City Council asked to delay Recode vote

"We've got a lot more work to do. The neighborhoods need time."

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

The consensus of Thursday's City Council Work Session on Recode appears to be to postpone a final vote. The results of two years and numerous public meetings on totally rewriting the city's zoning and enforcement regulations may not be decided in a final meeting May 14.

But several city council members, including Marshall Stair, Lauren Rider, Andrew Roberto and Mark Campen favor making that date another work session and voting on the controversial revamping of city zoning 30 days later. The council met in work session Thursday evening in what had been announced as the final Recode discussion. Council members Gwen McKenzie and

Secondly, Owen reported that House Bill 939 is Account Bill. This bill allows parents to use public funds to send their children to private schools or to cover other educational experiences. The biggest problem with this bill is that when a student accepts funds (voucher funding) he/ she gives up federal rights to Special Education funding. Another problem with the bill is that students do not have to spend all of

Parents can put this money into a savings fund to earn interest until the student is age 22. This could be an incentive for the student not to graduate at age 18. A third problem with the program is that to qualify for the program, a family of four must substantiate that they earn no more than $64,000 the year before the funding is given. However, there are no restrictions that the LaKenya Middlebrook was chosen by Knox County Democrats recently to lead the party becoming the first African American woman to do so. The UT graduate, attorney, and civil rights advocate was elected unanimously and without opposition to become Democratic Party Chairperson.

Middlebrook specifically thanked her friend and nominator, Jamie Ballinger, and her father, noted civil rights leader Rev. Herald Middlebrook, who seconded his daughter's nomination.

"I rise to second the nomination of a young lady I've known all her life!" said Rev. Herald Middlebrook.

"I humbly accept this nomination and I'm thankful for the support of Jamie Ballinger and my daddy. I believe in this party and what we've accomplished, all the hard work you have done and we will continue to do this work," Middlebrook said.

April 8, 2019 What does it mean to file something under seal?

You may or may not have realized this, but almost all court documents are public records. If you really wanted to, you could show up at the courthouse and peruse court filings. In fact, bored reporters may do just that,

Most cases do not qualify for anything about them to be kept under seal. However, some cases, or parts of some cases, are not open to the public. You may have heard of documents being filed under seal, but what does that mean exactly? It generally means that documents are filed in a closed, manilla envelope with words on the outside of the envelope stating that the contents are to be "filed under seal."

One of the most common things to be filed under seal is that the statistical data of the parties in a divorce action. The statistical data contains the parties' social security numbers and so the courts require that it be filed under seal.

Other cases whether the documents are not necessarily "under seal," but they are not open to the public, are juvenile records. The records for juvenile cases are not open to the public.

Similarly, order of protection cases and criminal cases involving domestic violence are typically cases where the access to the court files by the public is restricted or the information on the victim is.

If a case involves a sensitive matter, or a juvenile party in a civil case (like a car wreck), then that may be reason for the court to file documents under seal. Likewise, the case may be of such a sensitive nature that the court decides that the court documents need to be sealed.

What if you want to look at something that is filed "under seal?" Well, usually it takes filing a motion and asking the judge to "unseal," the documents filed under seal and allowing you to look at them. Quite the process, just to look at some documents that may or may not matter, but that may very well be the point in filing something under seal in the first place.

This past Thursday, April 4, the third City Council Recode Workshop was held. It was different from the first two workshops in that serious questions were finally asked to city council about why Recode is actually needed. In Philosophy there is a concept known as a "false construct." It is one of the logical fallacies. The claim the zoning code of Knoxville has not been updated for fifty is a false construct. It is simply not true in any way. The zoning code of Knoxville was not written all at once, like the planning commission and city council are trying to do now; it was written over fifty years. Every single year since 1969 the zoning code has been updated. It is modern, coherent, and protects the property rights of the people of Knoxville. Recode has gone on for two years now and the fifth at the end of April. How did anyone think they could rewrite fifty years of Knoxville zoning case law in only two years?

What was the supposed reason for this critical and urgent need to change the zoning of the City of Knoxville? Because according to the Recode Knoxville website fifty years ago there was an "emphasis on suburban development" and that resulted in "a sprawled, less efficient pattern that left some parts of Knoxville behind." Those quotes are directly from the Recode Knoxville website. What does that mean in English? It means that Recode does not want or need automobiles. Do you want or need your automobile? As the population of Knoxville is aging how intelligent is it to try to ban cars or greatly reduce their use?

First District City Council member Stephanie Welch was asked in a radio interview on WETR FM 92.3 recently, "How do we get people to understand that taking public transportation is a good thing?" Councilwoman Welch replied, "I absolutely think it is a good thing and nobody will like my answer on this but I think you have to make it harder for people to drive. When it is so much easier to get in your car and drive, people don't take public transportation. That is draft of Recode comes out really what it comes down

In France this past winter there were riots in the streets for months when the price of gas was significantly increased with a new gas tax to combat climate change. After months of historic arson, riots, and mayhem across France the government decided to remove the gas tax. The people of France demanded the use of their cars.

Citizens had to wait for three hours to speak to city council in the workshop because unlike the other local governments in East Tennessee, Knoxville City Council holds their public forum at the end of the meeting. Of the ten scheduled speakers only seven remained. Before public forum began, Vice Mayor Finbarr Saunders said that because it was so late that the ten speakers would have only three minutes instead of five minutes otherwise they would be there all night. Two speakers spoke before a person in the crowd said, "This is our meeting, don't take our time away from us." Another member in the audience agreed. Councilman Mark Campen then said, "They've waited for three hours and they need their chance." The speaking time then was extended to five minutes per speaker for the last five speakers.

In Thursday's public forum Danny Kirby of Turkey a multitude of errors, exaggerations, and disingenuous claims about Recode in the five minutes he was given to speak in public forum. Kirby told council he represented 13 properties and eight other properties under other entity names and none of them received written notice about Recode. That is a 100% failure rate for some of the biggest stores in Knoxville. Kirby described the Recode notice as incomplete in that it did not explain whether properties could be upzoned or downzoned. Kirby explained that in his opinion the planning commission had not followed proper legal procedure for rezoning. Kirby also explained that Recode was not needed to build Mixed Use design buildings. For those who do not know, Knoxville already has several Mixed Use buildings.

Creek Land Partners listed

Planning Commission Executive Director Gerald Green claimed that 50,000 notices about Recode were mailed to property owners yet the planning commission received only 350 phone calls. That is .7 of one percent. How is that possible? If that is correct, then the written notice was worthless and ineffective. Was that by design?

Recode Knoxville also alleges that there will be no changes to the building code. That is not accurate either. In Draft 4 of Recode that cannot be done now. It plain concrete block is increases the cost of comdeleted and substituted with the more expensive concrete masonry units (CMU). That is a change in the building code. This will increase the cost of new commercial buildings. Many other design, PR, and marketing claims made by Executive Director Gerald Green and the planning commission have also been found to be questionable.

Executive Director Green explained at the beginning of the meeting that the planning commission had received new comments before the comments would be closed. Some of those comments warned that the Mixed Use design that the planning commission had chosen was not ADA (Americans with Disabilities Act) compliant. Green said, "The Mixed Use design does not violate ADA standards. If they did downtown would be in violation of ADA standards." This claim is ridiculous. The streets of downtown were laid out long before 1900 and many of the buildings are that old. The Americans with Disabilities Act was not passed until 1986.

Recode has become similar to Obamacare. We have to pass it to find out what's in it. We'll fix it after we pass it. The truth is Knoxville does not need Recode. It provides nothing mercial construction. It is anti-automobile. Recode is biased against the elderly and handicapped.

The biggest reason Knoxville does not need Recode is that it could very well be a Trojan Horse property tax increase. Will your property be upzoned? If it is your property tax will go up. How is any of this fair? Incomplete and ineffective written notice. Poor Mixed Use design. Accessory Dwelling Unit apartments next to your house. More taxes. More unwanted population density. You have to ride the bus or walk. Is this the Knoxville you want?

In public forum speaker Michael Stinson asked City Council to place Recode on the ballot in August or November. He was greeted with silent stares, blank expression, and no response. If city council will not place Recode on the ballot for the people to vote on the people will have to place Recode on the ballot by themselves. Speak with your neighbors. Protect your property rights. If the city council won't vote to let the people decide then the only recourse would be to proceed with their own ballot initiative through the petition process.

"There had been cross-pollination between the two groups," said Wilson. "Some of their people had performed in our shows and vice versa. It was really a natural transition."

For a number of years, the place on Gay St. fit the bill, but by 2013, it became apparent a new space would be needed. Being able to seat only 50 or so people meant sometimes turning patrons away. Dressing rooms were cramped and plaster was falling off the walls. Other needed infrastructure was too expensive for TKD's nonprofit bottom line to handle. It was time to move again. PAGE A4 Who will be the Good Neighbor of the Year?

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

Excitement is growing in Knoxville as the city moves toward its 2019 Neighborhood Conference. Neighborhood groups and individuals are wondering who will be selected as Good Neighbor of the Year.

The popular annual conference, set for May 18 at the Knoxville Convention Center, will feature more than 80 information booths from city departments, organizations and non-profit groups. Neighborhood Coordinator Debbie Sharp told The Focus that additional booth space may be available after April 9th until April 11th.

The Neighborhood Conference features a free awards and networking luncheon, the selection of finalists and winner for Good Neighbor of the Year, and various workshops and door prizes. The idea is to celebrate neighborhood achievements, network with other neighborhoods, meet city officials and candidates and basically celebrate Knoxville's vibrant communities.

You can get more information on the Neighborhood Conference by contacting the Office of Neighborhoods, Courtney Durrett, at (865)215-3077 or email her at cdurrett@knovilletn.org.

You can also find information on the internet at www.knoxvilletn.gov/neighborhoods or on Facebook at "KnoxvilleNeighborhoods."

No charge but a love offering will be taken. Don't miss this spirit-filled singing. Everyone welcome!!! to his defense to declare boundaries. Women feel the man was not a sexual abuser or predator.

We're in a world where too much sexual abuse does occur. Men, and women, on rare occasions, take advantage of others in their lives. They treat them like possessions instead of humans. The pain that they inflict lasts lifetimes. We have no place for that kind of thing in our world. I am the first to denounce such vile behavior by individuals.

What I wonder is when did acceptable become unacceptable? It appears that our world has lost all semblance of common sense. The slightest show of affection is considered intrusive and abusive. Joe Biden has not been a sexual abuser during his life. Yes, he's been a "hugger," something that didn't used to be improper. For years, men were accused of being incapable of showing any emotions or affection. During those years, males were encouraged to let go of the "macho" image and to become sensitive, to be in touch with their feelings.

Here's a newsflash: most men aren't the terrible life forms that some take advantage of women, and they should be called out. The rest of us are attracted to women, love their company, and search for a partner with whom to share their lives. We are visual creatures who appreciate beauty. Women know this because they spend time, effort, and money to look nice. Yet, some cry foul when a man acknowledges that beauty by smiling, looking, or touching an arm,

The 1924 Senate Race in Tennessee Part Three

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill rayhill865@gmail.com

General Democratic nomination for the United States Senate in Trenton, Tennessee. The General spoke before a crowd estimated at 5,000 incumbent, Senator John Knight Shields, as well as criticizing the record of the third candidate in the race, former Tennessee Supreme Court Justice Nathan L. Bachman of Chattanooga.

Lawrence D. Tyson's military ties did him no political harm, while John Knight Shields' refusal to back Woodrow Wilson and the League of Nations did him no good. Democrats in Henry County, many of whom were veterans, endorsed Tyson's candidacy while at the same time denouncing Senator Shields. The meeting in Henry County was presided over by the Reverend P. P. Pullen, a Confederate veteran; many others had served under the General World War.

While campaigning in Kingsport, Tennessee, General Tyson gave much the same speech as his campaign opener in Trenton. laws, as well promoting the rights of women. The women folk of Tennessee had only been voting since 1920 and had become an important constituency in the state. Senator Shields had alienated many female voters by his stance against women's suffrage. Unlike his colleague Kenneth D. McKellar, John Knight Shields had argued voting rights for women was an issue for individual states to consider. Senator Shields did not believe the federal government should dictate to the states. McKellar had been an avid supporter of voting rights for women and employed a woman as his chief of staff in his Washington office. The position taken by John K. Shields was hardly unique in Tennessee; notably Congressman Cordell Hull had taken precisely the same position as Shields, as did, at least initially, former governor A. H. Roberts. Interestingly, both Roberts and Hull had lost elections in 1920 to Republican challengers.

Lawrence Tennessee. Judge Hugh D. Tyson of Knoxville B. Lindsey, a candidate for had officially kicked off the Republican nomination his campaign for the for the U.S. Senate, was scheduled to participate as well.

By the end of May, Senator Shields had returned to Tennessee persons. Tyson flayed the from Washington and immediately met with leaders to confer about the campaign. The news could not have been altogether pleasing to the senator, as it was obvious General L. D. Tyson's bid was picking up steam. It seemed Shields was keeping a rather low profile, as the senator did not bother to attend the Tennessee State Democratic Convention in Nashville. His junior colleague, K. D. McKellar, attended, as did former governor Benton McMillin, former governor and U.S. senator James B. Frazier, and incumbent governor confident of his chances in Austin Peay. The absence of Tennessee's senior senator did not go unnoticed. also catching fire from Robert P. Williams, clerk of the city court of Knoxville, in France during the First had been attending state Democratic conventions since 1890 and wondered why Senator Shields was not there. "I was asked by many of the delegates as to the whereabouts of Tyson did apparently score Senator John K. Shields," in the audience when he the city but did not attend only Tennessee, but also to answer that question for himself." Williams added, "I was afraid he would be embarrassed when they indorsed [sic] Woodrow Wilson and the League of Nations. At any event, he was conspicuous by his absence." With the state convention over and the beginning of June, the real campaign for the senatorial nomination got under way. General L. D. Tyson, hearty former soldier that he was, kept anything but a low profile, crisscrossing the state in search of votes. Tyson agreed Senator Shields' opposition to the Wilson administration and American entry into the League of Nations resonated with Tennesseans. "Senator Shields' vote against the League of Nations," Tyson said, "is the principal thing he must explain to the voters of Tennessee. It was his opposition to the League that brought to light his other activities against President Wilson." The state convention duly endorsed the League of Nations, which was an implicit rebuke to Senator Shields.

County and the presence of veterans was impossible to miss. Tyson's local campaign manager, Colonel W. L. Terry, was also a veteran of the First World War. Confederate veterans abounded in Memphis and General Tyson proudly recounted many of the gray-haired veterans of the Civil War were active on his behalf. Tyson noted with satisfaction he was expected to carry West Tennessee and was East Tennessee.

Senator Shields was Judge Nathan Bachman. Speaking in Winchester, Tennessee, Judge Bachman had been greeted at the train station by numerous citizens and was escorted to his hotel by a marching band from his native Chattanooga. In his speech, Bachman charged John K. ideals of Woodrow Wilson."

"He is now a candidate

his campaign in Shelby believe it to be right for him to conduct a campaign for a higher office from the bench of the state Supreme Court.

Bachman gave the General a taste of his own medicine during his opening speech, noting Tyson "waited until he was long past the meridian of life before he ever became interested in public journalism, and it was only after he announced his candidacy for the greatest office within the gift of the people of Tennessee" that "it was suddenly announced that he had acquired from the owners of the Knoxville Sentinel" control of the "great daily newspaper ... " Bachman was quick to repeat that Tyson had reputedly bought control of the Knoxville Sentinel for $1 million. A million dollars in 1924 was a staggering sum of money, almost the equivalent of $14.5 million today. points with the women Williams said. "He was in Shields had betrayed not Bachman complained Franklin County was the of Shields' record while in "this newspaper is daily official opening of his the U.S. Senate. Worse still, according to Judge Bachman, many of the Sentinel's readers were unaware Tyson's newspaper "that it might print daily the exaggerations about his candidacy that constantly appear therein." Bachman scoffed that L. D. Tyson had realized an overwhelming desire to pursue journalistic endeavors and become the editor of a daily newspaper. Judge Bachman insisted Tyson had bought the Sentinel to further his own senatorial ambitions. The judge had a point, as General Tyson sold the Sentinel not long after the 1924 election. Judge Bachman said L. D. Tyson's entire campaign for the United States Senate was based upon the approximately eighteen months he had been in "the military service of this country." "General Tyson says little of the avocations in which he was engaged during the other, more than 30 years of his career," Bachman said. "He does not tell you that during nearly all of that time he was engaged in the operation of large manufacturing and industrial plants through the ownership of which he was enabled to amass a great fortune." Bachman

Judge Bachman pressed his point, noting quite nearly "every one of those manufacturing enterprises" owned by Tyson had "been a large beneficiary of the protective tariff schedules that have from time to time been placed by Republican Congresses on the statute books of this country."

should take part in that In a press release, McKellar related, "I have never disclosed to a of the three candidates I expect to vote for, and at this time do not even know myself." Whatever controversy existed about McKellar supporting Shields had been created by the Memphis Commercial Appeal, which complained the junior senator had placed in the Congressional Record a speech made by the senior senator. McKellar said his placing the speech of his senior colleague in the Congressional Record was a common courtesy extended between senatorial colleagues and was above petty criticism. What McKellar had put into the Congressional Record Bachman's speech in for Shields was a recitation he had extended every Senator John Knight possible courtesy to all of the candidates; McKellar said he had "furnished General Tyson with records or documents that he, or his manager, has asked for, and just as I would in like manner perform the same courteous, official acts for Judge Bachman, should he so request." McKellar poked at the editor of the Commercial Appeal, saying, "I would even put one of C. P. J. Mooney's editorials in the Record, should he ask me to do so, though I might not agree with such editorial at all." Mooney had been vociferously opposed to Senator McKellar's reelection just two years earlier. In just over a month's time, Tennesseans would go to the polls to determine the Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate.

Judge Nathan L. Bachman of Chattanooga, Tennessee, circa 1924.

before the democracy of Tennessee," Bachman cried, "and asks that democracy for its indorsement of his course as the bitter antagonist and foe of Woodrow Wilson, and as the open and avowed ally of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts." Bachman did not dwell entirely upon the perfidy of John K. Shields, but in a lengthy oration, the judge landed on several issues important to Democratic constituencies, including women, small business and farmers. Like General Tyson, Bachman pledged he would support American participation in the League of Nations. Bachman told his audience he was opposed to unrestricted immigration by aliens and defended himself from charges made by General Tyson for his failure to enlist during the Spanish-American War and the First World War. Tyson had also been critical of Bachman for having resigned his seat on the Tennessee Supreme Court. Bachman pointed out John K. Shields had "waged his candidacy When asked for comment for two months before the legislature in 1913 for the office of United States Senator and only resigned after his election." Bachman said he did not Shields was not entirely bereft of political allies. The Nashville Banner, owned by the Stahlman family, was solidly behind the senator in his reelection campaign. The bitter rival of the Nashville Tennessean, the animus between the two daily newspapers in Tennessee's capitol had seeped into the crevices of relations between the rival publishers. The Banner, according to Luke Lea's Tennessean, had practically all but endorsed the election of President Calvin Coolidge and was threatening to back the GOP nominee for the U.S. Senate if Shields lost his reelection bid inside the Democratic primary.

John Draper Erwin, the Tennessean's national correspondent in Washington, had worked for both senators Luke Lea and John Knight Shields at one time or another. Erwin published a story to likely refute rumors Senator Kenneth D. McKellar was backing his senior colleague for renomination. Erwin wrote McKellar denied "giving aid and comfort" to Senator John K. Shields. Erwin thought McKellar's statement "direct and positive" and believed it "will settle all controversies over the matter." Senator McKellar insisted, "I have been absolutely neutral Cannabidiol, aka CBD, oil is a substance derived from the industrial hemp plant. While marijuana also comes from hemp plants CBD doesn't have a high concentration of THC, the psychoactive part of marijuana that produces a "high."

Tom Wyrick, owner of the newly opened CBD American Shaman in Powell, praises the many uses of its CBD products, whether as an oil, cream or edibles.

"We help serve the public and our community with an alternative measure to traditional addictive and harmful medicines with a fully natural, organic product. It has the ability to help millions of people with a wide range of symptoms," Wyrick told The Focus.

"Myself and my business partner, Jeff Cody, feel very fortunate to store. We enjoy teaching the benefits gained from CBD. Our objective is to teach and promote wellness," he said.

Wyrick explained that CBD American Shaman began because the company founder, Vince Sanders, had an uncle with lung cancer and was looking for a natural treatment beyond chemo and radiation. By the third month on CBD oil his uncle was in remission. From that point on Sanders made it a goal to produce high quality and the purest form of CBD available.

CBD oil is legal in all 50 states. CBD American Shaman products are 100% organic, gluten free and have no heavy metals or insecticides. CBD relieves stress, maintains focus, helps pain management and much more.

The new mayor will get about $20,000 more than the current mayor, Madeline Rogero. The total salary would be $162,500. Incoming and existing council members will also get a pay increase as authorized by a previous vote on council.

The council may also hear from opponents of the "Magnolia" wordage on the gateway sign for East Knoxville. Some residents want the sign to read "Park City" and have been very vocal about that in the past few weeks. There's nothing on the agenda about the designation or signage.

The council also plans to honor the Bearden High School boys basketball team for its first state championship. There are also several zonings on the agenda along with the Liberty Street Multimodal Project and the Central Street Streetscape Project.

A study of the Asheville Highway, East Magnolia Avenue and Rutledge Pike interchange may get $250,000 from the state with the city kicking in $50,000.

The mayor may be authorized to seek $50,000 from the state for overtime pay of additional patrols to identify and arrest drug and alcohol violators caught driving. The mayor may also be authorized

Chapter One of the city code may be amended to add an ordinance authorizing the mayor to formally adopt any seal, insignia, coat of arms, emblem, sign, logo or other image for use by the city and its departments, boards and agencies.

The Knoxville-Knox County Planning Commission is asking for approval of the One Year Plan it prepared and, on the consent agenda, a request for the approval of $1,200 for the North Knoxville Business and Professional Association to use in its North Broadway Bash event. Another fund request is for $2,300 to Bike Walk Tennessee as agent for Open Streets Knoxville. The Tennessee Equality Council, Inc. may get $1,450, for the marketing efforts of Knox Pride.

The sum of $ 8,300 may go to Metro Drug Coalition for recovery housing and $ 15,800 could go to the Greater Schools Partnership to be used in the Community Schools initiative.

The council is also being asked to approve the mayor's appointment of Jay Price to serve on the Knox County Regional Solid Waste Board.

The meeting concludes with public forum where any resident may address the council.

The city council meets tomorrow at 6 p.m. in the main assembly room of the City-County Building.

Bevil quits mayor race, At Large Seat C has four candidates

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

Libertarian John Bevil has withdrawn from the race for Knoxville mayor. Bevil said that since the local Libertarian Party is not endorsing anyone in the non-partisan race and because of his health and family he is withdrawing. Bevil suggested his supporters vote for Fletcher Burkhardt in the primary.

That leaves Burkhardt, Indya

Kincannon, Eddie Mannis, and Marshall Stair in the race and possibly other candidates will join the contest. Several have declared treasurers, picked up petitions and are seeking signatures. The deadline for qualifying is May 16.

Knoxville Mayor Madeline Rogero is term limited and has said she has no immediate political ambitions, wanting to continue to be involved as a volunteer in community causes and spend more time with her family.

Several people have voiced an interest or designated a treasurer in the city council election. Much of the interest is turning to At Large Seat C currently held by Finbarr Saunders who is term limited. Those candidates, thus far include Nate Martin, Amy Midis, Amelia Parker and David Williams.

Former Knox County Commissioner Bob Thomas has named a treasure and is campaigning but won't decide which of the three At Large seats he may select yet.

Seeking At Large Seat A so far are Lynne Fugate and Charles A. Lomax, Jr., vying to replace Councilman George Wallace. The At Large Seat B position has David Hayes and Janet Testerman running to replace Councilman Marshall Stair, who is term limited and running for Knoxville mayor.

Councilman Mark Campen of District 5 is also term limited and Charles Allen Thomas and Charles Al-Bawi are running for that seat.

Judge John R. Rosson, Jr., the sitting Municipal Judge, is seeking to remain in office and so far has no opposition.

HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS NOTEBOOK Florida finds a prize in Bearden guard Ques Glover

By Steve Williams

Ques Glover's recruiting stock went up and up in this year's TSSAA state basketball tournament.

After surprisingly little buzz about him as a prospect in the regular season, the 6-foot Bearden guard put on a show as he helped lead the Bulldogs to the Class AAA state championship at MTSU in Murfreesboro.

His quickness, passing and shooting were on display in his three games at the state and had to receive high marks from college scouts in attendance. Even Bearden fans who had seen him a lot during the season came away even more impressed.

A member of the University of Florida coaching staff came to Knoxville to watch him work out and on April 1 Glover committed to sign with the Gators, announcing his decision on Twitter.

"They just made me feel really wanted," said Glover. "They went back and watched all my games this year and all my AAU games. They really showed me that they cared about me and my family. It really

As it turned out, the Jones family's church -First Baptist Concord – has partnered with Overcoming Believers in downtown Knoxville which is a sponsor of the Change Center.

With the Change Center set up for roller skating and rock climbing, Paul Jones thought the Center would be perfect for a non-traditional athletic activity like Enoch does, and contacted CC Director Nicole Chandler. The old Catholic versus Webb rivalry can still be seen in a couple of sports.

"It's a spirited rivalry and we've worked really hard and I give a lot of credit to both my players and my staff and Catholic players and their staff - to keep it a healthy rivalry," said veteran Webb lacrosse coach Rico Silvera after an 11-3 win that was a 2-2 tie at halftime.

"It's one of respect, 'I will play hard.' At the end, we take a knee together. I'm really proud of our kids and their kids and it was just a great night for lacrosse."

Central loses heartbreaker to Oak Ridge at home

Baseball can sometimes be a cruel and fickle mistress. And coach Devan Parrott and the Central High Bobcats discovered just how mean the game can be.

Central hosted Oak Ridge Tuesday night and opened an early lead only to see the Wildcats notch a comeback victory at Tommy Schumpert Park.

A loss to Oak Ridge stung badly enough. But the Wildcats scored the eventual winning run on a wild pitch in the top of the eighth inning. Young Warriors nab comeback win in home opener

By Ken Lay

In a match that's become an annual tradition at the Bearden Invitational, Christian Academy of Knoxville and Central High tangled on the soccer field last week.

And the third installment of this new rivalry went to the Warriors, who rallied to post a 3-2 comeback victory Thursday night at the CAK Soccer Stadium.

It was the first home match of the 2019 season for CAK, which scored a pair of unanswered goals after halftime to claim their second victory of the campaign. The Warriors (2-2-1) had to come from behind twice but at the end of the evening, coach Jon Day couldn't have been happier.

"I'm extremely proud of these guys," Day said. "I have a really young team. This is the youngest team that we've had at CAK in about 15 or 16 years.

"These guys are growing and they're learning. Tonight, they played hard. They're playing as a team and tonight, they battled. They really battled."

For his part, Chris Quinn, Central's thirdyear head coach, was also pleased.

The Knoxville FOCUS Jim Chaney's Return

By Alex Norman

You can be excused if you feel like Jarrett Guarantano has been on campus for a decade. In fact, this will only be the fourth season for the redshirt junior quarterback.

But Guarantano has not had an easy go of it. He's played in two seasons, while sitting out 2016 as a redshirt. In 2017 and 2018 he took a savage battering from opposing defenses. Partly because of the inefficiency of his offensive line... and partly because he holds onto the football too long.

And partly because there has been no consistency within the Tennessee football program. This will be Guarantano's fourth season at UT ... with his fourth offensive coordinator.

The good news is that Guaranrole, the highly respected offen- is not always a bed of roses out Callaway, Brandon Johnson and sive coordinator from Georgia. For Chaney, it is a return to Knoxville after serving as OC under Lane Kiffin and Derek Dooley between 2009-2012.

So far during spring practice, Chaney likes what he has seen from Guarantano, while understanding he hasn't had an ideal time in the Tennessee quarterback room.

"I think that Jarrett is doing a great job of learning his role in a new system," said Chaney. "He has been through a few of us (offensive coordinators). What is interesting when you look at guys like him in the college game, what am I the fourth coordinator he has had? How hard it is for them not to get calloused and cynical about the game of football and still be fresh with it and eager to tano gets Jim Chaney to fill that learn. It is tough sometimes. It that Jauan (Jennings), Marquez ment, it's overall strength or it's there for the quarterbacks. It is kind of, what we had here before with (former Tennessee quarterback) Jonathan Crompton, there are some similarities there. They are both good football players and I think Jarrett is going to have a good season and he is fun to be around."

While Tennessee has struggled mightily on offense in the post-Josh Dobbs era, Chaney believes that the passing game can be a positive this Fall.

"I think when you look at the strengths of the team right now; I would argue the experience at the wide receiver corps," said Chaney. "Those kids are making plays and understand things. I will add a new concept and they have seen it before. We are not reinventing the wheel here. I think Josh Palmer are all playing good ball. (Jordan) Murphy has been making some good plays at slot. We are moving bodies around the offensive line to find some happiness there. (Jerome) Carvin is doing a better job and doing some good stuff. I would argue that the seniors at the wide receiver are something to hang your hat on."

A concern remains the offensive line. There is talent in that group, but remains a work in progress.

"I'll tell you what you find when you watch big offensive linemen," said Chaney. "You see their fleas and then you go to work on their fleas... Sometimes you are not initially sure always whether it's lower body strength, it's lateral movements, it's hand placeknowledge of the offense. We will be able to define that for our kids and let them go to work on it and they will. Our kids have proven they will work."

April 8, 2019

One move that could pay dividends for Chaney and the Tennessee offensive was the hiring of former Vols quarterback Tee Martin to work on Chaney's staff.

"Tee is a bright guy and has been around a lot of football," said Chaney. "He brings a lot of good input. He is a fantastic recruiter and fun-loving guy. I am tickled to death that he is here. He is a great sounding board for me to talk about the passing game with. He knows what he is doing, and he is an exceptional coach. We are becoming very close friends, so I am enjoying my time with Tee."

A busy week in sports ... and hoping Kellie comes home

This may be the busiest sports week of the year.

Coming on the heels of Sunday's NASCAR race at Bristol and the NCAA women's basketball finals will

Monday night.

The Tennessee Smokies also wrap up their first home baseball series of the season Monday.

Of course, major league baseball is now in full swing and the NBA is going strong. And in addition to those professional sports, the Masters tees off Thursday.

UT will have its annual Orange and White football game Saturday night starting at 6 and there also will be action on The Hill Thursday through the weekend involving the baseball, softball, track and women's tennis teams. In fact, UT is billing it an "All-Vol Weekend."

Jeremy Pruitt has been campaigning for a sell-out crowd at the O&W game and who can blame him. A lot of recruits will be watching at Neyland Stadium and coordinator, Jim Chaney, a ship teams (1996, would be impressed by a 34-year veteran coach who '97 and '98). I still big turnout of Vol fans.

Incidentally. I've been hearing some good things going on in the Tennessee football program during spring practice. There's been competitiveness on be the men's title game both sides of the line and seniors are taking a leadership role, particularly the veteran wide receivers.

> Fifth-year senior Jauan That's simply not Jennings spoke out last fair. week and praised the play of red-shirt junior quarterback Jarrett Guarantano.

> The addition of former Vol great Tee Martin as the team's new wide receiver coach also is paying off. His experience as a quarterback gives the receivers insight as to what the quarterback is seeing and looking for from them in the from her college passing game.

"We (receivers) are getting there, they are getting older and more mature," Jennings said. "They are getting used to playing more physical and seeing how that plays into us winning more football games."

Pruitt has turned over the offense to his new national championhas seen it all and knows remember that

Fans just need to stay patient and supportive. Pruitt deserves at least four years to rebuild a program that has been

I hear so-called experts complain about Pruitt going 5-7 last season.

MY CHOICE: I saw a photo of Kellie Jolly Harper on line the other day that bears a striking resemblance to Pat Summitt. There will never be another Pat, but Kellie I'm sure learned a lot coach and I believe she would be the best fit to take over the Lady Vols' basketball program.

thought something, discussed my opinion with others or wrote about it in The Focus or my spiritual journal. Similarly, it's sometimes hard to remember where I've heard or read something because I read extensively and peruse multiple news sites, medical journals and blogs. And for some peculiar reason, I enjoy reading multiple books at the same time. I'm currently reading five books, six if you include the Bible. I don't mention this as a feat, but as an explanation in case I repeat myself in a Focus essay. However, some things need to be repeated.

Since I'm now semiretired, I have more time for reflection, and that's good because I'm a contemplative at heart. During the four decades of my traditional medical practice I was always running to get derived from Martin Luther

Sometimes I can't to the hospital, to my office remember whether I've patients or to finally get home to my family. Often, I longed for time to research a medical topic or explore other areas of interest. I now have time, between picking up grand kids and helping my wife, Becky, with the simple household chores she's taught me how to do, such as doing wash and cleaning toilets. I even have time to manage my small concierge medical practice, teach medical students and write for The Focus. To quote my wife, "It [remains] a busy life," and that's good. I thank the Lord for life as I wake up each morning and get to "reboot" the sophisticated biological computer which sits atop my shoulders. A friend recently remarked how wonderful it would be if we recognized each other by our character rather than by our skin color. She said that thought

King's I Have a Dream speech. Last week, I wrote about my identifying persona and how I am usually recognized. Fortunately, I'm often identified as Becky's husband which supports my axiom (Fergism) that "I always look better standing next to a beautiful woman."

Though I might aspire to be recognized foremost as a Christian, I remain the doctor in our family and the go-to "expert" for medical questions. There are of course exceptions to every situation. Many times I have asked whether someone would prefer Becky or me to answer the phone - 100% of the time the response is Becky. Years ago one of my young nieces was with our family and had a medical problem. Understandably, she turned to the person with grace and asked Becky for her diagnosis.

I now have at my fingertips research tools I never possessed in most of my medical career. Before the internet, iPhones and constantly updated medical resources like UpTo-Date, I would have to spend hours in a medical library researching complicated questions or arcane medical topics. Now, I can quickly acquire information and focus my time sifting and interpreting the data and then contemplating its meaning.

Recently, a family member was hospitalized with pneumonia and complications; and that's when the questions began. One question surrounded the medical term "pneumonitis." Doctors sometimes speak in medicalese or use synonyms, that, to the laymen, cause confusion. Anytime you see a medical term ending in -itis it means inflammation of the organ to which it is attached. The organs of respiration are the lungs. And since the Greek word pneuma derives from the "breath" of life (or soul), doctors refer to a generic and is the hallmark of inflammation of the lungs as pneumonitis.

Imagine a cluster of grapes attached by their stems to the vine which is attached to the stalk and the latter to the trunk fed by the roots. By analogy, the tiny air sacs of the lungs called alveoli are the grapes, where the findings on examinaoxygen is absorbed into the bloodstream and the waste product carbon dioxide is collected for exhalation. There are 300 million air sacs in the human lungs with a combined surface area comparable to a tennis court. The alveoli connect to alveolar ducts, then to ever larger bronchi- granted our next breath, al tubes and finally the tra- until the air becomes chea or windpipe.

Pneumonia usually or when we ascend a implies an infection of the smaller bronchial tubes and alveolar air sacs. This often causes impairment of oxygen absorption, cough, fever and abnormalities of the chest X-Ray and physical examination. If your hair is long enough pull some strands down next to your ears and roll the hairs back-and-forth between your thumb and forefinger. (Guys, if your hair is too short perhaps your wife will indulge your curiosity and allow you to use her hair for your edification). The high pitched crackling sound you here is what doctors call rales inflammation in small airways and alveoli. Interestingly, the same sound can be produced by scar tissue in the lungs or even inflammation associated with radiation. Pneumonia is a clinical diagnosis and made from the patient's history of cough, fever and tion and a corresponding abnormal chest x-ray or CAT scan.

We live at the bottom of a sea of air. If you asked a fish about the water in which it swims he might ask you, "What water?" We might respond similarly, because we take for fouled as in Beijing China mountain top. At sea level there is 14.7 pounds of air pressure on each square inch of our bodies. The cabins of commercial airlines are only pressured to the equivalent of 8000 feet elevation. This is not a problem for people whose lung function is normal, but the decreased air pressure and oxygen content may be problematic for people with underlying lung disease who have difficulties with oxygen exchange. Recognizing that you have a problem is even more important than deciphering your doctor's medicalese. Fever is an extremely important clue to illness. If you learn nothing else from this essay, recognize that if you are north of 50 years old and you have a fever of 101° Fahrenheit you have a high probability of a serious medical problem and need to see to your doctor. A high fever in a child is important, but of less diagnostic import.

My recommendation? Buy an inexpensive digital thermometer at your local drugstore and learn how to use it. Just make sure that the thermometer is not one of those intended for or has been used in the southern reaches!

Knoxville Christian School Students Volunteer at Morning Pointe A group of 7th and 8th grade students from Knoxville Christian School play bingo with the residents of Morning Pointe of Knoxville (TN). Knoxville Christian School students traditionally spend the week after their spring break engaged in community service projects. During their visit to the assisted living and Alzheimer's memory care community, the students gave a devotional and played games with the residents. "The students said they planned to spend time with and uplift the residents, but it was evident that the students also received a blessing," says Pat Anderson, the life enrichment director at Morning Pointe. "They enjoyed their experience so much that they want to return to Morning Pointe on a regular basis to nurture the connections they made."

Rogersville

If you're a history fan or Crockett follower you may want to start your Crockett search in Rogersville. There you can visit the gravesite of the original David Crockett, Davy's grandfather. The original David Crockett was a signer of the Watauga Association petition asking the state to annex what was then Washington District (East Tennessee). He was born in Pennsylvania and moved his family to what was then the frontier. Fifteen years later he was killed in an attack by the Chickamauga Cherokee, led by war chief Dragging Canoe, along with about a dozen other settlers.

Located about 10 miles east of Greeneville the Davy Crockett Birthplace State Historic Park is about 110 acres that offers kayak rentals, hiking, fishing, a cabin similar to the housed his wife and nine original built by John and a museum.

Davy was born there in 1786 and learned to be a very good hunter. His father taught him to shoot at age 8 and he often went with his brothers to hunt game. Although the exact location of the family cabin hasn't been located, the information Crockett supplied in his writings placed it on the river near Limestone Creek.

After the family moved from the original cabin on the waters of Nolichucky River near Limestone, Davy's father established the large cabin which children. Davy's chore was to hunt for food and care for the livestock brought there by herders who stayed at the tavern. When he was 15 Davy left home and didn't return for three vears.

On returning Davy had grown and changed so much his family did not recognize him at first. He worked there to help pay off his father's debt and then worked for the debt owner. The Crockett Tavern ried Polly Finley and their

Angels among us

Have you ever encountered an angel, or at least wondered if you have? What does the Bible have to say about angels? Actually, there are more than three hundred references to angels in the Bible, but our modern conception about angels, influenced by both art and media, can lead us to wrong assumptions. I like what Francis Parr has to say about angels: "Mention the word angel and what do you visualize? In my mind's eye, I see a beautiful woman with long, golden hair; a full, flowing, white robe; and lovely, shining wings that flutter gracefully, propelling this wonder along. Her voice is soft and gentle. Other times the picture is of a fat, pink baby with a crossbow and heart-shaped arrows, aiming at some hapless fellow who, unknown to him is the object of a girl's affection. According to the Bible, both these images are almost totally inaccurate. But many people share these misleading mental pictures."

Angels continue to fascinate us. Many movies and TV shows portray angels and their activity among us. There are currently four TV shows that feature angels.

By Mark Brackney, Minister of the Arlington Church of Christ

> rejoice when we repent of sin and turn to God (Luke 15:7, 10). Scripture says that when we die and go to heaven, we will be like them (Luke 20:36). We are told that we need to be people who practice hospitality because in doing so, some have entertained angels without knowing it (Hebrews 13:2). And when we take our final breath in this life, the righteous are escorted by angels to Abraham's side, a euphemism for heaven (Luke 16:22).

The word, angel, can be translated "messenger." Angels are spiritual beings that God created higher than humans. Some are obedient to God and carry out his will, while others disobeyed God. This means angels have free will. Those who disobeyed are referred to as demons who follow Satan, a powerful angel who at some point disobeyed Exodus 25:20. This seems God. Angels who disobey suffer consequences like humans (Jude 6; 2 Peter

One of my favorite all-time movies features an angel trying to get his wings - Clarence in It's a Wonderful Life. How accurate is this portrayal? Well, angels are sent to minister and help humans (Hebrews 1:14). Angels sians 1:15-17).

2:4; I Peter 3:22). Angels are called many names in the Bible: holy ones, sons of God, sons of the Mighty, ministering servants, mighty ones, heavenly beings, and messengers. God has a family and part of it is on earth and part of it is in heaven. Christians make up the part on earth and angels in heaven: "For this reason I kneel before the Father, from whom every family in heaven and on earth derives its name" (Eph. 3:14-15). Angels were in existence before the foundations of the earth were laid and they were created by the Lord (Job 38:4-7; John 1:1-3; Nehemiah 9:6; Hebrews 12:22-23; Colos-

Angels are actually invisible to the unaided human eye. They are in essence of a spirit substance, yet they can be seen when God allows them to be seen. When angels do appear, they are capable of assuming any form that God chooses for them, but most often they appear as men. When they appear as men in the Bible, they are not winged, although the cherubim and seraphim are represented as winged creatures in to be a special class of angels, those closest to the throne room of God.

Included in the Smithsonian Institution's Archives of American Gardens, GATOP [God's Answer To Our Prayers] features many hundreds of botanical specimens such as conifers and hollies, extensive displays of wildflowers, perennials, and groundcovers, as well as numerous water features and large marble outcroppings. Complimenting this unusual garden are stainless-steel, iron, bronze, and stone sculptures. The site features one of Knoxville's oldest marble quarries.

The Stair Gardens at Hilltop Farm

5837 Lyons View Pike 37919 | A Shuttle will transport guests from the parking area to the Stair Garden. There is no on-site parking. The Stair Gardens at Hilltop Farm were designed by noted Atlanta landscape designer Ryan Gainey (8-27-44 to 7-29-16) and Atlanta architect Marc Mosley to be integrated into the main house. The gardens and outbuildings not only reflect the 1916 house's original Arts and Crafts style, but also add to its stature and nobility. Ryan's garden rooms include an asymmetrical garden, pool garden, pergola inspired by the one at Hestercombe in Somerset, England designed by renowned landscape designer Gertrude Jekyll and architect Edwin Lutyens, and demilune garden patterned after Beatrix Farrand's Dunbarton Oaks Garden in Washington, DC. (The ellipse was later re-designed by landscape architect Alden Hopkins, who also redesigned the garden at the Blount Mansion.).

These garden rooms mirror the simple elegance of the house and induce a sense of peace, tranquility and harmony. The beauty of the house and gardens is only surpassed by the sensational view of the Smoky Mountains and the Tennessee River.

SUMMER

June 1 & 2 10 a.m. – 5 p.m.

This event is free though a $5 donation on-site is suggested.

Savage Garden

3237 Garden Drive, Knoxville, 37918

Savage Garden was inspired by Arthur Savage's visit to his native England. Upon his return, he began building stone walls, ponds, arbors, and multiple follies.

After many years of extensive restoration, including rebuilding stone walls and borders, constructing faithful copies of the original arbors and gates, and planting thousands of trees, shrubs, and perennials, Savage Garden is once again the kind of magical place envisioned by Arthur Savage.

Early Summer highlights hundreds of blooming hydrangeas, native azaleas, and countless perennials.

Savage Garden is listed on the National Registry of Historic Places.

Wild Bird Eggstravaganza at the UT Gardens

Join Us for Springtime Family Fun on April 13

Celebrate springtime at the University of Tennessee Gardens, Knoxville, with wild bird education and an egg hunt on Saturday, April 13, 2019, from 1:30-4:30 p.m. Families will learn how to attract birds to their home garden and create natural spring-inspired crafts. Enjoy educational activities led by the UT Gardens education staff, the Knoxville Chapter of the Tennessee Ornithological Society and the UT Poultry Club. All kids will leave with a beneficial insect hotel craft, a flower to transplant, a pine cone bird nesting bundle, and a bird mobile. This year we are excited to offer eggs stuffed with wild flower seed paper confetti as an environmentally friendly alternative to plastic toys or trinkets. Children will also get a chance to win a prize or two. The Easter Bunny will be hopping around for a selfie with your family.

In partnership with the Food Allergy Community of East Tennessee (FACET), Allergy and Asthma Affiliates, and Allergy Asthma and Sinus Center, the annual Wild Bird Eggstravaganza is food-free. This is a family friendly event and is intended for children ages 12 and under. Bring your Easter basket and a camera! Wild Bird Eggstravaganza is sponsored by Allergy & Asthma Affiliates and the Allergy, Asthma, & Sinus Center.

The cost for Eggstravaganza is $8 per child ages 12 and under.

Enjoy a 'Dinner in the Dogwoods' at Mabry-Hazen House

Celebrate one of the nature's great performances and enjoy a three-course dinner on the front porch of Mabry-Hazen House! On Saturday, April 27, 2019 the museum will host "Dinner in the Dogwoods" in partnership with Sister South Fine Food. Guests will be treated to a cocktail hour in our historic dogwood grove followed by a threecourse dinner on the historic front porch.

Added to the Dogwood Trail in 2019, Mabry-Hazen House conserves over 80 flowering dogwood trees, and their flowery blooms will be in full force, adorning Mabry's Hill in an array of whites, pinks, and greens. The site is also a level 1 arboretum, conserving 32 species of trees including ancient southern magnolias, oaks, and maples.

Sister South Fine Foods is operated by chef/owner Jessica Hammonds. She offered one of the earliest Community Supported Agriculture programs in Knoxville, sold Certified Naturally Grown produce at local farmers' markets, and today, Sister South Fine Foods aims to educate the community about the ease and beauty of eating locally and seasonally.

Tickets are $65 per person, and includes appetizers, a three-course dinner, and red and white wine. Vegetarian and gluten-free options are available by request. Tickets, full menu, and more information available at www.mabryhazen.com/ dogwooddinner.

18th Annual Knoxville Opera Rossini Festival International Street Fair this Saturday

The Knoxville Opera 18th Annual Rossini Festival International Street Fair will be taking place on Saturday, April 13, 2019 from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. in Downtown Knoxville. The streets will be filled with a Europeanstyle pedestrian street mall featuring 100 prominent artisans to shop from, cuisine from dozens of food vendors, and 11 consecutive hours of live entertainment including 45 performances by 750 artists featuring opera, jazz, ethnic music, gospel, modern and ethnic dance, ballet, vocal and instrumental ensembles.

This celebration of the arts is the largest community engagement event of Knoxville Opera's season. Given legacy status by Knoxville Mayor Madeline Rogero, the Rossini Festival is the only such free-admission one-day arts festival in the country.

Kids will have a blast

- Pilot Flying J Opera & Choral Stage on Church Avenue
- YMCA Dance Stage on Market Square
- Krutch Park Extension Instrumental Music Stage
- Market Street Music Stage

"There is something for everyone at Rossini," said Knoxville Opera Executive and Artistic Director Brian Salesky. Rossini is one of East Tennessee's most unique cultural festivals and celebrations. It is so massive that more than 200 volunteers are needed to help produce this fantastic event. Over the past 17 years, well over 500,000 people have come out, rain or shine, to experience Knoxville Opera's joyous celebration of the arts.

In the fan favorite Beer Garden, the quartet of Cool Beans, West Hills and Central Flats and Taps, and SoKno Taco Cantina will be serving regional brews along with their signature flatbreads and tacos.

Starting at 8:00 p.m. the crowd will be dancing into the night to the beat of the ever-popular Knoxville Jazz Orchestra in Krutch Park Extension.

For more information, including the complete Entertainment Schedule, map of vendors and exhibitors, and short videos illustrating the Festival's entertainment, art, and refreshments, visit RossiniFestival.org.
