
Kimberly Livingston with her daughters, Kaitlyn and Abby, with the car donated to them by Volunteer Miles and King Collision.

King Collision donates car to Powell teacher

By Mike Sawyer
MSawyer@shopperpub.com

For the third year, King Collision in Powell teamed with a deserving family to donate a vehicle to a worthy person. Thursday they continued the tradition, presenting a 2008 Nissan Quest to Powell Primary kindergarten teacher Kimberly Livingston. Livingston, mother of twin girls, one of whom has Down Syndrome, is married and lives in Powell.

King Collision and their customers at King Collision worked with Pro Recovery and Awareness to help raise the funds for the program. Volunteer Miles and his family collected donations from customers and friends of King Collision to help purchase the vehicle.

"When we first got started, we didn't know what to expect," Miles said. "We were blown away by the generosity of the community. We had a lot of people who wanted to donate vehicles, but we wanted to find a family that was in need. We wanted to find a family that would appreciate it and take care of it. We had a lot of people who wanted to donate vehicles, but we wanted to find a family that was in need. We wanted to find a family that would appreciate it and take care of it."

Continued on page 2

Representatives of several Knox County companies and organizations, friends and relatives of Kimberly Livingston stand on the Powell Recode to present a car from Volunteer Miles and King Collision.

Council members reflect on first Recode workshop