Janice Cook named 2018 Simon Youth Foundation Administrator of the Year

By Anne Primm

School board Chairwoman Terry Hill called the December 12, 2018 Knox County Board of Education meeting to order at 5:00 p.m. sharp. All nine school board members were present as were Representative Roger Kane and City Councilman Randy Smith.

Hill began with a few announcements: The Policy Review Committee Meeting originally scheduled for December 19, 2018 will be re-scheduled to a January date due to scheduling difficulties this time of year. The Joint Education Committee will meet December 19, 2018 at 4:00 p.m. in the Andrew Johnson Building boardroom. Knox County Schools will be closed from December 24, 2018 until January 4, 2019. Central office will be closed December 24-26, 2018.

At this time Hill turned the meeting over to the superintendent, Bob Thomas, for special recognition of one of Knox County's principals. Superintendent Thomas announced that Janice Cook has been chosen as the 2018 Simon Youth Foundation Administrator of the Year Cook is the Executive Principal of the Dr. Paul L. Kelley Volunteer Academy at Lincoln Park. Cook was nominated by her peers for her vision of excellence, compassion as an educator, and her instructional expertise. When she became executive principal two vears ago, Janice took immediate and creative action to improve and grow the alternative education program at the school. She implemented several new and different strategies to encourage students and ensure that they felt supported as they pursued graduation. Each student was assigned an adult advocate to help keep him or her on track until graduation day. Cook also initiated a policy for students

MPC denies closure of Lecil Road

By Nick Skoda

The Metropolitan Planning Commission (MPC) met at 1:30 p.m. on Thursday, December 13 in the Main Assembly Room at the City-County Building.

It was decided at the meeting that Lecil Road, situated between Asheville Highway and N. Ruggles Ferry Pike, would not be closed down.

The reason the applicant requested closure of the road was that they own both sides of the road and wanted to connect the properties. The staff recommendation was to deny the closure of the road based on the objections from city engineering and city fire department.

There was discussion from proponents for the closing of Lecil Road and opposition.

Attorney John King, representing the applicant requesting the closure, stated that the closing of the road would not have an overwhelming effect on traffic flow.

Opposition, including residents of the area, Deputy Fire Marshall Sonny Partin and city engineering, all agreed that closing the road would in fact negatively affect traffic.

One of the opposition's main points was that Lecil Road is a thoroughfare for not only residents of area subdivisions but also for Sunnyview School traffic. Partin added that in the case of an accident, Lecil Road is a "very good road" for the fire department, EMS, etc. to use.

"I want to address our concerns of what i have researched when this came up in that the first thing I did was get with the stations in the area and all the cabinets were opposed. They all said this was a road they would use," Partin said.

A motion was made by Commissioner Gayle Buston to deny the closure of Lecil Road, seconded by Commissioner Elizabeth Eason and the motion was passed.

There was also discussion of rezoning at this month's MPC meeting. Notably, the rezoning of an historic building in Old North Knoxville. The location is the southside of East Scott Avenue, south of Harvey Street. The zoning of the building was R-1A (Low Density Residential), H-1 (Historic Overlay).

The zoning requested by applicant Laurence Eaton was R-P1 (Planned Residential), H-1.

The building is currently office space which Eaton plans on turning into a ten-unit multi-dwelling.

The staff recommendation was to approve the rezoning from R-1A, H-1 to R-P1, H-1. Opposition claimed that this proposed "aggressive" development "is not consistent with adjacent developments, with the historic density." It is also believed by the opposition that utilizing the building as a high-density living space will burden its infrastructure.

Eaton summed up his efforts to reach out to the community and make sure that all the neighbors' voices were heard.

He also emphasized the preservation aspect of the development.

A neighbor who is a proponent said, "This is the kind of development we should be encouraging. We should be fighting for these sorts of things. To increase density within urban neighborhoods and also reusing our historic building stock creatively." Commissioner Janice Tocher commended Eaton's exhaustive research and community outreach efforts.

Commissioner Art Clancy III made the motion to approve the rezoning, which was seconded by Commissioner Eason and it will go on to City Council next month.

Consideration of an amendment to the Knox County Zoning Ordinance addressing the minimum lot area for hotels and motels was also approved at the MPC meeting.

Consideration of a comprehensive update of the City of Knoxville Zoning Ordinance was postponed 30 days.

The next MPC meeting will be at 1:30 p.m. on January 10 in the Main Assembly Room of the City County Building.

service, shelter and housing programs as a resource for homeless individuals and families is being requested by the Community Development Department.

The council is also being asked to continue a contract with Fred D. (Tony) Thompson, Jr. for an annual $60,000 lobbying effort in Nashville.

An agreement with Keep Knoxville Beautiful, Inc., for litter abatement, graffiti abatement, recycling education and volunteer coordination plus an adopt-a-road program will be presented in a $40,000 annual proposal.

The police department is asking the council to amend the city code to authorize a spay/neuter and release program for community cats.

Mayor Madeline Rogero is appointing several people to various boards including Katherine Sanford Goodner to the Better Business Board, reappointing John Craig and adding Tolly Harris and Patrick Wolf to the Industrial Development Board, and naming the same two as members of the Downtown Cinema, Inc.

Plaintiff or Petitioner, Defendant or Respondent?

Two legal terms that you hear often are Plaintiff and Defendant. The Plaintiff and the Defendant are the parties involved in a lawsuit. The Plaintiff is the one bringing the lawsuit and the Defendant is the one being sued and

The Defendant has the ability to file a counter-complaint against the Plaintiff. If that happens, the Plaintiff becomes the Plaintiff/ Counter-Defendant and the Defendant becomes the Defendant/Counter-

The parties can also sue other parties. If there are multiple Defendants and they sue each other, they can become Defendants/ Cross-Plaintiffs and Defendants/Cross-Defendants. The Defendants can also sue other individuals and those new people become Third-Party Defendants. As litigation continues, the designations of the parties can adapt and can take on bizarre changes with multiple designations.

By Jedidiah McKeehan attorneyknoxville@

Two other legal terms you may have heard are Petitioner and Respondent. Is there any difference between Plaintiff and Petitioner and Defendant and Respondent? No, not really. Normally you will hear Petitioner and is defending the lawsuit. Respondent used more in juvenile court and custody cases, but the terms are essentially interchangeable. The Respondent can file a Counter-Petition and the parties can become the Respondent/Counter-Petitioner and the Petitioner/ Counter-Respondent, similar to if they were initially called the Plaintiff and the Defendant.

a keystone of their educational achievements.

Next, Hannah Selph, student representative on the school board from Hardin Valley Academy, introduced her fellow representatives from each of the Knoxville high schools. Many were unable to attend the meeting due to other obligations, but all were recognized, nonetheless. Representatives are: Essence Johnson from Austin-East, Hayden Harb from Bearden, Jamar Smith from Career Magnet Academy, Linsey Eros from Carter, Tegan Cross from Central, Amy Anderson from Farragut, Desha Palmer from Fulton, Harper Kirby from Halls, Rachel McFarland from Gibbs, Olivia Slater from Hardin Valley Academy, Breton Stanley from Karns, Brice Lane from L&M Academy Sara Sexton from Powell, Samuel Harris from South-Doyle High School, and Brandon Wolfe from West.

The school board passed Items and Contracts with no discussion and moved on to Board Policies. Item 8H: Uniform Grading Policy hit a snag when a speaker in Public Forum pointed out a problem with the grading policy as it is being implemented at this point. Daniel Labrador, a senior at Bearden High School, pointed out that Knox County Schools does not add the five extra percentage points for taking an AP course onto a grade until after the student has taken the AP exam in May of the student's senior year even though the course itself has been completed in December of the previous year. When the student is applying to college in January before graduation, his/her grades do not reflect the extra points in the grade point average for taking AP courses that were completed the previous semester. Because the Tennessee School Board has left this matter up to individual school districts, other counties in Tennessee do add the extra points to the grade point average giving those students an advantage over Knox County students. Even though an amended transcript is sent to colleges after graduation, college acceptance occurs in March or April.

Labrador proposed that the points be awarded at the conclusion of the seventh semester and if the student fails to take the AP exam in May, then the points will be rescinded. Mr. Labrador respectfully acknowledged that having the five points on the grade point average can make the difference between getting in and not getting in to competitive colleges.

Jon Rysewyk, assistant superintendent of Knox County Schools said that they had thought about that issue but that taking points away from a student's grade point average would be a paperwork nightmare.

Board member Evetty Satterfield interjected that scholarships also depend on grade point averages at the end of the seventh semester. Patti Bounds is troubled that each county in Tennessee can do whatever they want when it comes to adding the points for AP courses and wants the school board to impress upon the Tennessee School Board the importance of a uniform policy.

Vice Chairwoman Susan Horn made a substitute motion to allow the extra percentage points to be added for AP courses at the end of the seventh semester and rescinded if the student fails to take the AP exam. This motion was seconded by Jennifer Owen. Seven voted yes and two voted no. The substitute motion carried.

The last issue taken up by the school board last week was to approve a resolution in opposition to school vouchers sponsored by board member Owen. Representatives Mike McMillan and Tony Norman were reluctant to go on record against vouchers at this point and prefer to wait and review Governor Lee's proposal when it comes out. The other seven members of the school board were in favor of the resolution. Seven voted yes and two voted no once again.

Kerwin Fritz, PTA president, spoke in public forum about Green Magnet School. Fritz related that good things are happening there including afterschool teacher training and enlistment of three new sponsors.

018 A Very Political Year Part One of Three

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

The year began with a cold spell that drove the homeless from beneath the Broadway Bridge and into KARM and other shelters. The night camp beneath the bridge became a growing problem for the city and Knoxville would deal with that later in the year.

The county residents begin to learn who would be running for office and there were surprising results. Voters would eventually decide not only the primary results but the general election winners as well.

January

Roger Kane announced he would not seek re-election to the state house and instead would run for Register of Deeds against Sherry Witt. That left a voice in north Knox County and Commissioner Dave Wright announced he would seek the House District 19 seat.

The city moved to help the Sequoyah Hills Kingston Pike Association in restoring the Sunhouse Fountain in Talahi Park.

Freezing weather drove homeless people to seek shelter, many with the Knoxville Area Rescue Mission.

Candidates for Knox County mayor spoke to the Karns Community Club including Glenn Jacobs, Brad Anders and Bob Thomas. Founder Stan Brock announced 2018's Rural Area Medical schedule but, unfortunately, did not live to see the year's effort completed.

Former interim Sheriff Tom Spangler announced his candidacy for Knox County Sheriff against Chief Deputy Lee Tramel and opened his campaign headquarters on Western Avenue. The Focus began a preview of all the upcoming elections including thenmayor Tim Burchett who faced Loudon businessparty candidates.

February 15th was the deadline for all candidates to qualify and a surprising number of Democrats ended up facing the incumbent Republicans in local, state and congressional races.

Police Chief David Rausch discussed his department's community outreach. Rausch would, later in the year, accept a nomination to direct the TBI and was replaced with Knoxville's first female Police Chief, Eve Thomas.

The Metropolitan Planning Commission began discussing a revamp of all of Knoxville's planning regulations and the city began plans to create an overlook at Lakeshore Park.

Charlie Susano III kicked off his campaign for the Republican nomination for Circuit Court Clerk and Amber Rountree began her campaign for re-election to man Jimmy Matlock and a the school board. Former renovation. bevy of independent and Farragut Middle School ney passed away.

A new data center to track and assist the homeless was unveiled during a meeting of the East Knoxville Community in the Burlington Library. The Parkridge Community Organization reorganized and elected new officers.

The Knox County Board of Education voted not to take part in the Leadership Academy and to establish its own leadership training.

The Convention and Exhibition Center was renamed as the World's Fair Exhibition Center and the facility was reopened in April after March's ribbon cutting at the Behavioral Health Urgent Care Center saw dozens of public officials, citizens and health care professionals help cut the ribbon on the new program and the former Dempster Building received a $200,000 grant from the city for preservation.

March

The Knox County Commission voted 10-1 to require any planning commission changes in zoning codes to be approved by the commission by requesting the change from the state legislature. The commissioners were upset about the MPC's plan to require sidewalks at most future subdivisions.

Stevens Mortuary celebrated 60 years of service. Bernice Stevens, president of the mortuary, passed away in August. The Behavioral Health Urgent Care Center just off Western Avenue opened with a ribbon cutting thanks to a large community effort, support from both the county and city, and some state funding. The center opened with 16 beds to care for mentally ill people detained by the city and county law enforcement and deemed not suited for jail. Law Director Richard

The city council discussed a review of its internal auditor, whose duties have greatly increased over recent years. The city council also voted to permit dancing in any business with a beer permit and discussed the Magnolia Avenue Streetscape Project. Norwood's Lynn Redmon

Developer of the former Supreme Court Building, Rick Dover, obtained permission to use the South High School parking lot while parking at the old court building is finalized. The deadline for negotiating the final agreement for the building was extended.

Commissioner Bob Thomas hit the campaign trail for Knox County Mayor but was to lose the Republican Primary to Glenn Jacobs. Getting to know Knoxville 'Paperboy' Jim Sturgeon Knoxville Focus "paperboy" Jim Sturgeon talks with Focus Reporter Mike Steely as they both recollect being paperboys. Sturgeon continues that tradition each week by taking The Focus to his neighbors. Sturgeon says he's given up driving and is now chauffered around by his beloved wife.

"I've been a paperboy all my life," says Jim Sturgeon. there for 35 years. I'm a good old-fashioned boy and The very active long-time friend of The Knoxville Focus will be 89 years old on December 29. Focus reporter Mike Steely sat down with Sturgeon recently for a chat and found the man in good spirits and full of memories.

Tell us about your career in newspapers.

"I was in distribution for 35 years at the Knoxville News-Sentinel. I took over five routes and filled in for districts," he said. "I'd tell the boys you've got to do it right!"

Seems Sturgeon couldn't get newspapers out of his blood as seven years ago he began coming by The Focus office, picking up 50 or 60 papers and taking them to Knoxville Center Mall.

"I'd walk the halls with newspapers and people would come up to me and ask for a paper," he said, explaining that when J.C. Penney's stopped having a Focus rack he took up the slack. He'd also take The Knoxville Focus into stores there.

As so many stores inside the mall have closed, Sturgeon has developed a new route: to his neighbors around Oak Crest Road.

Can you tell us a bit about your background?

I was born in Toledo, Ohio, and came with my family when my father moved us back to Knoxville. My father died when he was only 44 years old. I started delivering newspaper at 14 or 15 and never missed a day. There was nothing else for a kid to do back then. I went to Knoxville High School and the old soldiers there took us upstairs and we learned to fire a pistol. I've lived in Knoxville since I was a baby.

I went into the Army for three years and came out with

I'm proud of my work at the News-Sentinel and was never give anyone a hard time.

How is your family life going?

My wife, Jeanie, and I have been married 67 years and she hasn't shot me yet. Our kids are grown and moved on but I have a sister who lives in Knoxville.

What do you do in your spare time?

It's according to the weather. We go to the Black Oak Heights Baptist Church. She turned me into a Baptist from a Methodist.

What's your favorite meal?

I'm a diabetic so it's whatever my wife tells me. I've been a diabetic for 25 years. I've said I'm past 80 and I should have a little ice cream or cake now and then. (Jeanie said his favorite is chicken.)

Sturgeon said he misses the days when he took papers to the mall and he would enjoy coffee with his buddies and read and discuss what was in The Knoxville Focus that week.

How would you like to be remembered?

As a paperboy, all my life.

I'll be back at The Focus next Monday to get papers if I'm not sick bad or dead.

Note from Mike Steely: Jim, from all of us who were paperboys in our youth, thank you for your memories and thank you for continuing to serve newspaper readers. The entire staff of The Knoxville Focus wish you and Jeanie a very Merry Christmas and, on December 29, a very happy and healthy 89th Birthday.

Additional driver services now available at West Knoxville, Strawberry Plains

The Tennessee Department of Safety and Homeland Security Driver Services Division announces additional services offered at the West Knoxville driver services center located at 430 Montbrook Lane, Knoxville, TN 37919 and the Strawberry Plains driver services center located at 7320 Region Lane, Knoxville TN 37914.

Both locations now offer full-services, including knowledge and skills testing and license reinstatements. Knox County will now have two full-service driver services centers that will offer services that will decrease customer congestion and wait times for scheduling skills tests as well as taking a knowledge test. This also gives the opportunity for customers to have centers that offer full-services closer in proximity to the areas where they reside.

The full service centers are open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Customers will be able to schedule skills test appointments on-line for both locations. For more information, please visit www. tn.gov/safety/driver-services/online.html.

Tennessee Governors & the Path to the US Senate Part Twelve

By Ray Hill rayhill865@gmail.com

was so unpopular with his fellow Democrats, the party machinery moved up the election for the Democratic nomination to November of 1915, a full year in advance of the regular general election in 1916. For the first and only time, the election in November would be followed by another in December featuring a runoff between the two top vote getters. Lea, bolstered by his ownership of the Nashville Tennessean and his incumbency, was determined to run. Former governor Malcolm Rice Patterson, as polarizing a figure inside Tennessee's Democratic party as his personal enemy and rival Luke Lea, entered the contest, along with the congressman from Tennessee's Tenth District, which was comprised of Shelby County, and a few surrounding counties in West Tennessee. That the governor declared, young congressman was Kenneth D. McKellar, who had first been elected in a 1911 special election following the death of

Patterson abandoned his opposition to temperance; in fact, he changed his of thousands who were skeptical about the former governor's supposed change of heart, but considering the tragedies that had befallen Patterson and his family, it is quite possible his conversion was genuine. Malcolm Patterson had been married three times; he married Sarah Johnson in 1885 and they had three children together before she died. In 1903, Patterson married Sybil Hodges and their union produced one child before Mrs. Patterson's untimely death. Malcolm Patterson became only the second Tennessee governor to marry while in office. His third wife, Mary Russell Gardner, married the governor in 1907, just shortly after Patterson had been inaugurated. Despite Malcolm Patterson being

In February of 1915, Patterson paid a call on Governor Tom C. Rye while in Nashville. Officially, Patterson was on a speaking tour on behalf of the Anti-Saloon Leaving the governor's office, Patterson confidently predicted it was only a matter of time before "strong drink" could be had without a prescription from "a reputable licensed

U. S. Senator Luke Lea had taken him all over the country and provided him with a comfortable living.

The former governor spoke again in Nashville in April of 1915 at Ryman Auditorium and was introduced by the incumbent governor, Tom C. Rye. Rye's introduction was generous. "I have been requested, and I appreciate the honor, to introduce a man who in my judgment does anything he undertakes better than any other man," Rye said. "Where his standards wave there are always found behind them a splendid citizenship." The governor said he believed Patterson was "fighting for the homes of Tennessee." Patterson's banner on behalf of prohibition, according to Governor Rye was "second only to that unfurled by Jesus Christ among the olive-clad hills of Judea." "His cause will succeed," "because it ought to."

Patterson through a long history of his political career and readily acknowledged his own opposition to a former Confederate the prohibition cause. Patterson demolished his own former arguments and noted there were "only" 300 saloons left in Nashville. "These may expect to go completion completely at the next Congress, and tonight." The press, despite Tennessee and Memphis and I could go dry, you may expect anything to happen." Patterson cheerfully admitted one of the charges made by his political opponents. "Some men have said I am not consistent, and I know it, but the number who say I am not sincere is less than formerly."

> Patterson in turn praised Rye for the governor's strong stand in favor of the laws.

> By the summer of 1915, politics began to heat up and "friends" of the former governor indicated in June Patterson would seek the Democratic nomination and oppose Senator Luke Lea. When asked if he would become a candidate for the U.S. Senate, Patterson did not issue a denial. "The time is too far away for me to say anything definite," the former governor replied. Patterson seemed to be waiting for Congressman Thetus W. Sims to make an announcement whether he would run for the Senate or not; Sims badly wanted to run. A bloated man with a bushy moustache and overstated sense of his own dignity as a congressman, Sims had been in the House of Representatives since 1896 and felt he deserved based on longevity. Like an old bull, Thetus Sims pawed at the ground, shook his head angrily and bellowed occasionally, but did little of substance to promote his own candidacy. Unlike the past, Malcolm Patterson was more cautious in his approach to the senatorial campaign. In August, he met with friends and supporters in Nashville at the Maxwell House. Approached by reporters from Luke Lea's Tennessean and the Nashville American about his political plans, the former governor barked, "I have no statement to make imminent.

Shortly after Patterson's arrival at the Maxwell House, Congressman K. D. McKellar set up shop at the same hotel. Along with Patterson and McKellar, Congressman Cordell Hull was a resident of the hotel for a few days; the Maxwell House remained a hotbed of political activity with each prospective candidate receiving a steady stream of callers. Naturally, prohibition and enforcing Luke Lea's Tennessean kept a close eye on each potential candidate against the senator. The Tennessean reported one close friend bluntly asked former governor Patterson if he was going to run for the U. S. Senate. people seem to expect it," Patterson replied. "Watch the papers about Tuesday morning." The Tennessean, doubtless reflecting the personal opinion of Senator Lea, opined several prospective candidates had abandoned their plans to run for the Senate with Patterson's increasing interest in making the race. The Tennessean seemed to think an official announcement of candidacy by former might well clear the field.

That ignored the fact

Congressman McKellar

had already announced his own candidacy for the

would become increasingly clear with passing weeks neither Senator Lea nor McKellar would be a factor in the campaign. The Bristol Herald-Courier seemed to reinforce that belief, editorializing a declaration of candidacy by Malcolm Patterson made it highly unlikely McKellar could beat both the former for the nomination.

Malcolm in the November primary. Patterson outlined his platform and perhaps anticipating yet another bitter campaign, said his own would "be free of personalities", as he wished to go before the people and keep the contest on "a high plane." It was quite clear immediately whatever Malcolm Patterson might wish, the campaign would not be devoid of personalities. Luke Lea's Tennessean published a political cartoon of a cat bearing Patterson's face standing on a porch, before a door labeled "Public Life" and looking over his shoulder to see a can entitled, "His Record", tied to his tail. For those who might not readily recognize the former governor's face, the cartoonist had helpfully written "Ham" on the hapless cat. Almost immediately after announcing his candidacy, former governor Malcolm Patterson left the campaign trail as his son had to undergo a "dangerous operation." If Patterson believed the senatorial race would be waged without comment on personalities, Tennessee newspapers dredged up his public record. The Lexington Progress issued a scathing editorial, snarling, "After having betrayed every

senatorial nomination. It Cooper and violated every pledge except to satisfy his own lust for office, he now asks the people of the the Tennessean thought state to receive and trust him as a reconstructed and reformed man." The Progress attributed Patterson's change on the temperance question to the fact the liquor lobby's "money ran out" and charged the former governor as "the rankest and governor and Senator Lea boldest kind of hypocrite" who was "audacious and Patterson insolvent in his methods." made his candidacy The Lexington Progress official on September 2, concluded by saying, "... 1915. He would be an at least Patterson is approached when his and became a popular we can then look the Czar Patterson's comments, active candidate for the Patterson, whether he is son, Malcolm, died. Both speaker against the evils of of Russia in the face,' thought an announcement Democratic nomination sounding the depths and McKellar and Senator Lea alcohol. There were tens Patterson thundered. "If of his candidacy was for United States senator shoals of dishonor or riding cancelled their speaking the wave of respectability..."

Despite the campaigns of Congressmen McKellar and Sims, the Brownsville State-Graphic huffed the senatorial contest came down to Senator Lea and former governor Patterson. "The other two might as well be put in 100 to 1 class right now." Trenton Herald-Democrat thought as the candidates were all Democrats and held many of the same views on issues, "Thus the matter decidedly hinges on 'personalities'."

With the first primary a month away, the senatorial campaign heated up in October. Luke Lea's Tennessean shamelessly promoted the senator's candidacy, while gleefully publishing any scrap of a story that might be detrimental to his opponents. Congressman Thetus Sims, bitterly lamenting he had been in Congress far longer than Kenneth McKellar, withdrew from the race. The Tennessean thought there was an exodus from the McKellar camp to that of Malcolm Patterson. The Tennessean speculated Congressman Cordell Hull, who it believed was backing McKellar, had switched his allegiance to Patterson.

The Tennessean noted Hull

had dined with Patterson and had enjoyed coffee with the former governor in the Maxwell House Hotel. McKellar campaigned relentlessly, stressing a theme neither Luke Lea nor Malcolm Patterson could argue with; the Memphis congressman pounded home the notion only he could run in the 1916 general election as the nominee of an united party. Both Lea and Patterson were highly controversial and the Republicans were fielding their strongest candidate: former governor Ben W. Hooper. It was a powerful argument for many Tennessee Democrats, as Hopper had twice been elected governor and the nomination of either Lea or Patterson would likely bolster Hooper's campaign. and Patterson concentrated their verbal barrages on one another, largely ignoring McKellar. Neither realized until too late the Memphis congressman's campaign for the nomination was taking hold with voters. The results of the first primary stunned just about everybody. Congressman K. D. McKellar ran first, carrying East and West Tennessee; former governor Malcolm Patterson carried Middle Tennessee, while Senator Luke Lea ran third. Lea, in spite of owning the Nashville Tennessean, ran behind Patterson in his native Middle Tennessee. Patterson and McKellar would face one another again in the December runoff election. Lea, who had been elected to the Senate by the fusionist movement had difficulty in denying his own record as much as Malcolm Patterson could not escape his record as governor. An even greater tragedy befell Malcolm Patterson as the election engagements out of respect for the Patterson family. Evidently young Patterson had never fully recovered from his earlier surgery. As the election returns trickled in, McKellar led Patterson by a vote of 41,416 to 39,069. Luke Lea trailed with 32,348. Patterson had run third in East Tennessee, behind second place finisher Luke Lea. McKellar carried Hamilton and Knox counties, while Patterson carried Luke Lea's home county of Davidson. Both McKellar and Patterson lived in Shelby County, but McKellar won it overwhelmingly.

The run-off election was almost anti-climactic. Congressman McKellar defeated decisively former governor Malcolm Patterson. McKellar swept every grand division of the state, winning East, Middle and West Tennessee. Patterson's best showing came once again in Middle Tennessee, which he lost narrowly to McKellar. The Memphis congressman ran even better in East and West Tennessee, running ahead of the governor two-to-one. Malcolm Patterson's quest for elective office and vindication had fallen short, but he was not done with

After Central High School recently won the Class 5A State Championship, the players and coaches got a heroes' welcome upon returning to Knoxville.

Area businesses, football boosters and high school football fans haven't been shy in passing out congratulatory greetings, well wishes and celebrations at every turn, justifiably so.

State titles are difficult to win and the Bobcats started 0-2 before winning 13 consecutive games en route to hoisting the Gold Ball on an early Sunday evening in Cookeville.

Clutch eighth graders lead comeback for Lady Admirals

By Ken Lay

Farragut Middle School has one of the youngest girls basketball teams in Knox County but on Monday, Dec. 10, the Lady Admirals got a huge lift from two returning eighth graders and that boost propelled the twotime defending James A. Ivey Memorial Middle School Basketball Tournament Champions.

Aubrey Stackhouse and Jenna Thorley played on last year's championship team but this year they've have taken on leadership roles and their contributions helped Farragut nab a 32-26 comeback victory over Vine early last week at the Bobby

J. Henry Gymnasium. Stackhouse scored nine of her game-high 13 points in the second half and Thorley made four free throws in the fourth quarter to help the Lady Admirals notch a key

"These are our only two eighth graders and they're our leaders and they were huge for us tonight," Farragut coach Susan Davidson said. "The other players on our team played JV last year." Farragut also got five points from Annie Priest, who made a pair of late foul shots with 6.5 seconds remaining to provide the final margin of victory.

The Lady Admirals trailed 21-18 heading into the final frame and the Lady Golden Bears took a 24-21 lead when Jaya Jenkins hit a free throw midway through the fourth quarter.

Both defenses were stingy in the fourth quarter as Vine and Farragut combined to commit multiple turnovers.

But the Lady Admirals (9-3) took control over the waning minutes because they made 10-of-14 free throws over the final six minutes.

Thorley was 4-for-6. Stackhouse was 1-for-2 and Priest was 5-for-6 from the charity stripe. Priest scored all five of her points in the fourth quarter.

Davidson said that she felt fortunate to emerge from the game victorious.

"Vine is a great team and they're really athletic," Davidson said. "They have great players and they're well-coached. It's no accident that they're near the top of the standings.

"They're a great team." The loss dropped the Lady Golden Bears to 9-3. Jenkins led Vine with 12 points. Rakia Watkins added eight and Maggie Goins finished with six.

Thorley said that Farragut turned up its intensity late in the contest.

"Vine was in second place because they're a good team and they've been winning," Thorley said. "We really stepped it up tonight."

Stackhouse said the victory was huge for Farragut.

"This was a very inspiring win for us. It will help us to push harder to win," she said.

Top hoops teams invade Knoxville at 5Star Classic

By Ken Lay

High school basketball fans can get their hoops fix this week at the 5Star Preps Classic Presented by Tennessee Orthopaedic Clinic on Thursday and Friday.

Games will be played at four sites and some of the top boys and girls teams will be in action in East Tennessee before local hoopsters take a short holiday break. Games will be held at Farragut, Fulton, Christian Academy of Knoxville and William Blount.

Tournament play opens Thursday at Farragut with the Grainger and Cleveland girls tangling at 3 p.m., in a showdown of powerhouse programs. At 4:30, the Grainger boys will take on Austin-East. The host Lady Admirals will play Campbell County at 6 p.m.

Both Farragut and the Lady Cougars are off to fast starts. At 7:30, Farragut's boys will entertain Karns. The two teams have already played once this year with the Beavers defeating the Admirals in the Farragut Thanksgiving Tournament.

In Thursday's game at Fulton: Maryville's girls will take on Jefferson County in a matchup of top teams at 4 p.m. Fulton's girls will play Webb at 5:30. At 7, the Maryville boys will play Jefferson County. Fulton's boys will collide with Riverdale at 8:30 p.m.

New course announced for Covenant Health Knoxville Marathon ville Marathon, recently named best marathon in Tennessee by Runner's Goal, will feature new courses and a new finish line in 2019.

Race officials have released the new course map for the 2019 marathon, marathon relay and half-marathon events. Courses for the 5K and Covenant Kids Run will be released after the start of the year.

"The new course map is posted on the website for runners anxious to review it," Covenant Health Knoxville Marathon Race Director Jason Altman said. "Most of the changes affect the second half of the marathon route, but we still visit all the scenic, iconic Knoxville neighborhoods that make this race special. Of course, all races this year will enjoy a new finish line in World's Fair Park with a festive afterparty on the lawn with music, food trucks, beer and more."

Race weekend takes place March 30-31, 2019, but now is the time to register and start training. Participants are encouraged to register online at www.knoxvillemarathon.com.

Jeremy Pruitt's OC Search Keeps Going... And Going...

By Alex Norman

nessee head coach Derek Dooley spent 38 days out of the public eye following the historic loss to the Kentucky Wildcats, a loss that kept them out of a bowl game.

In that five and a half week period, seven of his assistant coaches fled the sinking ship, as did multiple recruits for the Class of 2012. Fan angst was already at an all-time high after a loss to UK for the first time in 26 years. The perception that no one was at the controls of the football program carried over throughout the 2012 season. Eventually, Dooley was fired.

The lack of communication between the football program and the fan base is difficult to accept when things aren't going well.

Fast forward seven years, and history is repeating itself. Tennessee head coach Jeremy Pruitt hasn't been heard from publicly since the Vols loss to Vanderbilt, a loss that kept them out of a bowl game. His offensive coordinator, Tyson Helton, left to take the head coaching job at Western Kentucky. Over the past three weeks, the rumor mill has churned at

coach Dan Enos, Auburn heads up on the latest with offensive coordinator Chip the coaching search. Back in 2011, then Ten- Lindsey, Cleveland Brown OC Freddie Kitchens... they've all been connected in one way or another to the Tennessee OC job. Freeze took the head coaching job at Liberty. Briles is rumored to get the Florida State OC gig. Enos got promoted to the Alabama OC job. Lindsey was hired in the same position at Kansas. Kitchens still has a few weeks in the NFL season.

All the while the Vols are preparing for the early signing period (December 19-21), and they still haven't made this very important hire. Volquest reported last week that job opening, you get more any decision likely won't be made until after the early signing period. From the outside, the inability to secure or decide on a new OC is not a good look, but I'm not sure Pruitt cares very much about that per-

Pruitt is schooled in the Nick Saban school of communications. The head coach is the only one that speaks for the program, and he's not going to submit to many off season inquiries. Just watch his coach's show or any of the promos he has to do with WVLT, the flagship TV station of the Vols. Pruitt looks like he's being held captive. He doesn't enjoy that part of the job, so it isn't like he's going to give the media a

But there are dangers to all that secrecy. Misinformation spreads like wildfire. Remember Grumors? The inability to control that message helped lead to the firing of John Currie as AD. In addition, the Tennessee fan base is as dialed in as any in the country. They hunger for any news about their football program. Heck, hundreds of them stood in line for hours for the chance to purchase old Tennessee football gear last week.

But as more time goes on without a resolution to this apathy, which is fairly dangerous to the success of a program.

No matter the spin, Tennessee should have made a hire by now. The uncertainty can't help with recruiting, and it certainly doesn't help with the psyche of Tennessee fans. Tyson Helton was not a care more about football and scoring touchdowns than they do about character and living right.

I should also mention the former Ole Miss head coach was hired by Liberty Athletic Director Ian McCaw, who was one of three officials at Baylor that lost their jobs in the wake of the sexual assault scandal involving football players between 2012 and 2016. Obviously, McCaw getting the AD job at Liberty surprised me too. Frankly, I'm glad the University of Tennessee did not hire Freeze. I also hope the reports I heard that Jeremy Pruitt spoke with Freeze about UT's offensive coordinator vacancy were not true. Freeze got into plenty of NCAA hot water at Ole Miss and also eventually was given the ultimatum to resign or be fired for violating the morals clause of his contract. Ole Miss officials discovered "a concerning pattern" of calls to a female escort service from Freeze's phone. Would you want your quarterback son to be guided on and off the field for four years by Freeze?

Freeze just recently came off a NCAA show-cause penalty for not monitoring his assistant coaches at Ole Miss. Numerous recruiting violations by his staff resulted in Ole Miss imposing a self bowl ban in 2017 and the NCAA adding another year this season, although the 5-7 Rebels wouldn't have been in one anyway with that record.

Many fans just know and care that

Freeze is the coach who beat Alabama in back-to-back seasons. According to a couple of surveys I heard

One longtime local sportscaster was campaigning on the air for UT to hire Freeze. He said Tennessee needed to start cheating to get back on the winning track. He wanted us to believe that the Vols would never be winners again if they didn't cheat.

I called another local station after that and asked nationally known sportscaster Dr. Jerry Punch if he thought a lot of coaches believed it was necessary to cheat to win in college football in this day and age. He said he felt many coaches "push the envelope" as far as they can when it comes to playing by the rules. He also said he believed Freeze would be on his best behavior if Tennessee hired him because the NCAA would be watching

I believe there are many good men out there that are good coaches and good husbands and try to win the right way. That's the kind of person I would like to see UT hire in all of its sports. I hope Pruitt is that kind of person. That report of him meeting with Freeze about the OC job is still in the back of my mind. I hope he will explain his position on that matter as soon as he has time. Other than that, I believe Pruitt has been spending most of his time on recruiting the best football players and young men that he can find. It doesn't matter how good the offensive coordinator is that ends up on the UT staff. If he doesn't have good players, he won't be successful. I believe Pruitt knows he first must rebuild Tennessee's offensive and defensive lines. No matter how good the skill players are, they won't be able to be successful if the Vols remain weak and soft

Magic

For a kid the most exciting time of the year is Christmas; and it's all about magic.

We regularly pick up our "cute-ones" (aka grandkids) from preschool, and last Wednesday they were excited, not just to see us, which they usually are, but because their parents were taking them to see Santa Claus that evening. In the back seat, on the drive home, there was lively chatter about the food flying reindeer needed and whether Rudolph's red nose was needed by Santa

As we waited for their parents, Becky and I helped our cute-ones make a wish list for Santa, even though the grampsters hadn't heard of many of the latest toy rages. I felt blessed to be with my grandkids and to bask in their magical innocence.

We all grow up and eventually lose the fairy tale wonder of Christmas, except perhaps Peter Pan or Will Ferrell's character in the Christmas movie, Elf. However, though growing up is natural and deemed healthy, it is not without cost, as magic is replaced sometimes by the hard realities of life.

I grew up in another "magical" time, when it was safe to walk to school and play in the neighborhood unsupervised. And I remember the excitement of Christmas and it's magic which I relive with my grandkids. That same sense of magic and innocence is captured in another movie classic, A Christmas Story, as Ralphie wishes and angles for a Red Rider BB gun.

I remember the day in second grade when exuberance and wide-eyed lunchroom sophisticates challenged my sense of Christmas magic. I was the oldest of three brothers, but my lunchroom buddy had an older and of course more urbane brother who told us that my parents were Santa Claus. I was devastated and remember asking my Mother if this was true. Perhaps wishing to spare me and my younger brothers the harsh reality of growing up too soon, she and my father conspired to have Santa Claus pay the Ferguson boys a

When the doorbell rang the next night it was accompanied by the ring of sleigh bells held in the hand of Santa Claus himself! Just as in the poem "A Visit by St. Nicholas" by Clement Clarke Moore, "my" Santa was a jolly old elf in a red suit with a beard as white as snow and bag full of toys slung over his back. It was a magical moment and I believed again, at least for awhile. The bubble finally popped, perhaps a year or so later, when late one Christmas Eve, I peered from my doorway and saw my parents (Santa's agents) putting toys under the tree. I don't remember telling my brothers what I had seen. I wasn't philosophical at that time, but perhaps I thought it best my brothers find their own truth. And perhaps it coined the term, a "leap was my own denial which pushed me to hold onto the magic and the mystery of Christmas.

Do you believe in magic, defined as observations without explanation? I'll paraphrase a well known scientist and writer who opined that sufficiently advanced technology would be perceived as magic by a less advanced culture. Pictures and videos of cute-ones on my iPhone might be considered magic if shown to the primitive people who recently murdered the missionary encroaching on their isolated island in the South Pacific. (Polaroids in Guatemala)

Since the Enlightenment, Man has demanded objective reality through observation and scientific testing. Some years ago I came across the concept of an open or closed universe. To a naturalist or a materialist reality is defined by what he can observe, measure or comprehend. Anything that is not contained within his conceptual sphere doesn't exist. This conceptual boundary defines a "closed" universe. An open universe is not bound by anyone's current knowledge or imagina-of faith." Contextually, this most often refers to spiritual matters. However, I believe the concept applies to science as well. Have you ever been around a kid who constantly asks you, "Why?" No matter what your answer he again asks, "Why?" to the point of irritation or absurdity.

Some years ago a friend challenged me with the notion that at some basic level even scientific observation is a "leap of faith" because you compare that observation against some "standard" accepted as an article of "faith." As an example, I've never observed Hong Kong nor have I seen an electron, yet I accept that they exist because others have seen that Asian city and scientists write equations for subatomic particles which power my iPhone. My point is, I acknowledge that my own reality depends on

For me the world is like overlapping circles of a Venn diagram. There is the scientific observable circle of reality and the spiritual sphere. They overlap and magically define my vision of reality. I accept that I can't know everything and therefore embrace a limitless and "open universe."

I can accept Santa Claus, not so much a phenomenon, as he is a spiritual essence of Christmas. I know this is a bit unscientific, but I've already shown you that science alone has a limited horizon. I prefer a limitless vision and accept the notion that some things today may seem like magic and in futures ages may have scientific explana-

There are other magical things all around us which defy boundaries and precise definitions. A noteworthy example is love. We've all experienced love in one of its many variations, such as love of grandchildren, wife, country or chocolate. We define these loves by comparison to shared emotions or experiences of other humans. I know the color red because I'm not color blind and can share this vision with others.

In his gospel and epistle, John described God as love and that love is God. And when the Word became flesh two millennia ago and dwelt among us, we were given a tangible essence of love.

That Spirit of love still walks among us, especially at Christmas. And the magical love that changed the world goes on.

Tips for staying warm and healthy while using wood-burning heat

Tennessee Medical Center News

As the temperature drops outside, many people may be looking for ways to stay warm inside. Often in an effort to reduce utility costs, they may use fireplaces and wood-burning stoves to heat their homes not realizing they could be paying a higher price in terms of their health. As wood-burning heat can cause health issues, those at the greatest risk include anyone with heart or lung disease, especially for older adults and children.

Dr. Paul Branca, a pulmonologist at The University of Tennessee Medical Center (UTMC), offers some insight into the risks involved with

Solid Waste Holiday Schedule

Waste Connections, Knoxville's household garbage and recycling hauler, is closed on Tuesday, Dec. 25. Garbage and recycling will not be collected that day. Residential and downtown collections typically scheduled for Tuesday collection will resume Wednesday, Dec. 26, and the collection schedule will offset by one day for the remainder of the week.

Garbage and recycling will be collected on Tuesday, Jan. 1, 2019; however, Waste Connections offices will be closed. (The only holidays on which Waste Connections does not pick up are Thanksgiving and Christ-

For tips on how to prevent waste by recycling or donating gently used items during this giving season, please visit www.knoxvilletn.gov/garbage. Following the Christmas holiday, properly bagged excess holiday household trash and broken-down cardboard set next to full garbage carts will be picked up - a one-time exception to the requirement that all bags be placed

The city's recycling centers will be open for recycling drop-offs, but the Goodwill attendant will only be available for donations of household goods for a limited time during the holidays. The City's Solid Waste Management Facility, 1033 Elm St., will also have limited holiday hours. To find out holiday hours for the Solid

UT Gardens' December 2018 Plant of the Month: Giant Leopard

Its Blooms Stand Out in the Winter

Submitted by Alexandria Smith, research specialist, UT Gardens,

Looking to add something unique to your shade garden this year? Farfugium japonicum 'Giganteum', commonly known as Giant Leopard plant or simply farfugium, is one of my favorite foliage plants in the gardens. This clump-forming perennial has glossy, leathery foliage that adds dramatic texture and gives a tropical feel to even the most lackluster spaces in a garden, and as a bonus it blooms in late fall when few other plants are in flower.

are thick and are deep green in color, but as its name implies, Giganteum leaves are can grow up to 18 inches across. While other species of farfugium like full shade, this one does best with a few well-drained moist soil. Farfugium will wilt during our extreme summer temperatures or in dry spells but thrives if sited correctly and is not allowed to go dry.

Hardy from zones 7 to 10, foliage is semi-evergreen during mild winters but dies back to the ground once temperatures are around 20 degrees Fahrenheit with new foliage emerghours of dappled sun in ing in spring. With the mild last year, our clumps in the Cornelia B. Holland Hosta Garden bloomed in December and foliage lasted until mid January. The daisy-like blooms are bright yellow and emerge on tall, leafless stalks and provide an unexpected burst of color in the gray of winter.

Farfugium is fairly low maintenance and does not have any serious disease winter in East Tennessee or pest problems, but it is susceptible to foliar slug damage. Remove spent leaves throughout the season and cut off flower stalks when blooming is done. For best results planting should occur in spring for healthy establishment. Again, be sure and provide deep watering during hot summer months to keep farfugium looking any gardener starts with Farfugium is most effective if planted in mass, near ponds or streams, woodland gardens, perennial borders, or in containers. In shade gardens, the striking foliage provides a nice contrast with companion plants such as hostas, ferns, Japanese maples, columbine, and astilbe. Like hostas, you can't have just one in your garden.

In addition to Giganteum, other interesting cultivars include 'Aureomaculata' and 'Crispatum'. Both are hardy from zones 7 to 10. Guaranteed to attract the eye, Aureomaculata also features deep green glossy foliage but sports bright yellow irregular spots. Crispatum is lighter green with striking ruffled margins. These cultivars and Giganteum will begin to satisfy a farfugium addiction that seems to begin whenever one plant. While readily available in its native home of Japan, several cultivars have slowly made their way to North America over the last decade. Visit your local nurseries or shop online for available selections.

known for many fun things: presents, lights, family traditions, trees, music. For most, there is much joy at Christmas time. But for others, Christmas is a difficult time. A loved one is not around the table because they passed away. For others, you long to have a relationship to share this time of year with. Others have difficulty when they get together with family over the holidays due to estranged relationships or conflict. You are "supposed" to have a great time, but you are not and it intensifies despair. Despair is defined as the complete absence of hope. Many will feel despair this Christmas season, but the Christmas story is about moving from despair to deliverance. God's people had a history of despair. Even in the midst of our despair, we have been promised deliverance.

Our problems began in the Garden of Eden. Every person commits sin and we recognize that we need a Savior. Some people fall into a false premise: as long as my good deeds outweigh my bad deeds, I am deserving of heaven. But if you break one deed, you are guilty of breaking all of them. If we could earn our deeds, there would then be no need for Jesus to die as a sacrifice for us. But man can't save himself. Someday we will all stand before God and we won't be compared to anyone other than the righteousness of Jesus. Our only hope is to put our trust in him, in the deliverer. In Isaiah 9, the king on the throne was Ahaz. Isaiah hope in Jerusalem. But Isaiah tells the people there are better days ahead. No matter how bad or how long, deliverance is on the way. "Nevertheless, there will be no more gloom for those who were in distress. In the past he humbled the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali, but in the future, he will honor Galilee of the nations, by the Way of the Sea, beyond the Jordan" (Isaiah 9:1).

Isaiah goes on to write: "The people walking in darkness have seen a great light; on those living in the land of deep darkness a light has dawned" (Isaiah 9:2). The first recorded words of God are: "Let there be light" (Genesis 1:3). Jesus calls himself the light of the world (John 8:12). Jesus wants us to be his light in a world of despair. We are to reflect Jesus Christ. We, like the moon reflecting the brilliance of the sun, get to reflect the brilliance of the Son of God.

Israel had many kings, but those kings often got them into the messes they found themselves in. But Isaiah says a lasting solution is on the way. "For to us a child is born, to us a son is given, and the government will be on his shoulders" (Isaiah 9:6).

In the midst of difficult times, Isaiah makes a strange promise. A child will be born. But this is no ordinary child. God will enter history himself. The depths of despair will not be healed until this new child is born. Deliverance is not the answer; the deliverer is the answer. His name will be called: "Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace" (Isaiah 9:6). His kingdom will have no end.

Monthly Tips, Management Templates and More from UT Extension Experts

The Knoxville FOCUS

Home gardeners and growers across the state can now utilize a free resource for planting in 2019. The Tennessee Home Garden Vegetable Calendar has been developed by the UT Extension Fruit and Vegetable Workgroup to help users create a comprehensive plan for home vegetable gardens.

Natalie Bumgarner, UT

Extension plant sciences expert, says, "The 2018 calendar was extremely useful and well received, so we want to continue that momentum for Tennessee growers. The 2019 calendar features all of the information and tips of the 2018 calendar, with additions of the newest research crop spotlights and management tips."

The calendar includes tips for scheduling planting, harvest and general management. It is formatted like a regular calendar, and you can print and display in a convenient area or use on your computer throughout the year. Also included in the calendar are monthly tasks for growers and an area for taking notes about that month's weather and crop observations. The calendar is area-specific as well, with suggestions for East, Middle and West Tennessee. The frost/ freeze probable dates for twelve Tennessee communities is also included in this year's calendar.

The Tennessee Home Garden Vegetable Calendar is available for download from the UT Extension website, and the final pages of the file include management templates
