

Recode work session raises more questions

By [Name]
 A recent work session on the city's proposed recode has raised more questions than answers, according to some city council members. The session, held on Monday, focused on the city's proposed changes to its zoning code, which would allow for more flexible use of property.

City Council members expressed concerns about the proposed changes, particularly regarding the potential for increased traffic and noise. Some council members also questioned the city's ability to enforce the new code effectively.

The city's planning department is currently reviewing the feedback from the work session and will be holding additional meetings in the coming weeks. The city hopes to have a final decision on the recode by the end of the year.
