area to take traffic off their busy street none of the opposition appeared at the city meeting.

Jim Hagerman, director of engineering, told the council the funding goes to Phase One of the park for parking lot, utilities, lighting, widening the street and about one-half mile of greenway. He said that part of the project should take about 180 days. Phase Two, which comes later, will include permanent restrooms and other amenities.

The council also approved selling the former State Supreme Court building with a 25-year Payment In Lieu of Taxes. Councilman George Wallace said the former state-owned site currently produces no local property taxes. Deputy Mayor Bill Lyons said a tax break is needed for the project and the project is in two parts. He said the motions include one part that will be "Airbnb-type" apartments and the other part will be a hotel.

Wallace said about three years are expected for construction and eventually the project, being done by developer Rick Dover, will involve a $72 million investment.

The sale must now be approved by the state and the in lieu of taxes break is, according to Lyons, the largest such sale by the city. He said the tax break will be set at $2.6 million over the years of the agreement. That was the estimated cost of the property when the city bought it. Lyons explained that the state could not sell the property outright but the city could, so the city bought the site and then, after three attempts, is finally reselling it.

The council also voted, on final reading, to approve Mayor Madeline Rogero's budget request which keeps the current residential tax rate and adjusts the compensation pay for city employees, and police and fire departments. This gives new police

Round 2 Recode

By Steve Hunley, Publisher publisher@knoxfocus.com

We have many new readers in the past few months from our in depth coverage of Recode Knoxville. For our readers who haven't heard about Recode yet, it is the wiping out of our current Knoxville zoning code that has sixty years of case law protecting people's property rights. Recode replaces all current Knoxville City zoning with a 425-page zoning manifesto that has been written over the past two and a half years by the Knoxville-Knox County Planning commission which was formerly known as the Knoxville Metropolitan Planning Commission. Recode affects 73,000 properties in Knoxville. Eighty percent of those properties are residential. The remaining twenty percent are commercial. These properties are owned by 50,000 individuals.

On Thursday, May 30 city council will again attempt to have the first vote on Recode. The first attempt on May 14 did not go well. Most of council wanted to delay the vote and attempt to fix the many problems with Recode. Mayor Madeline Rogero advised and see if they could vote later in the evening. Even though the meeting started at 3:00 p.m., after over six and a half hours the council felt they were only half way done. How did this happen? The Knoxville-Knox County Planning commission voted to approve Recode and pass Recode on to city council after Draft 4 came out but the planning commission did not have time to vet Draft 4 before the approval vote. Draft 5 was left to city council to figure out. Recode Draft 5 grew 48% from 287 pages in Draft 4 to 425 pages in Draft 5. There are no zoning experts on city council. Council had no way to understand the 425-page zoning manifesto. Recode should have never been passed on to city council. The problem was that the planning commission was sick of it and wanted no more. City council has reached that point now. This is very poor representation for the people of Knoxville. How bad was the May 14 vote/ workshop/nightmare? In law the words "may, shall, and will" have special meaning. So how in the world after two and a half years of Recode staff work was council trying to fix all the may, shall, and will wording errors? This happened because the planning commission did not do their job. This is what happens when an unelected bureaucratic body decides to try to re-write sixty years of zoning case law in two and a half years. It cannot be done and that is obvious to everyone except the city council that is still trying to ram Recode

New readers may ask, "Why have so few people learned about Recode?" The first rule of Recode is, you don't talk about Recode. At least not in the main stream local Knoxville media. There is not a single story in Knoxville media except in The Knoxville Focus newspaper and on WETR 92.3 FM Real News talk radio about the city Ordinance 0-187-2018 that city council passed unanimously on December 18, 2018. You tn/knoxville/ordinances/code_ of_ordinances?nodeId=930504 The purpose of that ordinance was to state that the City of Knoxville did not have to notify property owners about Recode. In the second workshop in city council on Recode the council reluctantly decided they would notify the 50,000 property owners affected by mail even though council claimed they had no requirement by law to do so. Council did this because so many people forcefully spoke from the podium and demanded that the people be notified. The Recode mailing notice that was sent out to property owners told them to go to https://recodeknoxville.com and enter their address to pull up a map they could look at. It was a homework assigned from a government with very poor customer service. It did not inform the property owner if their property would be up-zoned or down-the property taxes will go up. If it is down-zoned the property value goes down. It did not tell a commercial business owner if they were being zoned out of business. It was up to the business owner to figure that out. It was not a notice. It was a PR fluff piece designed to be thrown in the trash.

It is very doubtful that the city did mail out 50,000 Recode PR puff piece notices. Gerald Green, executive director of the planning commission, told city council the planning commission received only 350 phone calls after the Recode notices were mailed out. In the public forum of the third workshop on Recode in city council Danny Kirby of Turkey Creek Land Partners told council he represented 21 properties in the Turkey Creek shopping complex and none of them received the "written notice" about Recode. That is a 100% failure rate for some of the biggest stores in Knoxville in getting the notice on Recode. What city council seems deaf to is that Knoxville is having a real estate boom with our current zoning. There is no reason can find that Ordinance here: for Recode. The Accessory year and five-year plans, updatthem to work as hard as possible https://library.municode.com/ Dwelling Units can be built now ed annually, shall be submitted by requesting a variance in the planning commission. The Mixed Use apartments can be built now by requesting a variance in the planning commission. There are two new Mixed Use apartments in Knoxville. The first is the Evolve apartments at 1913 Cumberland Avenue. The second is Crozier building at the corner of Central and Willow Avenues. Both of these Mixed Use apartments have reduced parking requirements just like in the Recode plan. Not that this is a

So why is Recode needed? Is it because city council wants to use Recode to do social engineering to increase KAT bus ridership? To increase bicycle riding in the city? To get people walking so they can be healthier? To save the planet? Recode is not an improvement over our current zoning. Recode is an anti-car anti-property rights egregious government overreach.

First District city council member Stephanie Welch was asked in a radio interview on Real News WETR FM 92.3 recently, "How do we get people to understand that taking public transportation is a good thing?" Councilwoman Welch replied, "I absolutely think it is a good thing and nobody will like my answer on this but I think you have to make it harder for people to drive. When it is so much easier to get in your car and drive, people don't take public transportation. That is really what it comes down to." For two and a half years the city government has not been telling the truth that our current Knoxville zoning has not been updated for sixty years and is stale, outmoded, antiquated, and obsolete. Section 801 of the City Charter describes the mayor's duties in regard to zoning: "The mayor shall submit to the council such plans that will include a fifteenyear, five-year and one-year comprehensive development plan, along with a comprehensive zoning plan of all properties within city limits. The fifteento the council before its second regular meeting in January of each year." The real truth was accidently spoken by Mayor Rogero on the Sunday, May 5 episode of WATE's Tennessee This Week. Mayor Madeline Rogero was interviewed by Blake Stevens of WATE. Stevens asked the mayor about Recode and her response was that Recode would be a living document just like the current zoning has been. That it would be updated every year like the current zoning has been for the last fifty years. If you are a city of Knoxville resident or a person who works in the city you need to ask yourself an important question. Is this the representation you deserve? Recode serves no purpose other than to take away the rights of people in Knoxville. Demand from your elected city council members that it be voted down. Protect your property rights.

Maryville location full after its first month of operation, and most of the first-floor one-bedroom apartments at Parkview Broome Road already accounted for, it somehow doesn't take long for word to get out and for people to make that choice. "Before this facility was even done, people would put a deposit down and didn't even want to see their apartment first," said Heather Schultz, McBride Company employee.

The many reasons to move into Parkview seem endless. Included amenities with every apartment fee are high-speed internet, cable television, phone, shuttle service, cocktail hour, exercise classes, a library, game room, puzzle room, movie theatre, two full-service chef-prepared meals daily, apartment housekeeping and linen laundry service, and two walking trails. Massage and stylist appointments are available in their spa, beauty salon, and barber shop for an extra charge. These are just the features available on property, but there are even more opportunities for residents to experience life off property too. Active seniors might be an understatement with all of the outings residents can encounter planned by a full-time activities director. Past daytrips have included attending museums, concerts, festivals, shopping, eating at a variety restaurants, and strawberry pick-facility. "If it looks antique, it is," says Parkview Chief Financial Officer Karen Spires, commenting on the décor chosen for the new location having been specifically bought for the generation and comfort of its residents. Attention to detail is commonplace throughout including a different identifying scene at the end of each hall for residents to remember where their rooms are located. In a matter of four weeks, the facility transformed from empty into fully furnished with beautiful antique pieces of artwork and furniture acquired from estate sales, auctions, and furniture stores all handpicked by Marga McBride, Parkview owner and wife of Jay McBride. Each facility is a mirror image of each other which provides a distinctive Parkview signature.

"We try to differentiate ourselves with the covered patios, decks, and the size of the rooms. Every living room has a back door," said McBride who became inspired with the idea for Parkview with his love for Knoxville and a need for independent living for his mother-in-law. Daughter of McBride and Parkview Activities Director Becca Sparks explained, "It's important that they have outdoor space, because that also gives the residents more purpose. If you walk around, you'll see they take pride in their patios and have plants all over them and nice chairs." Likewise, natural light and outdoor living areas are part of the beauty of the facility, "It's important to keep their minds going, so we are always generating activity for their bodies. We try to think of things that are out-of-the-box so that it sets us apart so our residents are always thriving," added Sparks who plans multiple on-site activities as well.

"We are a community, we are not a corporation. That's my personal goal ... is to instill that family environment. I encourage people to get in a community and enjoy your life, whether it is this community or not. Just enjoy living life," said Parkview Chief Operating Officer Darlene Adams. "If somebody is ready to move in, this place sells itself because it is not only beautiful but we instill a family environment here where people care about each other, and community sells itself." Staying in community is vital as people age since research links individuals with the highest level of involvement in social relationships to longevity. Also, The Harvard School of Public Health published the following in the American Journal of Public Health, "Seniors can help stave off memory loss by maintaining active social lives."

Besides comfortable, high-quality apartments, Parkview makes security and safety a priority. The facility is wheelchair friendly and handicap accessible, and has management on duty 24 hours a day. Each resident wears a Lifeline medical alert pendant and must use the wellness disk board, a board located at the end of each hallway with a wellness disk for each resident. Residents must leave their apartments to flip over their disks by 10:30 a.m. or a staff member will call or physically check on them to ensure they are active and Apartment pricing ranges from $2250 to $4200 for a studio apartment with 487 sq. ft. to a deluxe twobedroom with 1,035 sq. ft., alongside two other floor plan options in between. The Broome Road facility houses 100 apartments and employs a staff of more than 25 members to make Parkview feel like home to the seniors who live there. A guest apartment is even supplied for the family and visitors of residents as another wonderful benefit.

The day was truly one to celebrate says Sparks, "What's amazing about this day is I got to see it from when it was just a conversation. This is my first ribbon cutting, so it is very special. I get to share with my dad his vision which is to this finishing point." And now Sparks says she wants to celebrate life with the residents everyday as she plans activities and builds relationships with them.

Two more retirement communities of Parkview are coming soon on Emory Road and another in Tullahoma, Tennessee. They are both scheduled to open in approximately eighteen months. To schedule a tour of the Maryville or Knoxville facilities, or for more information, call 865-357-2288 or visit retireatparkview.com. lunch is at noon. The Service of Remembrance and Celebration begins at 2 p.m.

Rev. Segers said an Alumni Choir will perform in the afternoon and he's urging current choir members, former music ministers or mission trip choir members to join in the singing.

Anyone planning to attend the 100th Celebration is urged to RSVP by calling (865) 689-5416 or email Inskip@knology. net. If you are unable to attend you can still send a note of encouragement and reflection.

The history of the church dates back to 1919 when Rev. J.H. Snow of the Knox County Association of Baptists visited the community with the idea of organizing a church. That year a Woman's Missionary Society began with five members and met in the home of Mrs. Charles A. Child. A Sunday School was organized and met at the old Inskip School. The need for a church building was realized and two acres of land was purchased from Dr. J. B. Parker. Rev. W. M. Thomas was elected pastor.

In October of 1920 construction on a cinder-block church started and a cornerstone placed containing a Bible, The Baptist and Reflector, a daily newspaper, a history of the church and a silver coin dated 1920. That cornerstone is now found in the monument sign for the current church building. About 188 people attended the first services in the church and, later, a library room added.

In 1947 the members voted to buy lots across the street and, on July 4h, 1948, the members left the cinder-block church, walked across the street, and entered the new building. The smaller church building was then sold.

Several ministers served the church and the community over the 100 years and Rev. Segers was selected to head the church twenty years ago. He is inviting everyone to make plans to attend the 100th Celebration.

County commission hears budget requests

By Bill Howard

July 1 begins Knox County's 2019-2020 fiscal year. On Monday, May 20, at the City-County Building, the county commission held its budget meeting and fielded funding requests from a number of county-level interests.

The commission heard from Dr. Martha Buchanan, director of the Knox Co. Health Department. Mayor Glenn Jacobs has proposed a cut of some $1.4 million to the department's indigent care program.

"In my budget there's a significant cut in what's called the indigent care program for this coming fiscal year," Buchanan said. "It's about a 30% reduction in that budget, about $1.4 million, that covers the under and uninsured in Knox County Cherokee (Health Systems) is the primary care provider. We've talked to the folks who provide that care and they're not happy about a budget reduction. They're committed to caring for the citizens of Knox County."

The indigent have to enroll in the program to get care, Buchanan explained. "They have to be involved in the program, they have to live in Knox County. and they have to make very little money and not have insurance. It provides payment for primary medical care to Cherokee health, payment for hospitalization, and part of the payment for specialty care."

Commissioner Randy Smith asked Buchanan how many people the program serves and the median cost.

"The program serves about 1,100 people. That's the cap, and we don't usually exceed

What Does It Mean to Continue a Case

I would be lying if I told you that the legal system is fast moving system. Although some cases can get resolved in a matter of weeks, it can often take months, if not years, for a case to go from beginning to end.

Although, there are many factors that play in to why a case may take so long to end, one of those reasons may be that the trial date keeps on getting pushed back to a later date. When a case is pushed back from a previous date, it is most frequently called a continuance or a reset. Why does this happen?

Let me give you some examples. If someone is charged with a DUI, and they are able to post a bond to get out of jail while their case is pending, they will be ordered to appear in court a few weeks after they are arrested.

Well, a large part of a DUI case is the blood alcohol level of the defendant resolution of the matter.

when someone is charged with an assault. Well, the District Attorney may talk to the victim of the assault, then tell the Defendant's attorney something like, "Well, the victim was not actually hurt, and they do not want to press charges, but they would like the defendant to attend some anger management classes. Let's reset the case for six weeks and if the defendant brings proof of having attended anger management classes, I will agree to dismiss the case." In this situation, the case was not able to be resolved that day, but progress was made towards reaching a final

Also of note, judges and attorneys are usually very ed, and it often forgiving if one attorney takes months to has a legitimate reason receive the blood they are not able to go forward with a matter on its court date. If an attorney has an illness, or a family emergency, the court will almost always continue a case for those reasons, even at the last minute.

It is important to note, Another exam- that for a continuance ple would be to occur, the judge has to agree that a case be allowed to be continued. Some judges are very particular about not allowing cases to hang around for an extended period of time with no final resolution, and judges have the ability to force attorneys and clients to go forward with their cases on their given trial date.

> Similarly, if one attorney wants a continuance, but the other attorney does not, there will be a hearing on whether the continuance will be granted, and the judge will decide whether to allow it or not based on the reasons given by the requesting party for the continuance.

However, the best and most effective ideas to improve our communities are generated at the grassroots community groups. There is never a shortage of ideas, but the difficulty is implementation. It placed an importance on parking, suburban living, and segmented residential neighborhoods based on allowed non-residential uses and density. I probably won't be alive by the time the vision of Recode is realized, however, I strongly believe future residents of Knoxville will want an urban style development that allows for greater demand in local retail, housing options, and an increase in the alternative forms of transportation including biking, walking, and bus lines. This is the vision for Recode, and that is why I support it. Hubert Smith: Recode, should be a referendum, and not be decided upon Amelia Parker: There are multiple aspects of Recode that give me pause and for that reason, I believe the new codes and definitions require more time to review. I am glad that the city council will continue their review of Recode on May 30th. Since the meeting begins at 3 p.m. in the afternoon, there are many community members who may have watched the meeting later or heard reports on the outcomes and want to comment on the council's discussion and votes. I hope the council will entertain those comments on the first half of the plan as they continue their review of the second half, and then will entertain questions and concerns after their May 30th meeting. The process that the city council has chosen for reviewing Recode is very helpful and I hope the city council will consider

By Ray Hill In February of 1945, a war weary and sick Franklin D. Roosevelt was on his way to Crimea in the Soviet Union. Technically in the Ukraine, the Crimea is on a peninsula on the northern coast of the Black Sea and was once the playground of the Russian Czars and other royalty and nobility. After the slaughter of Czar Nicholas II and his family by the Bolsheviks and the Russian civil war, the Communists ruled the Soviet Union with an iron fist. Dictator Josef Stalin signed a treaty with Adolf Hitler, his counterpart in Nazi Germany. Hitler's word was as good as Stalin's and the German dictator caught Stalin unawares when he launched Operation Barbarossa on June 22, 1941, pouring into the western part of the Soviet Union the largest invasion force ever gathered together in the history of warfare. Stalin, as bloody a tyrant as Hitler, killed more of his own countrymen than the Germans, estimated at 27 million. The German war machine, once seemingly unstoppable, was sputtering to a halt, squeezed between the American and British armies in the west and the Red Army in the east. President Roosevelt had hoped to meet elsewhere, but Stalin refused to leave Soviet territory and finally agreed to meet at Yalta. the politics of Michigan's the First Congressional Former palaces, only First recently abandoned by the District: Sadowski, never seemed to go for use by the "Big Three" - - - Roosevelt, Stalin and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill - - - as they met to discuss the unconditional surrender of Germany and the Japanese Empire. One of the key questions considered at Yalta by a failing Franklin Roosevelt was the future of Poland. FDR told Stalin Polish-Americans were an important voting bloc in American elections. Roosevelt, a very sick man at the time, firmly believed his personal charm would enthrall the flinty Russian dictator and allow him to deal with Stalin. The Second World War had erupted over the German invasion of Poland when England and France had declared war upon Hitler's Nazi Reich. As the Germans retreated westward, the Red Army swallowed increasingly large chunks of Poland. As Churchill pushed for recognition of the democratic Polish

President Roosevelt was asked by some, including his wife Eleanor, why he had not attempted to save Poland from the Russians. An exasperated and bonetired FDR wondered if he should go to war with the Soviet Union, as that was likely the only way the Russians would relinquish the territory they had taken from the Germans. Stalin intended to provide the Soviet Union with a The cushion of satellite states district represented by along his country's borders Congressman George to protect it in the future. district in Michigan illustrates what an important constituency Polish-Americans were to Franklin Roosevelt's Democratic Party, a voting bloc the President once estimated being as high as perhaps seven million voters. Michigan's First Congressional District, a slice of east Detroit in Wayne County, was largely populated by Polish immigrants when FDR defeated Herbert Hoover in 1932. With the Democratic tidal wave, George G. Sadowski came to Congress. For almost three decades, three men dominated at one time or the other; primary and the general Sadowski was a hearty election. Sadowski won New Deal Democrat, while renomination in 1934 Machrowicz was a Cold easily, garnering almost War Democrat. Tenerowicz 60% of the vote. he was defeated in the 1938 Democratic primary. Sadowski's opponent, Dr. Rudolph G. Tenerowicz, the mayor of Hamtramck, had been involved in a divorce proceeding that was a bit embarrassing, especially for the time. Tenerowicz had sought to divorce his wife, who had accused her husband of being more than a little friendly with one Geraldine Fisher. a nurse who was the beneficiary of "presents of jewelry and money." According to Miss Fisher's own statement, Dr. Tenerowicz represented "himself as an unmarried man." Although Tenerowicz asked Circuit Court Judge Homer Ferguson (who later represented Michigan in the U.S. Senate) to drop his divorce suit, Mrs. Tenerowicz's attorney accused the doctor of having fled to Mexico to judge to wonder if they should not be identified for the time being as "A, B and C". Mrs. Tenerowicz's lawyer snapped, "There are enough women in this case to go through the entire alphabet." It is all the more remarkable Congressman George Sadowski lost his primary to the rascally Mayor Tenerowicz. The colorful mayor won the Democratic nomination by just over 2,200 votes. Sadowski was bitter and contacted South Trimble, Clerk of the House, to inquire if there were any grounds for him to challenge the legitimacy of Tenerowicz's nomination. Trimble said he could see none. Considering the closeness of the election, it is hardly surprising George Sadowski ran against Rudy Tenerowicz again in 1940. Sadowski lost by an even greater margin, trailing Congressman Tenerowicz by more than 10,000 votes in the primary. Tenerowicz won the general election with almost 80% of the vote. It appeared George Sadowski's political career was over, yet he entered the 1942 Democratic primary. The former Sadowski won with almost 44% of the vote while the incumbent garnered less than 30% of the ballots cast. It was the end of Rudolph Tenerowicz's electoral career, although the irrepressible Rudy would keep trying. In fact, Tenerowicz filed to run in the Democratic primary in 1944 for another showdown with George Sadowski, but withdrew his candidacy before for Congress and were the filing deadline. In 1946, Tenerowicz ran for Congress again - - - as a Republican. The vote was divided between seven contestants and Machrowicz eked out a victory by 162 votes. Congressman Sadowski demanded a recount, which did not change the results. Endangered Historic Sites announced

Throughout East Tennessee are historically important properties in danger of disappearing through neglect or demolition. These historic homes, buildings and communities played a vital part in our history. Each year a list of these endangered sites are announced during the Annual

East Tennessee Preservation Alliance

The Preservation Alliance serves 15 counties and serves as the regional arm for Knox Heritage. Both organizations work to draw attention to endangered places and to preserve structures and places known to have historic value. The group met recently at the Knoxville Botanical Gardens and announced the sites in conjunction with the annual Knox Heritage Fragile and Fading list of Knox County historic sites.

Several East Tennessee historic sites were singled out as endangered and eight Knox County sites also announced as being historically important but "fragile and fading." The East Tennessee sites includes the American Temperance University Memorial building in Harriman; the Hogskin Creek Bridge in Grainger County; the Tennessee Railroad Depot in Oneida; the Bowman House in Loudon County; the New Salem Baptist Church in Sevierville; the former Tennessee Military Institute in Sweetwater; and the Stonecipher-Kelly House near Wartburg.

One of the Knox County historic sites in danger is the Knaffl-Stevens House at 3738 Speedway Circle. The 1880 Victorian was once located on Gay Street but was moved when the Andrew Johnson Hotel was built. It was the home of art and portrait photographer Joseph Knaffl, whose works appeared on Hallmark Christmas cards. James Stephens bought the house and lived it in until the mid 1960s.

The Eugenia Williams House on Lyons View Pike was built in 1940 for the daughter of a prominent physician. The Regency-style home borders the Tennessee River on 24 acres and given to the University of Tennessee in 1998. Knox Heritage is urging the university, if sold, to place the property on a preservation easement.

The Pryor Brown Garage is back on the list and is an early mixeduse example that once had parking decks and retail spaces on Market Street and Church Avenue. Originally a stable the property became a parking garage for cars and is now one of the oldest parking garages in the nation. Today the garage has potential for redevelopment.

Bearden wins Boys' Soccer Championship

What a week for the Bearden Bulldogs...

Taking the momentum of a sectional victory over rival Farragut with them two and a half hours to the west, the Bulldogs won three games in four days, on their way to capturing their fifth state championship, culminating with a victory over Station Camp. (The game officially ended 1-1, with the Bulldogs named champion after a 4-2 penalty kick advantage.

"We kind of talk about the games and moments we have to get through to get to state," said Bearden head coach Ryan Radcliffe. "A region championship isn't one of those ways. We would have liked to win it, but it (1-0 loss to Science Hill) was a good wake up call for us. There were some mental lapses where we tried to let talent take over in that game. Reduced numbers make spring drills a 'welcome challenge' at CAK

High schools with smaller enrollments have to take a different approach when it comes to spring football practice. Take Christian Academy of Knoxville, for example.

"It's a unique practice scenario at CAK because we have such a large number of multi-sport athletes who are still competing in the playoffs for their spring sports," said Warriors Head Coach Travis Mozingo. "Being an advocate for multi-sport athletes, and supporter of my fellow coaches at CAK, it's a welcome 'challenge' to work around.

"The biggest benefit coming from our spring ball practices was the coaches and football players 'getting to scratch the itch.'"

CAK works overtime for third straight baseball title

MURFREESBORO --- Christian Academy of Knoxville's baseball team notched a three-peat last

A Jack of all trades and a master of all

Jack Tate had on a short sleeve plaid shirt with stripes of Maroon, White and Grey running through it when I met him for a recent interview. That wasn't surprising. Jack has been hours per week on the Bearden High through and through for parts of five decades.

Tate and other retiring Bearden teachers were recognized at a brunch on the last day of school Friday, but Jack was out of town on the job as the school's Sports Information Director, covering the Bulldogs in the Class AAA boys' soccer state finals that afternoon at the TSSAA Spring Fling. He had been in Murfreesboro since Tuesday, posting accomplishments of Bearden athletes on social media to as many as 3,160 followers on his Twitter account. One post included Tennessee signee Preston Ruth running the anchor leg on the 4x800 relay team and bringing the Bulldogs back from ninth to fourth place to earn all-state recognition.

In this day and age of much negativity in the media, Tate likes to send out positive news on today's youth.

"I started phasing that (SID position) in three years ago," said the 1978 BHS graduate. "I've been doing parts of it for a long time."

Bearden has 15 to 20 sports, including club sports like ice hockey, swimming, lacrosse and rugby. Tate loves covering them all and also sends out many photos from his iPad the school bought for him to use two years ago at Christmas.

In addition to sending out scoring updates during games, Tate also types out morning school announcements for sporting events and other important activities going on at the school, and a student announces sports stuff, but I love doing it though. It keeps me young."

Tate, 58, coached at Bearden for 35 years, starting as an assistant with the baseball program when he was still in college at the University of Tennessee. He has been a teacher at BHS for 25 years, arriving in January of 1996, after teaching at Bearden Middle School for seven years and taking 21/2 years off from full-time teaching to help his grandmother and mother for health reasons.

Tate's favorite high school class to teach has been Film Studies.

"We go behind the scenes," said Tate, who watches an average of 150 movies per year. "We try to cover the whole gamut of the film industry."

Tate also taught Person-He also has taught American Government, U.S. History and Freshman Foundations at BHS and Tennessee History at BMS.

Most of his time coaching was as Junior Varsity base-20 years and as an assistant with the varsity team. He retired from coaching in May of 2017, after serving under seven head coaches.

But for three years (2010-2012), Tate was Bearden's head baseball coach and directed the Bulldogs to a 32-14 record and the Class AAA state finals in 2017, losing to Arlington 9-3 in the championship game. It was a special season that saw Tate's team pull off several amazing comebacks to stay alive in postseason play.

Jack Tate stands next to many of the Bearden High athletic photos that grace his classroom walls. "Every picture tells me a story," said Tate, who is retiring but will be back next school year to teach first and second period classes and continue as Bearden's Sports Information Director.

The Doctor is in a weekly column by Dr. Jim Ferguson

Adapting

Franklin once sang, "Change, Change, Change..." No, sorry, that was "Chain, Chain, Chain... Chain of Fools." My mistake. However, change is the modern and more relevant mantra.

The global warming cabal even had to alter the name of their signature message to Climate Change. Undoubtedly, this is because we have entered a period of lower temperatures. Relax AlGore! Your scam of man-made (anthropogenic) global weather perturbation is safe because so few people realize that water vapor is the principal greenhouse gas followed by methane, with carbon dioxide a distant third.

The reason temperatures have stabilized is because our sun is in a cyclical solar minimum with fewer sun spots, solar eruptions, and therefore less solar wind. And with less solar wind to deflect cosmic radiation Motown icon Aretha which interacts with particles in the upper atmosphere to increase earth's reflective albedo, the earth has lately cooled. If you're interested in science I suggest you read The Chilling Stars by Henrik Svensmark rather than listening to politician AlGore and his hockey stick analysis. Consider this admittedly simplistic syllogistic logic example: politicians lie; AlGore is a politician; therefore AlGore lies.

> Everything changes, all the time. The secret of successful living is to adapt to the change and make the most of it. Change is certainly true of my body. I'm not as strong as I used to be. I'll never be able to hit a golf ball like Brooks Koepka the winner of the recent PGA golf tournament. And I have found that I am not as good at multitasking, one of my strengths in years past. I've had to adjust my perspective and adapt to the new reality of being sixty-eight years old.

able to adjust to the reality that Donald Trump beat Hillary Clinton and that he did not collude with Russians. Nancy Pelosi and haters have lost their minds. Actually, it was Hillary Clinton's campaign who bought and paid for the infamous Steele Dossier. Amazingly, a recent poll found that two thirds of Americans still do not know this. The non-verified and scatological "golden shower" hoax was the cornerstone of FISA Court warrants and the attempted soft coup engineered by the leaders of the FBI, CIA, NSA, the Justice Department, probably with knowledge of the Obama White House. Attorney General William Barr has certainly challenged Democrats with a changing landscape. I believe he will inform We The People of the Swamp's skulduggery. When you shine a light in the basement the rats adjust their activities and scurry into the darkness.

Polling data is the mainstay of the Washington environment. The polls were utterly wrong about the 2016 presidential election. Australia is the latest demonstration that election polling has become so politicized that they are no longer valid. The "modern liberals" in Australia will have to adjust their plans now that the polls were wrong again and they were or investigate." We'll see if

Democrats do not seem soundly defeated by the conservatives. I emphasize the term "modern" liberal to contrast this loosely used term with "classical" liberalism of the Founders era. They are vastly different. Modern liberals are actually progressives and "leftists." Progressive John Dewey coined the term modern liberal in 1924 because the policies of progressives were losing so many elections. Later, modern was dropped from the name. Apparently, modern liberals and progressives just change their names instead of their stripes. Even "liberal" Calvin Klein had to adapt to the insane leftist political correctness of today. A recent ad campaign featured a robot dressed as a woman being kissed by a human female model. The problem was the human model identifies as heterosexual and this so enraged the LGBTQ crowd forcing Klein to apologize and withdraw the ad.

Congress is not adapting well to the reality of Trump and has become "a walking shadow, a poor player that struts and frets his hour upon the stage and then is heard no more. It is a tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing" (Shakespeare from McBeth). Trump recently challenged Nancy Pelosi to either "legislate she chooses the American people or her leftist base.

I've just finished a book by Reinhold Niebuhr entitled Moral Man and Immoral Society. I was intrigued by the title and the book was rated among the top 10 works of Christian apologetics of the 20th century. I don't recommend this egghead book. But, I also dislike the movie Citizen Kane, which is number one on the list of great movies rated by cinema "experts." I ascribe to the Count Basie philosophy. The great jazz pianist said, "If it sounds good, it is." And my corollary to that is, "if you like something, it is." Don't let anyone define your tastes. However, with time and understanding some things grow on you, like the taste of coffee or a Rothko nonrepresentational painting.

Actually, I was drawn to Niebuhr because he was the mentor of Dietrich Bonhoeffer, the great Lutheran anti-Nazi of the Second World War, whose books I have read and whose courageous apologetics I admire. Niebuhr is most celebrated for the famous Serenity Prayer, even though his authorship has been challenged by some nattering nabobs. Nonetheless, the prayer speaks to adaptation:

"God, grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change,

Courage to change the things I can,

And wisdom to know the difference."

As I try to practice medicine "off the grid," it requires adapting to a medical system which sometimes doesn't find this fully licensed medical doctor in their databases. For more than four decades I "participated" in Medicare, Medicaid, Tricare and various other commercial insurance plans. However, to do concierge medicine, I had to "opt out" of all governmental related insurance products. I have had to adapt to not being able to order physical therapy for my Medicare patient with a stroke or write orders for blood sugar testing strips for another patient with diabetes and government insurance. My freedom to practice the best care for my patients has resulted in consequences which I accept gracefully, most of the time.

The Master taught us that in this life you will always have troubles. He preached a message of adaptation, of being in the world, but not of the world. Successful living is establishing priorities and adapting to inevitable change. Some days I do better than other days. But today I sing, I love my life, I love my wife and I love my Lord, Jesus Christ - as best I can.

The Shema

For thousands of years, Jewish parents have taught their children the words of the Shema as soon as they were old enough to By Mark speak (Deuteronomy 6:4-5). Jesus Minister of the likely learned these words on the lap of his mom and dad. The Shema was so central to Jesus' faith that when a scribe/lawyer asked him what he believed was the greatest commandment, his answer began by quoting from the Shema (Mark 12:28-31).

Today, when we recite the Shema, we repeat

Brackney, Arlington Church

words about loving God and neighbor, but we often leave off the preamble: "Hear, O Israel: the Lord our God, the Lord is one" (Deut. 6:4).

This line is the cornerstone of the Jewish faith followed by the great command to love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind and with all your strength. Every morning and evening for thousands of years, the Jewish people promised to love God wholeheartedly when they recited the Shema. Jesus' next command, "Love your neighbor as yourself," comes from Leviticus 19:18.

I used to think that the lawyer's question was a legalistic quiz and that Jesus' talk of love rather than law would have shocked and scandalized his audience. But Jesus' answer came straight out of the Torah - from Leviticus and Deuteronomy. I think most of us would have to admit that Leviticus and Deuteronomy are not books we frequent often, if ever, in our Bible study.

The question the lawyer asked Jesus that day was not a bad one. I don't think he was trying to outsmart Jesus. He was actually wanting to participate in a fascinating debate among the rabbinic teachers of his day. He was asking: "What is the great essence of God's Law?" "What overriding principle encapsulates all of God's instruction?" Torah, which we translate "law," actually means "teaching." Technically, the term Torah applies to the first five books of the Old Testament, also called the Pentateuch, but it often is a word used to refer to the Scriptures as a whole. The goal in answering the question of the lawyer and others was not to summarize the Bible in one's own words, but to choose one key verse that encapsulated all the rest. This was a discussion about getting to the very heart of God's

The first word, shema, we usually translate as "hear." But this means more than to perceive sound. This Hebrew word includes listening, taking heed, and responding with action to what one has heard. Today, we would use the word "obey" to describe this. To "hear" is "to do." In the Psalms, David pleads, "O Lord, please hear my prayer." This was not accusing God of being deaf, but rather, he was calling on God to take action. He didn't want God to listen to his words only. Understanding the importance of the Shema helps us understand another phrase Jesus often used: "Whoever has ears to hear, let them hear" (Mark 4:9). What Jesus really meant by these words was this: "You have heard my teaching, now take it to heart and obey it!" Jesus wants us to be doers of the word, not just hearers, which is what James wrote (James

This concept is so important for us today in Western culture. There is a disconnect from knowing and doing. Let us strive to put our beliefs into action.
