

...the ...
...the ...
...the ...
...the ...
...the ...

...the ...
...the ...
...the ...
...the ...
...the ...

...the ...
...the ...
...the ...
...the ...
...the ...

...the ...
...the ...
...the ...
...the ...
...the ...

Corryton Senior Center Welcomes Mayor Glenn Jacobs

By Amy Rose-Holmes

Mayor Glenn Jacobs, who will become the 10th mayor of the city, was welcomed to the Corryton Senior Center on Tuesday, June 15. The mayor was accompanied by his wife, Jennifer, and a group of city council members. The group was joined by a group of senior citizens who were seated at a long table in the center's dining room. The mayor and his wife were seated at the head of the table, and the city council members were seated along the sides. The senior citizens were all smiling and looking at the mayor and his wife. The mayor was speaking to the group and thanking them for their hospitality. He also mentioned that he was looking forward to working with them on various projects in the future.

The mayor and his wife were seated at the head of the table, and the city council members were seated along the sides. The senior citizens were all smiling and looking at the mayor and his wife. The mayor was speaking to the group and thanking them for their hospitality. He also mentioned that he was looking forward to working with them on various projects in the future.

The mayor and his wife were seated at the head of the table, and the city council members were seated along the sides. The senior citizens were all smiling and looking at the mayor and his wife. The mayor was speaking to the group and thanking them for their hospitality. He also mentioned that he was looking forward to working with them on various projects in the future.

Mayor Glenn Jacobs and his wife Jennifer are seated at a table with several other people, including city council members and senior citizens, during a meal at the Corryton Senior Center.

Continued on page 2

Stray Cats, $50 million in bonds, and county budget discussed at commission

By Mike Smith
Published June 15

The county board of commissioners met on Tuesday, June 15, to discuss a variety of issues, including a $50 million bond issue, the county budget, and stray cats. The board was joined by a group of senior citizens who were seated at a long table in the center's dining room. The board was all smiling and looking at the mayor and his wife. The mayor was speaking to the group and thanking them for their hospitality. He also mentioned that he was looking forward to working with them on various projects in the future.

The board was all smiling and looking at the mayor and his wife. The mayor was speaking to the group and thanking them for their hospitality. He also mentioned that he was looking forward to working with them on various projects in the future.

The board was all smiling and looking at the mayor and his wife. The mayor was speaking to the group and thanking them for their hospitality. He also mentioned that he was looking forward to working with them on various projects in the future.

Tribe of Judah Event Center offers services to residents