasn't had plenty of time to fix the glitches over three years, as well as spending tens of millions of dollars annually of taxpayer dollars. Perhaps the conversation in assessing TNReady would be better for all concerned if the governor started at a different point; that point being how much better off would we be if teachers were merely able to teach.

Both state and federal law require annual testing, but there will also be a new legislature come January and perhaps it is time for the Tennessee General Assembly to take a serious look at scrapping the current law and introducing something more simple. There's an interesting concept: simplicity. We ought to keep in mind something all too often missing from government programs: simplicity works best. Even resorting to a pencil-and-paper test should be an option for the entire state.

Holding on to an idea that has never worked is foolish and detrimental and clearly it's past time to start looking for other options.

TNReady was never ready.

Windsor Gardens Assisted Living celebrates 18 years of service

By Focus Staff

Windsor Gardens Assisted Living, which is located at 5611 Central Ave. Pike, is celebrating 18 years of service to the North Knoxville Community. The staff at Windsor Gardens works diligently to create an atmosphere in which seniors can live independently in a quality home-like environment.

What makes Windsor Gardens different from other assisted livings in Knoxville? "It's that we are privately owned and I'm the majority stockholder and onsite administrator," Brian Bartley told The Focus. "I can make decisions immediately without going through the corporate maze. I can change green beans to pinto beans on Thursday and not have to get permission from headquarters," Bartley jokingly said.

Windsor Gardens offers three levels of personal care based on the needs of the resident. Level one is for residents who are selfsufficient in performing their personal care. Level two residents get medical assistance such as medication management, bathing and dressing. Level three is for residents who need more hands-on care that requires additional staff time. All incoming residents' health is evaluated by a licensed nurse and scored based on their medical requirements. The staff then designs a customized care plan targeted to meet the unique medical and personal needs of each individual resident. "Because of our facility shop at Walmart, picnic in parks different price points to choose daily basis," he added.

Chapman Highway Community Workshop Scheduled

The Metropolitan Planning Commission (MPC) and City of Knoxville will hold a community workshop for the Chapman Highway Implementation Plan on September 5, 2018. The workshop will be held from 5:30-7:00 pm in the library of South Doyle Middle School, 3900 Decatur Drive.

The workshop will be an informal open house. No presentation will be given, but information will be on display at multiple stations in the library. Community members are encouraged to stop by at their convenience to share ideas about how to make Chapman Highway a better place to walk, drive, bike or use public transit. Staff from MPC and other project leaders will be available to talk one-on-one with attendees and to answer questions.

The Chapman Highway Implementation Plan is being led by MPC and the City of Knoxville with the help of consultants from Kimley-Horn and Associates. The study will identify and prioritize needed roadway improvements for the sixmile section of Chapman Highway within city limits that runs from Blount Avenue to just south of Governor John Sevier Highway. A stakeholder committee has formed and met, and community input is now being sought. Your input is important! Feedback received from this workshop will be used to develop a list of projects to be considered for implementation. A second workshop will be held later to gather input on specific projects determined from the initial feedback. For more information on the study, visit the project webpage at www.knoxtrans.org/ chapman-highway.

Bartley stated that assisted living demographics are changing. For example, in the year 2000, the aver-age age was 82. Today the average age of residents is 87 with a three to one ratio of women verses men. The average length of stay has changed from 28 months in 2009 to 22 months today.

August 27, 2018 www.knoxfocus.com PAGE B3 The Mystery After J. Will Taylor's Death Part One

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill rayhill865@gmail.com

Following Congressman of my own he said that was J. Will Taylor's death from an unexpected heart attack on November 14, 1939 there was an outpouring of grief on the part of the people of Tennessee's Second Congressional district. Taylor had long been a power in Tennessee and during the administrations of Presidents Warren G. Harding, Calvin Coolidge, and Herbert Hoover, had been the Republican "boss" of the state. It was J. Will Taylor who dispensed most of the federal patronage and appointments in Tennessee during the twelve years of national Republican rule. Taylor remained highly popular inside his own district and reached accommodations with powerful Democrats like Senator Kenneth D. McKellar, which proved to be helpful once Franklin D. Roosevelt came to power in 1933. The root of J. Will Taylor's popularity inside his own district came down to the congressman's industry and indefatigable energy in doing things for his people, a fact "Uncle" Bob Smith, the custodian of the Federal Building in Knoxville and a Democrat, readily admitted. Smith said he never knew "a man who was as quick to do a favor for another as J. Will Taylor."

Like many others inside Tennessee's Second Congressional district, "Uncle" Bob Smith had his own personal story general disability," Smith "I tried through said. various others for 10 years to get a pension and made no headway. Then I told Bill Taylor about it. We were on opposite sides of the fence but he got that pension for me in 30 days." Nor was that the only time J. Will Taylor helped "Uncle" Bob Smith. The custodian told a News-Sentinel reporter, "Recently I lost my discharge from the Army. I told Congressman Taylor about it. He obtained a duplicate from Washington for me within 10 days. That was six weeks ago." J. Will Taylor had represented the district since his election in 1918. Tributes to the late congressman poured in from colleagues, but perhaps the most interesting observations came from those who had encountered Taylor in other circumstances. James Wallace, a janitor and elevator operator in the Post Office building knew "Hillbilly Bill" for eighteen years. Wallace readily shared his impressions of the late Congressman. "Congressman Taylor was never too busy to talk to the lowliest man here about any personal problem, and help however he could," Wallace said. "When I told him sometime ago that I was planning to buy a little place a wonderful idea. He went with me two or three times to look at places. And when I finally decided on one Mr. Taylor talked to the owner and helped work out terms that I could meet."

A reporter for the Knoxville News-Sentinel recalled Congressman Taylor's persistence in finding a job for a friend. The future reporter was then attending George Washington University in Washington, D. C. and stopped by Taylor's office and wondered if the congressman could help him find a part-time work. J. Will Taylor put the young man in his car and the reporter recalled they "sailed from one private office building to another." Eventually, Taylor helped his young friend get a job with Southern Railway that the reporter remembered helped to pay for much of his college education. Nor did Congressman Taylor leave it at that; if Taylor hadn't seen his young friend often enough, he would telephone the young man to inquire if he was all right and doing well.

The local manager for the Knoxville Chamber of Commerce, Fred Roberts, fondly recalled his late friend J. Will Taylor. Having known Taylor before he was first elected to Congress, the two had long exchanged "Dear Bill" and "Dear Fred" letters. Roberts remembered when he took to tell. "I was discharged a delegation of Knoxvillians down the hall to his door, from the regular army in to Washington, although he he was breathing awfully made himself acquainted. Chandler, which was next bereavement," Miss Taylor the Philippines many years acknowledged they held rapidly, more so than "He greeted everybody door to that of J. Will Taylor. said in a statement, which ago for heart trouble and little hope for successfully usual," Griffin remembered. the same - - - Democrat or There was no indication she telephoned to the pushing their own particular project, which even Roberts J. Will Taylor was only described as "a pretty fifty-nine years old when forlorn hope." Roberts said the delegation had not been successful in their efforts when they ran into Congressman Taylor, who promptly asked, "What the same condition he are you hill-billies doing up left it; much of Taylor's here?"

Congressman J. Will Taylor.

came in jolly as ever." The Congressman arrived with "a pile of baggage" Beeler recalled "and we got a man to help him upstairs with it." Beeler said Taylor appeared to be in good health and noted the congressman "didn't complain any."

Yet Lieutenant I. F. Griffin of the Navy Recruiting office had a different opinion. Seeing Congressman Taylor that same day, he thought "Hillbilly Bill" looked ill. "When Mr. Taylor came Ill or in the best of health, a morning. Restaurateur Frank Weaver remembered the congressman coming into his restaurant, usually accompanied by three or four others, for supper. "He often liked a steak then, and he was especially fond of frog legs," Weaver said. Weaver had been impressed by J. Will Taylor's friendliness, recalling the congressman usually knew most everyone in the restaurant, but if he saw a stranger, "Hillbilly Bill"

country ham and eggs" of for J. Will Taylor for twentyone years. It seems hardly possible neither the congressman's widow or daughters would not be well acquainted with Miss Schultz. Even more odd was Elizabeth Taylor's demand that a Capitol policeman stand guard outside the door of her father's Washington office. As curious reporters and photographers began to gather, Miss Taylor retreated to the office of Congressman Walter by Elizabeth Taylor as to just when Miss Schultz could enter the office. as it was customary for a congressional secretary be allowed twenty days to begin gathering up the deceased incumbents papers before being assigned to a temporary office. Prime office space was reserved for living congressmen. Congress had also included in its rules that the staff of a congressman who either died in office or resigned was to be carried on the payroll at full salary for six months or until a successor was duly elected. The staff was to be supervised by the Clerk of the House. Congressman J. Will Taylor had a staff of two and divided his staff between Washington and his Knoxville office. Miss Schultz was Taylor's secretary in Washington, D. C. while Robert Davis held the same duties in the Knoxville office. Each congressman was given an allowance of $416.66 per month, which he or she could divide between employees as he or she wished; the only stipulation was no assistant could be paid more than $325 monthly. Dorothy Schultz had been paid $321.66 per month, while Robert Davis earned $95 monthly. It was not an unusual practice at the time for congressman to pay the secretary the lion's share of the allowance and paying the clerk far less.

Taylor's younger daughter, Katherine, was engaged in the far more pleasant pastime of thanking Tennesseans for their condolences on the death of her father. "We wish to express our sincere appreciation to our friends for the many expressions of sympathy and acts of kindness shown us during our recent News-Sentinel. Elizabeth Taylor's attempts to get into her father's Washington office were finally successful and the officer standing guard was allowed to do something more productive. Moutoux, the John Knoxville News-Sentinel's Washington correspondent, reported Miss Taylor and a friend from the late congressman's home city of LaFollette, Mrs. R. J. Buckman, were busily boxing up papers "of a private nature" to take home to Tennessee. Dorothy Schultz sorted through the remaining papers, which were to be removed to an office on the fifth floor of the House Office Building.

Once the delegation informed Taylor of their mission, he simply said, "Come on."

Roberts marveled, "Closed doors didn't mean anything to Bill. He went on in and around the secretaries until he got the delegation to the man they wanted to see. The results weren't 100% successful, but they were a lot better than anybody expected before Bill took charge of the delegation."

Fred Roberts also related how he had asked Congressman Taylor to testify before the Civil Aeronautics Authority on behalf of Knoxville getting additional airlines. "No letters got prompter answers than those to Bill Taylor and it's the same with Senator McKellar," Roberts said.

Taylor's sudden passing was all the more shocking as he had been in his Knoxville office in the Federal Building the day he died. Assistant Postmaster E. O. Beeler said, "He he died. Taylor left his widow and two daughters, Elizabeth and Katherine. The Congressman's office in Knoxville remained in baggage was scattered about his personal office. A typewriter remained partially unpacked on the congressman's desk. Unopened letters were strewn around his personal office, along with the clothes J. Will Taylor brought back from the special session of Congress. Taylor had friends everywhere, high and low. Friends from two of his favorite destinations in Knoxville, the Farragut Hotel and Weaver's Restaurant, were especially fond of "Hillbilly Bill." Alton Cureton, the Bell Captain at the Farragut Hotel said "us boys as much as anybody" would miss the congressman. "It was a pleasure to serve Mr. Taylor," Cureton said. "He knew the boys by name and he shook hands with us just as quick as anybody. He was an all-year man too - - - not only just before election time." Taylor, "a big fellow", liked his food and enjoyed "a big country breakfast" each morning. Congressman Taylor usually dined on "fruit, cereal, Republican, white or black," Frank Weaver said.

Shortly after Congressman J. Will Taylor's death, a mystery developed over his office. Taylor's daughter Elizabeth hired an attorney and was anxious to be admitted to her late father's Washington office "without being observed by a large group of reporters, photographers and curiosity-seekers" who had foiled one previous attempt. The regulations surrounding the office of a member who had died were quite clear; the office was to remain open and was to be run by the congressman or senator's secretary or Chief of Staff. In the case of Congressman J. Will Taylor, his chief secretary was Miss Dorothy Schultz. Elizabeth Taylor made it quite clear she wanted to go through her late father's office and personal effects "alone." Miss Schultz, described by a Knoxville News-Sentinel reporter as "an attractive red-haired woman", had been Taylor's secretary for twenty-one years. When asked whether or not Miss Schultz would be allowed entry into the dead congressman's office, Miss Taylor's attorney snapped, "We don't know anything about Miss Schultz or her affairs." It was a mighty peculiar reply involving a woman who had worked

The mystery would only grow deeper.

Well, the day finally arrived. I gave in and purchased another vehicle. Doing so was a difficult decision because I struggle with the idea of having to make a car payment.

However, times arrive in life when taken.

I bought a "new old car." Ever loyal to Nissan, I chose a 2011 Pathfinder. It has plenty of miles from the previous owner, but otherwise, the vehicle is in good shape for a car so old. Amy and I don't buy new cars for several reasons. One is that we can't afford new cars, nor can I justify paying more for a car than I did my first house. (Yep, I'm old.) The second reason is that new cars lose so much value the moment they leave the lot. Many times, a used car has been drive

If I fail to get one car I like, I don't fret much anymore because another one will come around before long. I'll sell my 2012 Sentra The third reason at some point. It only has for buying the 56,000 miles on it, and the car is perfect first vehicle for a teenager or a second car for a family. I will keep my other car. My 1987 Nissan Pathfinder stays parked under the carport. It's one vehicle we bought new, and we added a back seat, radio, and air conditioner at later times because it was cheaper to do so. Over the last 31 years, my old Pathfinder has traveled to hundreds of baseball games and has pulled a trailer filled with mulch, flooring, and building materials. The inside shows the wear of so many trips and years. The arm rests are split, and the dash is now covered with a material to hide the deep crevices in the vinyl. Charlie Muncey, our hero mechanic, worked

The air conditioner and radio no longer function, and sometimes the engine runs too rich.

Even though that old car has more than its share of problems, I can't let it go. In fact, my son just a couple of weeks ago implored me not to sell the old Pathfinder because it is so much a part of the family.

I'll enjoy driving an updated Pathfinder that has plenty of bells and whistles and three rows of seats. The worries of arriving on trips out of town won't linger as they did when I drove the old car. Still, I'll take my favorite vehicle when I need a load of mulch or want to haul a load of materials. We have too much history to just part ways so quickly. Wave at me if you see me in either of my Pathfinders. I'll be the guy driving down the road with a smile on his face.

Taking the Ocoee Loop

A Day Away

By Mike Steely

Looking for an afternoon drive? How about heading south along what was once the Old Federal Road? The route was first developed in a treaty in 1805 and improved in 1819 as a toll road. Today we know the basic route as Highway 411.

The highway skirts the foothills of the lower Smoky Mountains and extends all the way to the first town drive will take you through and past some very interesting smaller cities, historic sites, and beautiful valley scenery. You can make a loop of the drive by taking a westward turn in Ocoee, Tennessee, driving over to Cleveland and then back to Knox County by way of I-75 or up Highway Eleven.

and prehistoric Overhill Cherokee Towns. You may want to make a side trip there and visit Fort Loudoun State Park and the Sequoyah Birthplace Museum. The huge September celebration at Sequoyah Museum is September 8th and 9th.

Back on Highway 411 heading south you'll pass through Madisonville, the county seat of Monroe County and home of Hiwassee College and the late statesman Estes Kefauver. There's a very interesting court house there that, in recent years, wrestled with posting the Ten Commandments.

Today Madisonville's fame is probably more related to Emi Sunshine, the singing sensation.

South of Madisonville in Georgia, aptly named you'll encounter Englewood, a noted little town has most was the Beloved Woman "Tennga." But if you continue heading south on 411 you'll soon come to Benton, Tn., you probably would not expect: a pre-civil war fort. Fort Marr, or at least one part of the original structure, was actually built in "Old Fort" further south of Benton. It was one of 23 South of Etowah stockade forts that imprisoned Cherokee families prior to the Trail of Tears. Years later one corner of the fort's towers was moved to Benton. Just beyond downtown you may want to take Old Highway 411 to visit the Nancy Ward Grave. Ward buried along with family members atop a hill along the old road. Back on Highway 411 you'll come to Ocoee, a little crossroads community. To the east along Highway 74 may be the "whitewater capitol" of Tennessee as rafting trips form there.

Cal Johnson was vital to the creation of the National Cemetery in Knoxville. He obtained the bid to move buried bodies from Cumberland Cap and other places to be reburied in the cemetery that had been created by Union General Ambrose Burnside.

What's the connection between Cal Johnson and the National Cemetery?

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

Born a slave of the McClung family who became а wealthy Knoxville merchant and entrepreneur, Cal Johnson has a direct connection with Knoxville's National Cemetery.

When General Ambrose Burnside's forces captured Knoxville in 1863 the Union Commander ordered the creation of a burial ground. Across the region were various impromptu graves of Union Soldiers either killed in battle or falling to diseases like measles and dysentery. Burnside wanted to relocate those fallen soldiers to a central burial ground for the casualties of Fort Sanders and the Siege of Knoxville.

As a young man who was always looking for opportunity Johnson stepped up.

Capt. E.B. Chamberlain, the assistant quartermaster, was assigned to design the national cemetery at Knoxville. The first interments were remains exhumed from Cumberland Gap, Concord and many other regional sites. Chamberlain's design and system for recording interments was so effective that, in 1866, Gen. E.G. Whitman, observed that the cemetery had been "the only burial ground of skirmishes including a notable one in Tazewell, just to the south of the fortifications at the gap.

In late 1867, National Cemetery received scores of Union bodies from Cumberland Gap, which had been a battlefield off and on throughout the war. The government paid a bounty for each body delivered to the National Cemetery. Hauling corpses that were a few months or years old, for miles over dirt roads, was a job that likely appealed only to the desperate, or the very ambitious.

Johnson was about 21 at the time and participated in the program, according to a story published repeatedly since 1887, earning the capital to begin a significant business career. Within twenty years of his emancipation, Johnson became leading businessman in Knoxville. Despite the obvious problems of a black man in the South during the 1860s, Johnson became the owner of a chain of saloons serving both the black and white parts of town, became involved in horse racing and real estate, and even became a philanthropist, donating funds to improve the city park that bore his name.

Established in 1863, Union soldiers...original- the cemetery currently encompasses 9.8 acres (4.0 ha), and as of the end of 2007, had 9,006 interments. The 60-foot (18 m) Union Soldier monument, which stands in the eastern corner of the cemetery, is one of the largest Union monuments in the South. In 1996, the cemetery was added to the National Register of Historic Places as part of a multiple properties submission for national cemeteries.

Fulton grinds out tough win vs. Central

By David Klein

In a physical battle of defenses, Fulton's was slightly better Thursday night in the "Battle of Broadway" at Central High School. Fulton's DaShaun McKinney intercepted a tipped pass and returned it 81 yards for a touchdown and a two score lead late in the third quarter. The interception situations there," Fulton Head Coach Rob sparked the Falcons to a 18-9 win over Black said. "We weren't necessarily blockthe Bobcats.

"It was a high ball," McKinney said. "Linebacker came out and hit the receiver and tipped in my hand, and I caught it, spinned out, took off."

Fulton had just seven yards rushing and 51 total yards. Central had 16 total yards. Indeed, the only score of the first half came on a 27-yard field goal by Bobcats' kicker Jarred Swislosky.

"In the first half, we blew a lot of scheme ing who we were supposed to block the way we were supposed to block," Fulton Head Coach Rob Black said. "We regrouped a little bit. We did what we planned on coming here to do and we were able to do Both offenses struggled in the first half. that a little bit in the second half and put a few drives together."

> Before McKinney's interception, Fulton had squandered good field position in the first half. The Falcons made it inside Bobcats' territory five times in the first half but came away with no points.

> "You know they got a lot of guys everywhere," Central Head Coach Bryson Rosser said of Fulton's talent. "We just put our kids in a great position. And they made plays time and time again. I'm extremely ecstatic about the progression of our team."

Bearden Invitational set for Labor Day Weekend

August 27, 2018

section

By Ken Lay

Some of the state's elite high school girls soccer teams will spend Labor Day Weekend in Knoxville at the Bearden Invitational.

The four-day event opens on Thursday, Aug. 30 and matches will be played at both Turner-Allender Field, and Bill Young Field, home of the Bulldogs football team.

The host Lady Bulldogs will compete, along with defending District 4-AAA and Region 2-AAA Champion Farragut. District 4-AA Champion Catholic will spend the weekend at Bearden. District 3-AAA Champion Powell will also appear in the tournament.

Opening night games at Turner-Allender have Powell playing Catholic at 5 p.m. and Bearden entertaining Giles County. Games at Bill Young Field will feature West tangling with Oak Ridge at 5 and Farragut tangling with Grace Christian Academy at 7.

The tournament kicks into high gear Friday with action beginning at 4:30 p.m. Catholic will take on Giles County on the football field and Giles County will play the Lady Panthers at the Radcliffe-Kelly Soccer Complex and Turner-Allender Field.

At 6 p.m., The Lady Admirals take on Notre Dame at Bill Young Field while Hardin Valley Academy collides with Collierville at Turner-Allender.

At 7:30: Bartlett plays Greeneville (Young Field) and Bearden will play Houston on its home field.

Clarksville tangles with Baylor (Young) and Maryville takes on Arlington at Turner-Allender at 9 p.m.

On Saturday, action begins at 11 a.m. with Collierville playing West and Oak Ridge tangling with Grace. At 1 p.m., Greeneville plays Maryville and Baylor takes on Catholic. At 3 p.m., Clarksville tangles with Hardin Valley and Arlington collides with Farragut.

Cooper takes reins of TSD football program

By Steve Williams

Tennessee School for the Deaf has a new head football coach.

Jordan Cooper will take the reins for the Vikings, who will resume playing football this fall after taking the 2017 campaign off due to a shortage of players.

"Jordan Cooper is the new head coach and we have hired Keith Swaney as assistant coach," confirmed TSD Athletic Director Luke Benson last week.

"Jordan has been with the program for a number of years as a volunteer and coach. He has been the assistant coach the last five years.

"Jordan is also our boys' strength and conditioning coach and boys' track and field head coach. He is a tremendous asset for our Athletics Department.

"Keith has played and coached football and wrestling in Seymour and Pigeon Forge for most of his life. We are fortunate to have him join our staff."

TSD plays eight-man football and its 2018 season opener is scheduled for Week 4 (Sept. 6) at South Carolina School for the Deaf & Blind in Spartanburg, S.C. Barry Swafford was TSD's head football coach in 2016.

"Barry is still coaching basketball," said Benson. "He is looking forward to competing for a Mason Dixon championship with a young but talented group."

In other news regarding TSD athletics, Benson said the school has added Ashley Allis as an assistant volleyball coach.

"She brings playing and coaching experience in a few sports to our program," said Benson. "She has been a teacher here at TSD for several years. We are excited to have her on board."

at 5 p.m. Bearden will host Hendersonville and Bartlett will take Giles County at 7.

Action concludes on Sunday, Sept.2 with Maryville playing Houston at 8:30 a.m. Strongsville tangles with Clarksville at 10:30.

At noon, Oak Ridge takes on Bartlett and Hardin Valley entertains Arlington.

Lady Beavers soccer team off to 4-0 start

By Ken Lay

Karns High School's girls soccer team is off to a blazing start in 2018. The Lady Beavers are undefeated out of the gate and firstyear coach Jeff Monckton couldn't be happier.

But it's not his squad's perfect record that has Monckton pleased thus far. Nor is it Karns High's scoring margin. The Lady Beavers have outscored its four opponents (Lenoir City, Polk County, Rockwood and Morristown East) 31-3 in four lopsided victories.

It's the squad's collective attitude.

"I didn't have to say anything. The girls did it themselves," Monckton said after the Lady Beavers routed the Lady Hurricanes 9-0 Thursday night at home. They know that they haven't really played anybody yet. No disrespect to those teams. They have good programs, but we haven't seen the best teams on our schedule. Lenoir City and Morristown East are probably the two best teams that we've faced and we've Catlett, who also happens gotten better in every game to be one of the area's top but we haven't played anybody yet.

"Lenoir City scored first against us but after that, we've flexed our muscle," Monckton said. "We need to come out and flex our muscle [against Campbell County]. That's our first district game and we didn't beat them last year during the regular season."

The Lady Cougars edged the Lady Beavers 3-2 last year during the regular season. Karns got a 4-1 win over Campbell County in the 2017 District 3-AAA Tournament.

The match against the Lady Cougars opens a big week for Karns, which travels to Webb School of Knoxville Thursday for a tough road match.

"I'm looking forward to playing Webb," said Monckton, who previously coached at The King's Academy, which is one of the Lady Spartans' Division II-A East District 1 rivals. "I have great respect for [Webb coach] Sonny [Trotter] and his team."

At Webb, the Lady Beavers will see one of the county's top players in forward Avery scorers.

Young Lady Bobcats sweep South-Doyle in volleyball

By Ken Lay

Central High School volleyball coach Lorri Johnson couldn't hide her excitement after watching her Lady Bobcats sweep South-Doyle Tuesday night.

"We've got a good thing going here," Johnson said after Central dispatched the Lady Cherokees 25-14, 25-13, 25-21 in a non-district match Tuesday night in Fountain City. "The biggest thing about volleyball is that you have to have consistency. We had good serving and good passing."

Johnson took over as the Lady Bobcats' coach in 2017 and she watched as a young team struggled at times. In 2018, Central (2-4) is still young but the Lady Bobcats are quickly emerging as one of the area's most improved teams out of the gate this season.

"We had good serving and good passing tonight and those things enabled us to make good plays," said Johnson, who previously coached both volleyball and tennis at Soddy-Daisy High School. "Last year, we would make a great play and then we would make a good play.

"But we were inconsistent."

The Lady Bobcats jumped to an 11-3 advantage in the opening set when Megan Merritt served up an ace. South-Doyle would battle its way back into the game and pull to within 13-10 thanks to a key service run by junior Katie Green. Farragut upends McMinn County 47-7

By Alex Norman

If the first two weeks of the season are any indication, Farragut will be a force to be reckoned with in 2018. On Friday, August 24, the Admirals kept the good times rolling by dominating visiting McMinn County 47-7 at Bill Clabo Field.

"We had a great week of practice and cleaned up some things from week one," said Farragut head coach Eddie Courtney. "We were very balanced tonight and that's something we have to be all year long."

In that first game Courtney alluded to, the Admirals shut out Bradley Central 34-0, giving them an 81-7 advantage in the aggregate so far this season.

At the start of the second quarter, the Admirals faced a fourth down and 2 from the Cherokees 20. Instead of another field goal attempt, Courtney chose to go for it, and the gamble paid off when quarterback Gavin Wilkinson found tight end Alex Keathley for a five-yard gain. On the very next play, senior Kyle Carter ran it in from 15 yards away, giving the Gibbs scored on a six-yard touchdown run. The combo of Carter On their next drive, Isaiah and Gibbs racked up close to 175 vards rushing against McMinn County. Carter himself had 127 rushing yards with Gibbs adding 44.

"They've both done a good job," said Courtney. "They complement each other, they block for each other... and at the same time when they are in a one back set they both offer different things."

Under center the Admirals not only had Wilkinson making plays, but senior Jake Evans saw snaps as well. Evans returns kicks and plays in the secondary too. Evans threw a couple of touchdown passes to Keathley.

Farragut led 27-7 at the half and turned things up another notch with 20 points in the third quarter. Eventually their lead ballooned to 40 points, allowing the mercy rule to go into effect, which meant a running clock throughout the fourth quarter.

With the exception of one long touchdown pass in the second quarter, the Admirals defense might have posted a second straight blanking. "We've made a lot of improvement and that is something that we stressed all fall camp," Courtney said of his defense. "We're playing a lot of kids right now. That's something that we hope pays off for us."

Courtney's special teams also had a big night. Daniel Bethel's 41-yard field goal in the second quarter was a career long. Punt and kick returns set the Admirals up with shorter fields all evening long. And thanks to the play of the offense, they only punted once, and that didn't come until the final minute of the contest.

Things will get tougher from here, as the Admirals open Region play on Friday night at Morristown West.

"There's still little things we gotta clean up," said Courtney. "It's about execution, playing smart, not taking too many penalties... the biggest thing is just getting better at the fundamentals and that's what we are gonna stress all week long."

Hawks pull out win over West with 0:00 on clock

By Steve Williams

The "Talons and Swords" traveling trophy, which goes to the winner of the game between Hardin Valley Academy and West, has finally made it to the HVA campus.

It may even be on Sallee Reynolds' desk. The HVA principal, who was a longtime teacher at West High, is a key figure in why this rivalry started.

The Hawks beat the Rebels 15-12 for the first time ever in dramatic fashion Friday night at Bill Wilson Field. With no time left on the clock, senior Josiah Lambert kicked a 36-yard field goal for the winning margin.

Just a few moments earlier, West misfired on a potential go-ahead PAT kick with 29.7 seconds left after tying the score 12-12 with a whirlwind finish.

The game will go down as an instant prep football classic.

"Man alive, what a great football game," said Hardin Valley Head Coach Wes Jones. "It couldn't have been more exciting."

Lambert was carried off the field on the shoulders of teammates Loch Hardin and Sam Simpson.

"I felt great after getting carried off the field and all, but honestly, it wasn't my leg that pulled through," said Lambert. "I think God guided my leg through with threw a clutch 28-yard pass the ball for the field goal and it's 100 percent God that did everything."

Lambert was given the chance to redeem himself, after missing wide right on a 37-yard attempt from just about the same area on the field with 8:15 to go.

That miss kept West, trailing 12-6, in striking distance down the stretch.

On fourth-and-four at the HVA 36-yard line with 42 seconds to go, Rebels quarterback Jawaun Moore to Jackson Snodgrass for a first down at the 8. On the next play, Moore threw a dart over the middle to Will Eggleston for the tying touchdown.

Marcel Wilder's potential go-ahead extra point kick got only about two feet off the ground. West Coach Lamar Brown would later say in the dressing room that the ball may never have gotten on the kicking tee.

That would be the last of many offensive frustrations the Rebels experienced in the contest. But Coach Brown was proud with how his team kept battling.

It looked as though the game would go into overtime, but Kelton Gunn's long kickoff return down the left sideline in front of the Hawks' bench put the ball at the West 36 with 18.5 seconds remaining.

Quarterback Grayson Vaughn gained seven yards on a keeper. His second down pass over the middle was incomplete and his third down pass in the end zone dropped incomplete as the final seconds ticked off the clock.

But West was called for holding on the play and by rule; a game cannot end on an accepted penalty. The 10-yard penalty moved the ball to the 19 and provided Lambert his opportunity to win it on an untimed down.

Hardin Valley took a 6-0 lead in the first quarter on Vaughn's 8-yard TD pass to Cartez Campbell. The Hawks increased their lead to 12-0 in the second guarter on a 37-yard reverse pass from Luke Defur to Noah Moro.

It just so happen to be Moro's 18th birthday.

"Hey, for my birthday, I'm going to be honest," said Noah. "I just wanted to win, especially against West. We kind of always beat ourselves in those games. That touchdown was just icing on the cake."

Or birthday cake.

"Exactly," concurred Moro, who also had an interception early in the game.

The Rebels cut Hardin Valley's lead to 12-6 in the second quarter on Moore's 11-yard touchdown pass to Grant Tierney.

Jaylen Moore was among defensive standouts for the Hawks. He had a fumble recovery prior to his team's second TD and multiple tackles for loss.

Defur had an interception and Cameron York recovered a fumble for the Hawks' defense.

Tre Everson had an interception for West and Tyrece Edwards pounced on a fumble in the end zone to stop a HVA threat in the second quarter.

Hardin Valley (1-1) will be at home against Heritage Friday night, while West (0-2) seeks its first win of the season at Karns.

The Journey

I came to be where I am. Ever the pragmatist, my wife Becky says, "Well, you have to be somewhere." I guess that's true on this "mortal coil." But more importantly, I'm where I'm supposed to be.

Many of my friends are now traveling the world. Some are on safari in Africa. Some are tossing coins into Rome's Trevi Fountain and others are taking cooking classes in Morocco or on cruise ships circling the tip of South America. I once had a wanderlust, but it left me.

I am glad that for five decades I traveled the world. With travel you experience other cultures and perspectives - and other foods. In France you need to be careful with a restaurant menu because a single letter change can summon an unexpected dish. The "meatballs" I thought I had Sometimes I wonder how requested in France were obviously not from Chef Boyardee.

> I remember a scene in the movie The Way We Were where the friends sat around recalling their best experiences. I recall walking across the Ponte Vecchio one hot day in Florence, Italy and discovering gelato. This Italian ice cream remains my standard of a "ten" by which all other ice creams are measured.

Europe, more than a dozen childlike laughter coming trips across Central America and the Caribbean, as well as adventures in the Adriatic, Australia and New Zealand, I've seen many beautiful and exotic places like Tazmania, Iceland and Andora. However, America's vistas are second to none and Becky's crème brulée is superior to anything in Paris.

wanderlust has dissipated is the view from my porch is unparalleled. Watching my grandkids come up our driveway for a Southern "visit" with JD (JimDad) and BeBe assures me my journey has brought me to where I'm supposed to be. Edna St. Vincent Millay perhaps best expresses my travel perspective in her poem:

"How shall I know, unless l go

To Cairo and Cathay, Whether or not this blessed spot

Is blest in every way? Now it may be, the flower for me

Is beneath my nose;

How shall I tell, unless I smell

The Carthaginian rose?"

I've seen the ruins of ancient Carthage where Hannibal once stood. And though Tunisia is exotic and romanticized by Millay, In a dozen trips to nothing compares with up my driveway.

Traveling exposes you to the risk of foodborne illnesses, such as "tourista" in Mexico. Interestingly, travelers from south of the border can develop similar gastrointestinal (GI) illness in America when they are exposed to our indigenous bacterial flora. Be careful what you eat, especially Perhaps the reason my when traveling. I learned

are cruise ship GI infections. Infectious entities like the norovirus can wreak havoc on a ship where thousands of people are gathered in close contact. If you take a cruise, my advice is, never pass a hand sanitizer without using it.

The French have a saying you are what you eat. I say, you need to be careful whatever and wherever you eat. My wife Becky is a fan of steak tartare, a dish made with raw ground beef mixed with onions and spices. If you were assured the dish was made from ground tenderloin instead of more superficial cuts as used in hamburger, the risk might be less. However, since I can't be sure, this dish if off limits to my wife.

Becky also loves oysters on the half shell. After I encountered a bad oyster in a prominent Knoxville restaurant, I'm very wary of such delicacies, but occasionally I will roll the dice for special occasions, taking some reassurance from my previous hepatitis A vaccination. Ordinarily, I eschew raw seafood, adhering to the Tom Selleck sushi philosophy as depicted in the movie Mr. Baseball. He proclaimed don't eat bait!"

It is probably safer to Especially problematic eat at home because you prepare your own food. The recurrent food illnesses associated with Chipotle come to mind. However, if you follow the advice of charlatans and drink raw unpasteurized milk at home, you go in harm's way as well. It's tragic that parents recently ignored hundreds of years of science and gave raw milk to their children with terrible consequences.

> As a class, bacteria are perhaps the oldest life forms on earth. Humans are of more recent design. We share the world with microorganisms and, in fact, have a symbiotic relationship with the bacteria which live in our guts. The observation that destroying these bacteria causes ill health led to the recognition that the biome of our gastrointestinal tract promotes health and a vigorous immune system.

I've recently written about generic medications, mentioning the standards of the FDA (Food and Drug Administration). This federal agency began as the Food Administration during Teddy Roosevelt's administration. Though TR considered the socialist Upton Sinclair "dishonest" and a "crackpot," Sinclair's 1906 novel The Jungle, describing the terrible conditions of Chicago's slaughterhouses, led to investigations and ultimately the establishment of the Food Administration which later became the FDA (Food and Drug Administration).

With brand name and generic drugs I have to trust the FDA. I also trust the police to protect me locally and the military to protect the country. I am far more skeptical of the upper echelons of the FBI, the CIA, the IRS and the Justice Department. And my trust of politicians and Congress is just barely greater than that of the media which has lost virtually all credibility.

I do trust my Master and my wife with my life. And like expanding concentric circles from a pebble cast in a pond, I trust family, friends, fellow parishioners and neighbors. Jesus was once asked for his definition of a neighbor and he responded with the parable of The Good Samaritan (Luke 10:25-37).

Perhaps if I were a better man or a better disciple, my view of the world would be less skeptical. I'm working on it, just like the Master continues to work on my heart and mind and soul in this journey called life.

Grace who has a few food allergies requires grain-free а diet-we make the best food choices we can with consultation of our veterinarian.

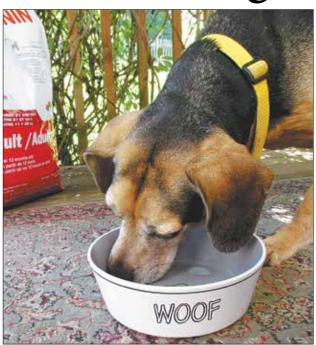

Choosing the right food for your dog can be overwhelming and confusing and now with the alert to "grain-free" diets it is becoming more complex. Seemingly, we have a never ending list of products and foods to choose from. Often, we are inundated with clever and conflicting advertising campaigns that make choosing the best food for our dogs even more challenging. If you are like me, I struggle with every scoop of food I serve Hobo and wonder whether I am feeding him the best food possible.

Raw, freeze dried, "grainfree," canned, vegetarian, or all organic? These are only a few choices to consider when choosing the right food for your dog.

First decide on a ٠ budget for dog food and considering with the FDA's recalls and withdrawals list by visiting their website: www.fda.gov/animalveterinary/safetyhealth/recallswithdrawals this will give you an idea of the companies safety record.

Customer service and knowledgeable staff. Call the company's customer service department and ask questions about their products. Cost is an important consideration so you are comparing products within your budget. I am not advocating price alone as the deciding factor. Use a budget as a tool to help weed through some of the confusion. You can now sort products made in the United States with quality ingredients grown and Continue on page 3 lentils, and other legume seeds, or potatoes as the main ingredients. These reports are unusual because DCM is occurring in breeds not typically genetically prone to disease. These reports should not cause panic but, Hobo the Wonder Dog and I advise caution and encourage you to discuss your pet's diet with your veterinarian. Obviously, as with Hobo's side kick use this as your starting point. Knowing your budget will help narrow your search.

Search companies who provide products grown and manufactured in the United States.

High-quality protein should be the first ingredient. Avoid products containing corn, wheat, and soy.

August 27, 2018 Are Grain-Free Diets Right for Your Dog?

raised here at home. Discuss with your veterinarian which high-quality protein and if "grain-free" is right for your dog. Cross-referencing the FDA's database of recalls will give you an idea of a company's record. Last, and it might seem odd-but, I want to speak with a company's customer service department. This allows me to see if a company's call center is knowledgeable about their products and if their employees are proud to work for the company. I want representatives to be as excited about their products as Hobo is to eat it.

I continue to debate the ongoingevery changing dilemma of choosing the right food for my dogs. Sometimes I think we pick foods and diets for our pet based on what we think is best for us forgetting our dogs are not human. I have to stay cognitive to Hobo the Wonder Dog having different nutritional needs than his human cohabitants.

Maybe I will cook for Hobo the Wonder Dog in the future, but until then I will stay well informed, well-intended, and keep making Hobo one lucky dog. Remember, love is the most important ingredient.

NORRIS-Women on the Water, a free special event for women who want to learn fly fishing, will be Saturday, Sept. 22, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., hosted by the Clinch River Chapter of Trout Unlimited.

The event, scheduled in connection with the week-long celebration of National Public Lands Day, will be at Miller Island Public Access Area on the Clinch.

Participants will receive instruction in fly casting, knot tying, entomology, fly tying and water safety; from noon to 3 p.m., women will wade the river and fish with volunteer guides. It's all free, lunch will be included and fishing equipment will be available for students who don't have their own.

Enrollment is limited and pre-registration is required to ensure plentiful supplies of food and gear-to sign up, contact Joy Goodwin, joylgood@gmail.com or (865) 274-1313. Each participant must have a fishing license that includes trout; for information, visit https:// www.tn.gov/twra/. Note: For a single day, the "all species" license is the best value, at $11.50.

The Clinch River Chapter's mission is to conserve and enhance the Clinch River tailwater trout fishery and its watershed, through conservation projects and through education of children and adults in aquatic natural resources.

PAGE D4 The Knoxville FOCUS HOMETOWN HEROES HONORED

The Strawberry Plains Chapter of Modern Woodmen of America recently honored E. Luke and Josephine Green as local hometown heroes for their roles in renovating Parrott-Wood Memorial Library. Mr. and Mrs. Green have given back to the community for many years. MWA's Hometown Hero Award provides local community members an opportunity to honor individuals for their outstanding service to the community. They were presented with a certificate by local MWA representative Richard Hall. The certificate states "You believe in volunteer service, and so do we! As a fraternal financial services organization dedicated to improving the quality of life for families and communities, we recognize your accomplishments and appreciate your contribution to your community. You're truly a hometown hero!" In their honor, MWA will donate $100 to a charity of their choice. They have chosen the Friends of Parrott-Wood Memorial Library to receive this donation.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

6th Thunder Road Author Rally to be held September 8

Maynardville Public Library is hosting their 6th author event, the Thunder Road Author Rally, on Saturday, September 8, 2018 from 9 a.m. - 1 p.m. The library's address is 296 Main St, Maynardville, TN, 37807 and the phone number is 865-992-7106.

This is a chance for East Tennessee authors to get out and promote their books and meet their readers. The library does not charge the author to take part as this is a free event for both the authors and the readers. Authors are encouraged to bring books to sell to the public. For more information and a list of the participating authors, please visit www. maynardvillepubliclibrary. org/our-authors.

August 27, 2018 Faith for the Journey

By Mark calling Brackney, in Minister of the lives, the Arlington Church timing, of Christ and how we get there is not always in a nice and tidy package; the direction is less clear. We need to pay careful attention at each step of the journey and look for signs along the way. We will notice this over and over in Paul's journeys. Paul trusted the Holy Spirit to lead him and we need to do the same.

We find the Holy Spirit speaking to the believers in worship to commission Paul and Barnabas to take the gospel to the world (Acts 13:2-3). It was now more than a decade since Paul first got his calling from God on the road to Damascus (Acts 9:15). But Paul had to listen and wait for God's actual commission to go. When I preach, I hope and pray God speaks through me to those listening. I think it would always be good to have pen and paper in hand whenever you worship so you could write down something that pierces your heart, thoughts that are placed in your mind, or some way you should live differently. The Spirit works through our thoughts as we worship. It is often in listening to the sermons of others that I continue to hear God's call on my life.

Today, there are many who no longer worship. They think they can get what they need in private study, in individual ready to go.

I like to know where I am spiritual disciplines, or in going and prefer the shortest conversations with others outside of a worship setdirect ting. Some say they are not inspired by the preaching, or the singing is not what they like. This was not the approach the early church took.

How awesome do you think the music ministry of the Antioch church was? There was no stage, no microphones, no instruments, no four-part harmony, no PowerPoint, no song books, no praise band or praise team with powerful worship leaders. They didn't even always have great preaching. Listen to what others said about Paul's preaching: "His letters are severe and powerful, but in person he is weak and his speech is worth nothing" (2 Cor. 10:10). Despite Paul's unimpressive preaching and the simple singing of "psalms and hymns and spiritual songs" (Eph. 5:19), God's Spirit spoke when they gathered for worship. The Spirit of God is able to show up in a large gathering of inspiring worship, or in a small gathering "where two or three are gathered" in Christ's name (Matthew 18:20). So, whenever we worship, we want to engage both the mind and heart and prepare ourselves to hear the Spirit speak despite how good the singing or preaching might be.

Not only was the church in Antioch worshipping, they were also fasting. And they were not just fasting individually, they were also fasting together. It was through worship and fasting that the Holy Spirit prompted the church to send out Paul to preach the gospel to the Gentile world, and he was
