Penny Schwinn, a member of the Knox County Board of Education, visited South Knox Elementary School on Tuesday, June 15, to meet with the students and staff. Schwinn, who is currently serving as the interim superintendent of the school system, was accompanied by her husband, John Schwinn, and their two children. The family was in town for a vacation and decided to spend some time with the school community. Schwinn met with the principal, Mrs. J. B. Smith, and the teachers to discuss the school's progress and the challenges it faces. She also spent time with the students, who were very excited to meet her. Schwinn expressed her appreciation for the staff and students and promised to continue to support the school system in the future.

What is a majority in the upcoming city election?

The upcoming city election is a major event for the community, and many residents are wondering what a majority will be. The city council is currently divided 5-4 in favor of a new city manager, and the voters will be asked to approve or reject the proposal. The city manager position is a new one for the city, and it is unclear what the majority will be. Some residents believe that the city council should continue to operate as it is, while others believe that a city manager is necessary for the city to function properly. The city council will hold a public hearing on the issue in the coming weeks, and residents are encouraged to attend and voice their opinions.
