BOE slightly amends strategic plan

By Ken Lay

The Knox County Board of Education work session was conducted with little fanfare Wednesday night at the City-County Building.

The sparsely attended meeting adjourned less than an hour after it began. The agenda for this Wednesday's regular session was approved swiftly.

The one item that generated discussion was the school district's Strategic Plan for 2019-2022.

A draft of the plan was released at the previous regular session. It has been four months in the making. It was modified just hours before Wednesday night's work session.

It was discussed briefly by the board members, many of whom said they had little time to review the revised plan.

The Strategic Plan is aimed at seeking community engagement. Its objectives are to increase student achievement, creating a positive culture and eliminating disparities.

It calls for the community to join forces with the school board to increase literacy rates, produce ready graduates and minimize the effects of poverty, mental health and addiction of the county's nearly 61,000 students.

The Strategic Plan has been a long time coming and was the one item Wednesday night that was addressed during the public forum.

Knox County resident Lance McCold spoke. He is one of several community members on multiple coalitions striving to improve education in the school district. McCold made it no secret that

King Collision donates car to Powell teacher

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

For the third year King Collision turned a wreck into a wonderful gift for a very worthy person. Thursday the company, at 2707 Old Callahan Road, donated a 2016 Nissan Quest to Powell Elementary 4th grade teacher Kimberly Longmire. She's a mother of two girls, one of which suffers from Downs Syndrome and Cerebral Pasley. Cindy McCoy and Kelly Long of King Collision sat down with The Focus earlier in the week to talk about the special program Volunteer Rides.

"When Bill King learned about the program he started the process," McCoy said. She explained that if a car is damaged in a wreck at 75% of the vehicle's value it is "totaled." The totaled car is then rebuilt and gifted to a special person. State Farm donated this year's car which was taken to King Collision where a total rebuild was begun.

Council members reflect on first Recode workshop

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

If there is one takeaway from the Knoxville City Council's Recode workshop Thursday night, it is that several other meetings will be needed. The next meeting, to be held February 20, will deal with residential zoning codes and that one may be as long and even more debated.

The council's three and one-half hour work session was focused on proposed zoning changes in commercial, office and industrial districts. The discussion often went off topic and got lost in specific details. The Knoxville Focus caught up with several city officials and council members the following morning prior to the city's annual budget meeting.

"I think we made a lot of ground up (sic) last night," Councilman George Wallace said, adding, "I think we made a decision that we want a final draft at some point in time, stop making changes and we want clarity on whether or not to send out notifications to every property owner."

Councilman Mark Campen also spoke on the notification of property owners.

"My main comment was that property owners who's property will be 'downzoned' must be notified directly as to the zoning change for their property," Campen told The Focus. "Also, at the very least, landowners who live outside of Knoxville need to be notified directly since they are unlikely to see a notification in the paper, etc. I believe we all agreed that all property owners need to be notified, regardless of the zoning change."

"It was a really robust discussion," Councilwoman Stephanie Welch said. "It ranged from broad policy issues to specifics," she said, adding, "It looks like there's going to be a third meeting."

"There was a lot of detail about when you rebuild a building and at what point can you make a change to a commercial building," said Deputy Mayor Bill Lyons.

"We just got started last night. There will be at least two more workshops spread into March. We are taking a deliberative review of the latest version. It's important impacts are considered, how this will really work," said Councilwoman Lauren Rider.

"This has the potential to make property use easier and better, more flexible. We need to really comb this before we make it law," she said.

Vice Mayor Finbarr Saunders, who chaired the work session, described the Recode meeting as long. "I thought we got a little bit in the weeds and I was hoping to stay on the policy."

"It was a little confusing," he said, adding, "We pretty much agreed last night there's going to have to be more meetings."

Speaking of proposed requirements for commercial buildings Councilman Marshall Stair said, "You can understand where the tension is, you don't want it where someone redoes a whole building or for nonconforming parking lots to be there forever."

"We're going to need more workshops," Stair told The Focus.

The February 20 meeting is open to the public and will begin at 5:30 p.m. in the main assembly room of the City-County Building. The scheduled topic is Residential districts (single family, multi-family, general residential districts).

PAGE A2 Who is qualified to be a judge?

By Jedidiah

Being a judge sounds like a cool job, right? You get to wear that fancy robe and get to make decisions all day regarding people's lives. Oh, and you get to bang one of those gavels, and yell, "you are out of order!" Who wouldn't want to be a judge? How can I be despite never having gone one?

Well let's talk about how someone actually becomes a judge in Tennessee. First and foremost, if you are a federal judge, none of what I'm about to tell you really applies because federal judges are appointed for life by the President of the United States.

State judges though, are elected, so they have to run for office like any other political office. Judges are typically elected for 8-year terms.

Tennessee Code Annotated section 17-1-101 and the following sections discuss the requirements to be a Tennessee judge. First and foremost, a judge for the Tennessee Supreme Court must be 35 years of age. For all other Tennessee judgeships, the individual must be 30 years of age. These requirements are very easy to meet because if you graduate college in four years and law school three years after that, you are going to be around 25 years of age when you start practicing law and most attorneys do not run for judge until they have been practicing law for a while.

That brings me to one of the next qualifications to be a judge is that you have to be authorized to practice law in Tennessee. Occasionally I will hear stories from older attorneys who practiced law before judges who simply ran for a judgeship and got fine as judges to law school or worked as an attorney.

The judges also have to live in the district where they are judge. For example, if someone is a judge in Knox County, they have to live in Knox County. However, some districts encompass multiple counties. Roane, Loudon, Morgan and Meigs counties are all in the same judicial district, so a judge would have to live in one of these counties to qualify for a judgeship for that judicial district.

Some districts simply do not have any attorneys living in their district. For example, some of the small cities/towns will hold court once a month to handle traffic tickets handed out. If no attorney actually lives in that municipality, the municipality can obviously get someone from outside the district to act as the judge. Small municipalities typically do not have elections for their judges and often their city or county commissioners elect someone to fill that role.

Several local residents attended the first Chilhowee Park improvement public forum Tuesday as a representative of CSF spoke and asked for comments. A study is underway on how to improve the East Knoxville site.

What's the future of Chilhowee Park?

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

East Knoxville's Chilhowee Park has about 80 acres of land that are covered with concrete, buildings, fairgrounds and landscape features. The park is home to the annual Tennessee Valley Fair with a few other events held there during the year.

Tuesday evening the Jacobs Building there hosted a public meeting on the future of the park and many East Knoxville citizens voiced their opinions and ideas after hearing initial remarks from Bill Kruger of Conventions, Sports and Leisure. CSL has been hired by the city to propose changes at the park and its buildings, landscaping, etc. that would attract more venues and visitors to the little used facility.

Kruger said the study may last five or six months and said the large park "serves as an anchor for East Knoxville." He went on to say that Chilhowee Park has suffered from deferred maintenance and asked anyone interested in future plans there to respond to an online survey coming in three weeks with ideas.

He mentioned the firm is looking at the infrastructure, utilities, and the area "has no elegant space here."

landscape needs. He said they may look at proposing private investment there and asked the audience what would attract more visitors.

Comments from the audience began with Kelly Jolley asking if CSL had done similar studies. Kruger said his firm has been consulted on many "aging facilities" and he mentioned that the Tennessee Valley fair celebrated its 100th anniversary at Chilhowee last year. He said the study is looking for ways to create a longer term stay at the facility for visitors.

A resident asked that the study look at creating a connection to nearby neighborhoods and "keep it family oriented." The reply was that there is flooding there and stormwater problems must be studied.

Kruger said The Muse, the Zoo and the annual fair are "doing great" but that other venues need to be attracted to the area.

Vivian Shipe said any change should reflect the history and not disrupt people living nearby.

Another nearby resident suggested a strolling flower garden.

Sylvia Finch said that East Knoxville needs a banquet hall because Kruger said the park should have more entrances and exits.

The meeting also heard from ideas to better use the former "Midway" area across Magnolia Avenue. Nick Della Volpe said the city should consider purchasing and removing the homes along the way into the park.

Cathy Conner said the area needs a skateboard area and a wedding venue there. She also said the Jacobs Building needs elevators between the two floors.

Kruger said the firm is also looking at creating a multi-story parking facility there.

Another neighbor asked that the fences around the park be removed and asked that much of the paving be removed. Other suggestions included a place for art and artists with a covered stage, better signage directing people there, a new facility there to house the Ice Bears hockey games, and better lighting within the park.

One resident lamented that many events that had been held there have moved to Market Square.

"Our scope is the entire park," Kruger said.

State Farm's Mike Lewis spoke next, recognizing other State Farm employees there, and noted that the Cerebral Palsy Foundation selected Longmire as their "Hero of the Day."

Kelly Long invited Longmire to share her story and the teacher, mother of two beautiful girls, and president of the local Downs Syndrome Awareness group told her story.

She talked about the birth of Abby, her medical problems before and after birth, the three times her youngest daughter almost passed away, and her family's support in keeping the child alive. She described the expense and the many trips to Vanderbilt and other places for care

Longmire turned to her family and her faith in God to sustain her daughter and despite the many health issues the little girl lived and is now being taught to walk.

She told The Focus that her former car was not equipped for her daughter and she needed a reliable vehicle for the many trips they must make for Abby's care. Her older daughter, Katlin, is very helpful with her sister and cradled and cared for her during the ceremonies.

"God has put people in our path that we would not have met and given us a testimony to share with others," she said.

"We do lots of therapy and travel lots of places, so this will be a huge blessing," Longmire said adding what a blessing her mom and dad have been in helping so Longmire can continue to work and have insurance.

"God is still showing us a lot," she told those present.

TDOT grant to create pedestrian, bike path on Chapman Highway

The Tennessee Department of Transportation has awarded the City a $950,000 grant for creating a pedestrian and bike path on Chapman Highway, giving a safe option for pedestrians walking, biking and taking transit. The project is set to begin construction mid-2021.

"This is a section of Chapman Highway where people are walking and biking on a busy, high-speed road, and there is little space outside the traffic lanes," said Jim Hagerman, City Engineering Director. "So the completed project will make getting back and forth from home to grocery store or work safer for residents. It will also make traffic safer for motorists.

"TDOT's multimodal access grants support transportation needs of transit users, pedestrians and bicyclists through projects that address existing gaps along state routes and access at transit hubs."

The maximum grant award for the program is $950,000, plus a minimum $50,000 City match, Hagerman said. To make this project successful, the City will contribute a total of $857,895. Chapman Highway is a state and federal highway managed by TDOT.

"Construction of a multi-use path between Stone Road and Woodlawn Pike along Chapman Highway is the most suitable project we have identified for this grant program," Hagerman said.

The project will extend a sidewalk from the intersection and connect to the existing sidewalk near Young High Pike. It will create pedestrian crossings at three intersections with Chapman Highway: Stone Road, Fronda Lane and Woodlawn Pike. Additionally, the project will improve four Knoxville Area Transit bus stops.

"Knoxville competed with other Tennessee cities for this grant, so the award validates just how important this project is," Hagerman said.

"KAT is excited about the pedestrian and bicycle improvements along the Chapman corridor, in addition to the transit enhancements," says Melissa Roberson, Interim Director of Transit for the City of Knoxville. "This is a busy corridor for transit usage, so improving pedestrian and bike access will also prove incredibly beneficial for transit."

The project will undergo environmental assessment, rightof-way acquisition and final design, Hagerman said.

The project will also include 3,200 feet of multi-use path and 525 feet of sidewalk. Stone Road, Fronda Lane and Woodlawn Pike will be upgraded with pedestrian signals and crosswalks, including a total of seven new crossings.

"Several short sections of sidewalks on the east side of Chapman Highway will be installed, connecting them to destinations such as the South Knoxville Branch Library and adjacent bus stops. The four bus stops on Chapman between Stone Road and Woodlawn will be improved to provide a safe and desirable place to wait for the bus," Hagerman said.

The Chapman Highway pathway project is expected to be completed in early 2022.

The animal control board also heard a report on complaints about a local pet store concerning crowded enclosures, and sick puppies. The board noted that more details were needed on where the animals were purchased as well as shot records, the age of the dogs and enclosure sizes. A former employee at the store called the business "a potpourri" of violations.

There was also a discussion on licensing requirements for grooming and daycare facilities for animals and one such business that has been operating for years without a permit.

Dr. Lisa Chassy asked about enforcing state rules in the city and suggested inviting pet store owners to animal control meetings.

Attorney Gordon said he would look into the regulations and recommend some minimum standards back to the board.

The board also heard and approved of animal use for the Kerbela Temple for Petorama Inc., a bunny exhibit at Smart Toys and Books, dog exhibit for Mardi Growl on Market Square, and a permit for Cat Fanciers at Chilhowee Park. They also approved a permit for up to six hens from a citizen.

been interviewing East Tennessee residents who are involved with their neighborhoods, organizations, or the county or city government. You may know them in their capacity as leaders but you probably don't know their back stories, their families, or their interests. When The Focus asked Robert "Buzz" Buswell, director of Knox County Veteran and Senior Services, about someone that would be ideal to interview he suggested Chris Albrecht.

This week Focus reporter Mike Steely talked with Albrecht, public information director for the Capt. Bill Robinson Chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America. The VVA's Knoxville chapter is named for Captain Bill Robinson who was a prisoner of war for 2,703 days in North Vietnam. He was an enlisted man captured during a rescue attempt during the conflict. He is the longest held enlisted POW in U.S. Military history.

Albrecht is a Navy veteran, a West Knoxville resident, and a husband and father. He's retired and proud to speak on behalf of fellow Vietnam War era veterans.

How is your position with the veteran's organization from the University of Tengoing?

I hadn't given any thought about becoming involved, but when Don

The Knoxville Focus has the VVA chapter asked me to get involved as the public information officer, I thought "I can do that." I kind of created the position to my own liking. Having worked in broadcast management, my strength is building relationships. People in local media know me now and will respond when we need something. Between writing press releases and making contacts it has been a lot of fun. I also sit on the board of directors for the organization. I'm pleased that ville? our current president, Gary Ellis, asked me to continue and grew up in Grandas PIO.

> One of the things I enjoy in that position is going on-air for television and radio interviews.

How has your position affected your family, business or other interests?

My wife is supportive of everything that I take on, but the position has taken a toll on hobbies. I can't sit still and I'm in the process of restoring a 1956 Feathercraft aluminum boat. I enjoy writing and photography and all kinds of things. Sometimes I get so busy with veteran work that those have to take a back seat, but I know they are sitting there waiting for me. But I enjoy what I do.

My wife, Mary, retired nessee. She was the associate vice provost and is now working on a postretirement contract with Smith, then president of the graduate school. It's phases her into retirement.

Aside from the VVA I'm involved with the Optimist Club of Knoxville and have belonged to other Optimist Clubs for 36 years. I sit on the Optimist Club of Knoxville's board of directors.

Tell me a bit about your family.

We have a grown son, Will, who is 36. He lives in North Knoxville with his wife and our two grand dogs.

What brought you to Knox-

I was born in Ohio view Heights, a suburb of Columbus. It was my wife's work that brought us here nearly twenty-three years ago. Mary had the opportunity to become the department head for horticulture in UT's Ag College. We had been at Kansas State University and we picked up stakes and moved. We had lived in Manhattan, Kansas for 16 years. They refer to themselves at "The Little Apple." Being a university town, it had a cosmopolitan feel to it and it's located next to Fort Riley, a major Army base.

My first reaction on moving to Knoxville is I really liked it except for the traffic and I still feel that way.

What do you see as your main accomplishment in life?

Gosh, I'd say my proudest accomplishment is being the father of a fine young man. And having the been good for her as she same woman put up with me for almost 42 years.

How do you think other people see you?

That is up to them, their perception, but I hope they seem me as an open and welcoming person.

If you had to do one thing over in your life what would that be?

Looking back, I don't think I'd been so quick to get out of the service. Although when I got out the military was not a popular place to be. Few appreciated you. With hindsight being 20-20, I could have stayed in and jumped over and become an officer. I look at myself now and think I could have become a pretty good Naval officer but at the time I was still iust a kid.

If you could choose one thing in your position that is very satisfactory what would that be?

The most satisfying thing is getting to know my brothers in-arms, people who served at the same time, went through some of the same things whether they were in combat or not. We were all serving our country. We can all look at each other as brothers now and enjoy that camaraderie.

There's a comfort level, guys can talk because they are going to be understood.

The VVA organization wasn't even on my radar. I've known Buzz (Buswell) all my time in Knoxville and one day he started basically recruiting me for it.

Because I am a "Vietnam Era" veteran and never served in-country, I told him I'm not a Vietnam veteran, I just served during that period. He said "No, you don't understand, you didn't get to choose your orders, you went where the Navy sent you, right?"

I certainly couldn't argue with that.

One of the most rewarding things about becoming a member of the VVA has been getting to know and become friends with Bill Robinson, a remarkable human being. We were 16 hours in the car, just he and I, driving down to Florida. I heard many stories of his experiences in the "Hanoi Hilton" as it was known. How someone could go through what he did and be normal and welladjusted is a wonder to me.

What's your favorite meal or place to eat?

That's easy, breakfast! Bacon, eggs, sausage, all those things that are supposedly not healthy. Sadly, I've given up donuts and all of the sweet stuff because my middle doesn't need them. If I'm going to take in carbohydrates I'm going to reserve that for beer.

I have no one favorite place to dine in Knoxville, I try to enjoy where ever I am. We eat out often and it's not about my favorite place to eat but my favorite people to dine with.

How do you want to be remembered?

I'd like to be thought of as someone who cared. That's why I'm involved with groups helping people. I'd like to be remembered as someone who made a difference.

Around 200 veterans and spouses attended the funeral of seven veterans last week at the East Tennessee Veterans Cemetery.

Seven area veterans buried with honors

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

It is estimated that at least 20% of the homeless people in our area are military veterans. Many of those veterans suffer from drug or alcohol abuse, PTSD and mental health problems. What happens when these poor souls who have no family members pass away?

On Tuesday seven honorably discharged veterans, none with families that could help in their final arrangements, were buried in a special ceremony at the East Tennessee Veterans Cemetery on East Governor John Sevier Highway. The ceremonies were presented by an honor guard, local veteran motorcycle riders and veteran's organizations, and Berry Funeral Home.

The Rev. Pat Polis, a former Army captain, ended his prayer by saying the men may not have next-of-kin but that "we are their family." He added, "No soldier is left behind."

A 21-gun salute, the playing of "Taps," and a bagpipe salute ended the ceremony.

Here are the veterans so honored Tuesday:

Applications now open for homeless grant funding

February 11, 2019

section

The City of Knoxville is accepting applications from non-profit agencies seeking funding for programs that work to reduce and end homelessness in Knoxville.

These annually awarded grants may include funding from multiple sources, including the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Tennessee Housing and Development Agency, and the City of Knoxville.

Grants will be awarded to agencies whose proposals serve the high-priority need of reducing and ending homelessness as defined in the 2015-2019 Five-Year Consolidated Plan. Programs that have received Homeless Grants Program funding in past years include those that: reach out to individuals and families living on the street; provide emergency shelter and services; help to rapidly re-house individuals and families; and prevent families and individuals from becoming homeless.

All agencies receiving this funding are required to participate in the local Homeless Management Information System (KnoxHMIS.org) or other approved, comparable database. HMIS is a linked database that helps providers of services, shelter, and housing for people experiencing homelessness to coordinate services while avoiding duplication. The system provides community-wide data on homelessness, as well as reporting information and measurements of success for individual agencies.

Updated application forms and additional information are available on the City's website at www. knoxvilletn.gov/development, under "Current Grant Opportunities" at the top of the page. Completed forms must be received by the City of Knoxville's Community Development Department by 12 p.m. (noon), Friday, Feb. 22, 2019.

Frank Clement and I think that at the age of Senator Ross Bass, were stumping the state for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate. Tennessean reported one painter busy at work was so startled he quite nearly fell off his ladder when a been after the election," hand shot out of a window and a voice boomed, "Hello. I'm Ross Bass. Help me get re-elected to the Senate." The senator moved at a frenetic pace, so much so while traveling with his boyhood friend Ed Eslick, the two, followed by campaign aides and at least one newsman, were deep in conversation when Bass looked up and said, "Why, Ed, I believe we're in Kentucky!"

The senator had voted for the 1964 Civil Rights Bill and recalled how he could not find a single person to introduce him around Brownsville. In 1966, things had changed and Bass had a "small but enthusiastic group" working on behalf of his reelection campaign. "Race is no longer an issue," Bass explained. It was left unsaid Clement had campaigned in 1964 against the law, which both of Tennessee's U. S. senators had voted against, but now accepted

Bass pointed out he had voted for the interstate highway bill as a member of Congress in 1957 and, "Now, nine years later, we have one highway in Tennessee that people can travel on." Bass had driven over the eastern portion of the new interstate and found it replete with "chugholes", high shoulders as well as being "improperly marked." Bass considered it dangerous. "Sen. Albert Gore wrote the interstate bill, I voted for it, and the federal government paid for 90 per cent of the cost. But who dedicates it?" Bass thundered to a crowd me to vote." of supporters. "Old Frank," some in the crowd called back. "That's right - - - the governor," Bass snapped.

Bass also whipsawed Clement on the governor's record on education. Bass complained Clement had allowed Tennessee to fall "dead last" in per capita adopted my record as his spending on education in platform."

As Ross Bass escalated his attacks on Frank Clement, the governor was touring new shopping centers, shaking hands and swearing he would never contract "Potomac fever." After giving the last official speech of the primary campaign in his home of Pulaski, Bass traveled to Knoxville to meet with his state campaign manager. Senator Bass did not neglect the voters, making several stops throughout Knoxville. Introducing himself to one Knoxville woman, she blurted out, "Oh, yes, Big Mouth Bass!" The woman realized her mistake at once and quietly apologized, telling the senator she did not mean to be rude. Senator Bass sat down at the table with the woman and her friends and proceeded to make fun of his nickname as well, putting her at ease. Bass Bass felt good about Day approached. Pointing out he had voted "yea or nay 227 times" during the most recent session of Congress, Bass said been critical of any of the votes he had cast. "His silence almost constitutes an endorsement of my record," Senator Bass thought.

The day before the election Ross Bass gleefully predicted a senatorial primary between Howard Baker and Ken Roberts would keep GOP voters busy so they could not render any help to Frank Clement. "The Republican primary is going to deprive the governor of the votes remember the trade he made with the opposition party vividly." Nobody was more stunned than Ross Bass when the election returns Where before Clement began pouring in; Frank Clement squeaked by Bass in the Democratic primary, winning by little more than 18,000 votes. Frank Clement won 384,322 votes to 366,079 for Ross Bass. To his dying day, Ross Bass would insist his loss was the result of Republicans crossing over to vote for Clement because they believed he would be easier for Howard Baker to beat in a general election. The 1966 senatorial campaign effectively ended the political careers of both Frank Clement and Ross Bass. Howard Baker defeated Frank Clement in the general election and while Bass made two attempts at a political comeback, both were unsuccessful. Frank Clement's path to the United States Senate as a sitting governor was filled with obstacles he could not overcome.

The Tennessean, which was profoundly opposed Clement, to Frank was naturally strongly supporting Ross Bass. Senator Bass was regularly receiving "glowing reports" from local county campaign managers. Still, even the Tennessean conceded more folks seemed interested in the heated race between former governor Buford Ellington and young John Jay Hooker for the gubernatorial nomination.

Governor Clement changed his mode of campaigning in 1966. While he relied upon his famed oratorical gifts during the 1964 race, Clement was speaking once nightly, while relying more on personal contact with voters, shaking more hands and talking less. The governor moved rapidly, traveling by automobile during the day and campaigning in two or three counties and then flying to his last stop of the evening where he would make a speech. Clement refreshed himself with catnaps between stops while in the car. Forty-six years old in 1966, Clement enjoyed telling audiences, "You know, when I was the age of my boys, I thought a man 46 years old was indeed an elderly man, in the Volunteer State, yet the senator had also been a complete "overhaul" of critical of the taxes raised to support education in Tennessee by the Clement administration. "I do not believe any man who has ignored his responsibilities in the field of education should ask to go to Washington as your senator," Bass cried.

Speaking in Columbia, Tennessee, Bass used a Biblical phrase frequently employed by the governor. "My opponent has been them a check with one going across the state and saying, 'Take my hand and lead me on', but he has taken the hands of school children of Tennessee and held them back," Bass charged. "You have paid the taxes but the money has just been used to pile up in some banks so the governor could use it to help buy his way into the league, U.S. Senate."

audiences the governor friendlier headquarters, had called medical care for seniors "pie in the sky" during the 1964 campaign. "This senator believes the senator Frank Gorrell. The elderly citizens of this nation are important," Bass thundered. "They Market, hurried on to the can benefit this nation. I stockyards, Tennessee promise that I will work for A & I State University, further benefits under the the Davidson County Social Security system."

Finally, Ross Bass came

The governor called for the foreign aid programs administered by the State Department. Clement was emphatically against what he termed "foreign giveaways," while saying, "I'm not against foreign aid." Clement complained of waste in the foreign aid program, a sentiment likely shared by tens of thousands of Tennesseans. "Some of these countries - - - when we are handing hand, we're having to pull a knife out of our back with the other."

typical day of А campaigning for Frank Clement was hectic. The governor visited a black community in Nashville, including the headquarters for the Davidson County Independent Political which had endorsed Ross Bass. Bass reminded his Clement moved on to a that of a joint Clement - Ellington organization where he visited with state governor began the day with a stop at the Farmer's Courthouse square, the fire and police departments, down to the nub of it, saying the Green Hills Shopping the governor was "asking Center, and went from Clement did poke fun at Senator Bass. "My opponent has become upset and cried, and moaned and groaned from Bristol to Memphis that, 'Frank Clement is trying to take my job away.'

"My, my what two short years can do to a man who has caught Potomac fever," the governor clucked. "He has forgotten that seat doesn't belong to him or to Frank Clement, but it belongs to you." Much to the horror of many of the late Senator Estes Kefauver's friends and supporters, Clement attempted to compare himself to Kefauver, whom he described as a "Democrat's Democrat." The governor thought Kefauver was "a fighting senator", not 'a rubber stamp for the White House", ignoring the fact much of Kefauver's tenure as a senator was under a Republican president.

The governor used his office shrewdly during the primary campaign, drawing howls from Ross Bass that Clement was a "dedicator instead of an educator." The governor, while dedicating a new district highway patrol center named for former U.S. senator Herbert S. Walters, who sat flew back the same evening

Panthers fall in TMSAA state semis

By Steve Williams

Powell Middle's historic basketball season came to an end Friday.

After advancing to the first-ever TMSAA state tournament, the Panthers lost to Mt. Juliet 50-35 in the Class AAA semifinals at Stewarts Creek High School in Smyrna. Powell was scheduled to play a consolation game Saturday against Oakland to Memphis Highland Oaks 60-29 in the semis.

Middle School of Murfreesboro, which fell

The Carpenters Middle School girls team from Maryville, which defeated West Valley in the Section 1 AAA title game, reached the AAA state finals with a 55-26 win over Rucker Stewart. The Lady Cougars were to play Memphis Havenview for the state crown Saturday. Havenview earned its title berth with a 31-27 win over White County.

By Steve Williams

Carpenters Coach K.C Hayworth knew who his defense needed to focus on in the TMSAA girls' sectional title game. That was Avery Treadwell, West Valley's 6-foot-2 inside threat.

"We wanted to apply enough ball pressure to keep the ball out of Avery's hands," said Hayworth. "Our team goal all season has been to hold the opposing team to less than 23 points."

Treadwell, despite not being 100 percent, managed to score 12 points, but the Lady Cougars checked off their second objective and defeated West Valley 30-21 Feb. 2 at Hardin Valley Middle to earn a state tournament berth. They were scheduled to play Rucker-Stewart Middle of Gallatin Friday in the state semifinals at Smyrna.

The Section 1 AAA finale was a battle of unbeatens. Carpenters of Maryville and West Valley were both 28-0 heading into their sectional showdown.

Bearden girls hold off Maryville in physical battle

By Steve Williams

They played four quarters plus overtime, but the game came down to 13.6 seconds.

Maryville's No. 2 ranked girls basketball team trailed Bearden by one point, but had gained possession of the ball with a huge interception and quickly called a timeout to discuss what it hoped would be a winning possession.

The Lady Rebels in-bounded the ball at side front court, with the pass going to Courtney Caruthers. She dribbled over to the right side of the court guarded by Bearden sophomore Zneyah McLaughlin.

The seconds continued to tick off.

Caruthers looked for an opening but none was there. She looked for an open teammate against the Lady Bulldogs' man-to-man defense but couldn't find one.

More seconds ticked off and now Caruthers knew she was about out of time. McLaughlin sensed that too and moved up even closer to the Maryville player to apply more pressure.

Finally, in desperation, Caruthers had to take a long shot. The ball banked off the backboard and the horn went off before anyone could get the rebound. Game over.

Glover and Bulldogs look super in 72-49 rout of Maryville

Ques Glover didn't make a quick change in a phone booth or anything like that, but the Bearden High senior guard had a Superman-like performance in the Bulldogs' convincing 72-49 romp past Maryville last week.

Glover could have passed for Clark Kent in the first period as he went scoreless for eight minutes and pretty much unnoticed.

Then Wham!

Ques made his presence felt, drilling a 3-point shot from the right of the circle to give the Bulldogs a fourpoint lead.

28) It was 55-35 after three stops and the Bulldogs scored eight straight to start the final period.

A confrontation between Bearden's Trent Stephney and Anderson was quickly defused with 5:23 to go and each player was assessed a technical foul.

Bearden Coach Jeremy Glover had another Parrott unloaded his bench and subs mopped up in the to give Bearden a 10-point final 1:28.

Glover finished with a game-high 20 points and Stephney totaled 15. The two were presented 2,000point basketballs and recognized for their outstanding prep careers in a pregame ceremony.

UT signee Drew Pember added 13 points, Roman Robinson eight, Shamarcus Brown seven, captain Kordell Kah five and Tyler Nordin four.

Senior forward DaVon Kimble led Maryville with 16 points. Anderson added 11.

Lady Rebels celebrate Senior Night with win over Catholic

By Ken Lay

West High School's girls basketball team is in the midst of its best season in several years and the Lady Rebels celebrated Senior night with a victory early last week.

West, which closed out the home portion of its regular-season schedule with a 58-31 District 4-AAA victory over Catholic Tuesday night, looked impressive at times. But first-year coach Caitlin Hollifield acknowledged that the Lady Rebels are far from a finished product.

"We haven't arrived at all," said Hollifield, who had previous coaching stints at Powell and Christian Academy Knoxville before taking over a struggling program at West. "We still have a lot of work to do. I'm proud of these girls for their effort.

"But when you're trying to rebuild a program, you spend a lot of time re-teaching things. You have to reteach [the players] how to play, how to win and how

Carpenters had strong guard play and committed only three turnovers in the game, while the Lady Wolves had nine turnovers in the decisive second and third periods when they were outscored 18-10.

A basket by Brinley Murphy helped West Valley get within four (19-15) in the third period, but the Lady Cougars capped a 7-0 run when Mak Bremer took the ball away and fed Kirkland for a layup to make it 26-15. Hayworth made an

It's been a special team and season for West Valley, summed up Ballard. "As good as they are on the court, the character with which they approach life is what sets these young ladies apart and makes them a special group," he said.

West Valley's JV team also went 16-0.

Treadwell will play high school ball at Bearden, noted Ballard. "She's had a phenomenal season, averaging 16.4 points and 9.4 rebounds, with game highs of 27 points, 24 rebounds and 12 blocks - all outstanding numbers."

isn't the same.

For years, the first Wednesday in February was an unofficial holiday in this country, especially to the folks in areas that care the most about college football. Fans stayed glued to their computers to keep up with the latest information on the internet. Some watched cameras pointed at fax machines as the rolled in.

Tennessee used to produce its own live show on its website for hours on end. It was must see TV.

"When you look at these guys, they are all big men that are athletic," said Pruitt of his offensive line class, which also includes four-stars Chris Akporoghene (who used to live in Seymour) and Jackson Lampley from Montgomery Bell Academy in Nashville. "They can bend and they can slide their feet. They play the right way... It's a position that we need some depth and competition in, but when you look at our football team, that is probably everywhere. There where you can say that we rently the Player Developsive line for the next three have enough guys. I think with this class, we have hit some needs and we have more depth. There will be more competition so that will make everyone better."

> When the dust settles, Tennessee should end up with a consensus top-12 class nationally.

"When you look at this Considering how up in the class, I think we signed guys that are used to having success," said Pruitt. "Some big men. Guys that are good with the ball in their hand. I think they are going to add depth of our team and create competition. Leaders of their football teams. Captains of their football teams. I think it is a great class to lay the foundation for what we want to achieve here."

Trent Stephney goes up for a slam in Bearden's 73-49 revenge win over visiting Maryville Feb. 5 in a showdown of Class AAA state powers. The Rebels won the first meeting between the two teams 61-60 at Maryville in December.

home with more bruises than successful foul shots. Bearden missed 16 at the line and made 13. Maryville missed 11 at the line and made three.

It took awhile for the Lady Bulldogs to get going. Maryville led 12-4 after the first stop. Bearden went ahead in the second period and was on top 18-16 at halftime. At the end of three, it was 27-all.

With the score tied 31-31, Shekinah McLaughlin's off-balance shot in the lane was no good in the closing seconds of regulation play.

The Lady Bulldogs built a 37-33 lead in OT, but still had to win the game in the final 13.6 seconds.

Vine 21-3. That would have equated to a 28-point quarter in high school.

"Our defense was playing as hard as it could play, and you could do that with the momentum we had," explained Courtney when asked about his team's remarkable performance.

Powell (26-2) went on to capture the Section 1 AAA crown with a 46-31 win and qualified for the TMSAA state tournament's Final Four.

"It's an unreal feeling," said Courtney. "It took a great group of kids to win the Knox County tournament by defeating regular season champion Vine and then two weeks later do it again in the sectionals, plus get a win over Cleveland, one of the best teams tourney, the eighth grader added, "It in the state (in semifinals)."

The balanced Panthers got 14 points from Ayden Greene, 13 from tourney MVP Bryce Burkhart and 12 from Bryce Jardret. Cassen Huffaker chipped in seven points - all in the first half explosion. Emmett Burns didn't score a single point but had a major impact on the game, blocking a school record 12 shots and collecting if they didn't have a ladder. Spencer 10 rebounds.

Javari Jackson led Vine with nine seven and Markeis Barrett six.

Powell went on a 17-0 run in the second period to pull away. It started with three straight 3-pointers by Burkhart, Jardet and Greene.

Greene scored in the lane on the opening possession of the second half to give Powell its biggest lead of the game (35-12). But Vine ended the third period with an 8-1 run to pull tonight (Feb. 11).

The Bears reduced the gap to 11 (40-29) and Powell began protecting the ball more and taking more time off the clock at the 4-minute mark of the final period.

Greene picked up a loose ball and scored on a layup to push the lead back to 13 (42-29) with 3:01 on the clock. The Panthers backed out and started holding the ball at 2:20, forcing Vine to foul.

Burkhart twice hit both ends of a 1-and-1 to all but seal the victory.

Burkhart said hard work and good team chemistry had been keys to the Panthers' special season.

As far as advancing to the state gives us a chance to show our talent in another part of the state and it lets other people see how Knox County players play ball."

SNIP, SNIP: Coach Courtney expressed thanks to tournament director Dylan Rayho for allowing the Panthers to cut down the net, even Burkhart, Bryce's dad, and assistant coach Steve Waugh plus teammates points. Marshawn Bowers added helped hoist players up so they could do the cutting.

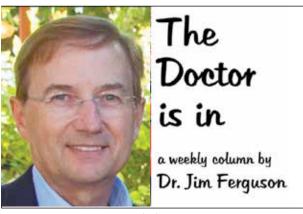

> "I'm happy he let us do that," said Courtney. "It was the biggest win in the history of our school. I wanted our boys to have that moment."

PTSD

This is not a paid endorsement, but I'm a fan of The Teaching Company, an organization that contracts with college professors to develop university level courses, and then markets these courses to people who enjoy continuing education. In fact, most of my non-science education has occurred over the last three decades through reading, study and with courses like those of The Teaching Company. We live in a time of unprecedented access to information and educational opportunities. Learning how to search for answers to your questions, is foundational to a lifetime of learning, and is what I still teach young doctors today.

Later this month, I have a surprise for my readers, but until that time I'll just tease you and keep plodding away with my self taught areas of interest, including history, philosophy, religion and politics, which are then sprinupon foundational science and my medical expertise. I realize I sometimes disappoint the "nattering nabobs of negativity" who clamor for me to write only about what I might describe as predictable, dry as toast, medical topics. This column is in the Health and Wellness section of the Focus, but in my defense, each week I write about what interests me, and after all, it is my opinion column. I actually like being a bit unpredictable. Like "a box of chocolates," I never want you to know as you begin each column, what you're going to get.

Recently, I was intrigued to learn that scientists are now describing PTSD (post traumatic stress disorder) after serious medical illnesses like heart attacks, strokes or confinement in intensive care units. Though I admit I am no expert in this disorder or other emotional illnesses, I do have considerable experience treatkled over my essays built ing depression and anxiety disorders which occur commonly in an internal medicine practice. However, like most of you, I had associated PTSD with physical or emotional trauma such as assault or sexual violence, combat or mass conflict and displacement. We often hear that our soldiers returning from the battlefield are left with emotional scars from their combat experiences. I imagine these as aftershocks from a violent earthquake.

One wonders if PTSD is occurring more frequently or it is just more readily recognized by medical professionals. Interestingly, "soldier's heart syndrome" was described in the Civil War. This later became known as "battle fatigue" or "shell shock" in WWII. Perhaps this similar constellation of symptoms is now codified as PTSD.

The incidence of this post traumatic syndrome from any of a number of causes may be as high as 10% in the United States. The World Health Organization reports a 2% incidence of this condition worldwide, but curiously only a 1% incidence in Australians. I once read that the most common cause of death in the former Soviet Union was a "cold." Apparently, Putin's Russia didn't have alcoholism, venereal disease or pneumonia. My point is, diagnosis and reporting may be sketchy and politically motivated.

As my readers know, I think movies can sometimes best depict what might be otherwise incomprehensible. Examples are the perception of a paranoid schizophrenic in the movie A Beautiful Mind, or the representation of a psychopath in No Country for Old Men. The Tom Hanks character in the movie Sully demonstrates the classic symptoms of PTSD. After the harrowing airplane crash into the Hudson River, pilot Sully experiences nightmares, flashbacks of the crash, sleep disturbance and intrusive thoughts, perhaps complicated by the investigation of the crash and his culpability.

With the marvels of modern technology scientists can now measure an increased volume of certain brain stem structures like the hippocampus and the amygdala in patients with PTSD. They can also measure chronically elevated neurotransmitters such as norepinephrine, which perhaps explains the hypervigilance of PTSD sufferers, somewhat akin to the "fight or flight" response we all learned of in high school health class.

I'm a bit surprised that President Trump appears undaunted by the 92% negative coverage of the scurrilous "drive by" media. He is fortunate to have avoided

PTSD, since the disorder psychic trauma. With virtually the entire Washington establishment (the Swamp) after him, along with academia, leftists and the Holly-weirds, who among us could survive such withering attacks? And yet, Trump lives on and apparently thrives. A robust economy, a revitalized military and a resurgent and once again proud America on the world stage are metrics of his successes.

Maybe Trump is not at risk. It is Pelosi and the Democrats who have utterly lost their minds. As I watched the State of the Union address, I thought Bernie Sanders' head was going to explode and that Pelosi might chew off her lip. It doesn't require a doctor to see the scowls on the faces of Democrats to understand that someone has a serious problem. On a humorous note, a Facebook post commented, on the Congresswomen in white, that they had not seen so many Democrats in white since the Klu Klux Klan was formed. And as I listen to the economics major from Boston University, Alexandria Ocachia Cortez's (AOC) plans for a Green New Deal, I'm glad that my kids did not waste our family's resources on an Ivy League/New England "college education" and become poisoned with irrationality.

Perhaps we'll all develop occurs after physical or PTSD as a result of the progressive-socialist-Democrat war waged against the unborn, prayer, the national anthem, the American people and the notion of American Greatness. The only check on these "new Puritans" of the politically correct left, socialists and Democrats is Donald Trump. Daily, he remains in my prayers, as does those which are lost to reason, American tradition and apparently have been coopted by lunacy and evil.

> Abraham Lincoln was raised by a fundamentalist and abusive father who drove Lincoln away from his Christian heritage. However, he rediscovered his faith in the crucible of the Civil War. Lincoln once said, "Many times I have been driven upon my knees with the conviction that all my faculties and those around me were insufficient for the problems of the day." I concur with perhaps our greatest President.

> Therefore, I pray daily for AOC and Nancy Pelosi. I pray for President Trump to "keep [his] head when all around [him] are losing theirs..." (Rudyard Kipling). And I urge you to pray and "speak the truth in love." It will keep you sane.
