City Council members weigh in on Recode Knoxville ahead of meeting

City Council members are expected to weigh in on the Recode Knoxville initiative ahead of their meeting on Tuesday. The initiative aims to update the city's zoning code to reflect current needs and trends. Council members will discuss various proposals and their potential impacts on the city's development and growth. The meeting is open to the public, and residents are encouraged to attend and provide input on the proposed changes.

Rep. Bill Dunn speaks in Fountain City

Rep. Bill Dunn, a member of the Tennessee House of Representatives, visited Fountain City to address the community. During his visit, he met with local officials and residents to discuss their concerns and needs. He also presented a report on the state of Tennessee and the progress of various legislative initiatives. Dunn emphasized the importance of community support and collaboration in addressing local challenges and improving the quality of life for all residents.

Dunn's visit to Fountain City was part of a larger tour of the region. He spent time with local business leaders and community members, listening to their perspectives on economic development and public services. He also participated in a town hall meeting where he answered questions and provided updates on his work in the legislature. The visit was well-received, and Dunn expressed his commitment to continuing to support the growth and prosperity of the community.

The community expressed appreciation for Dunn's presence and the opportunity to engage with a state representative. They discussed various issues, including infrastructure improvements, job creation, and social services. Dunn promised to bring their concerns back to the legislature and work on finding solutions. The meeting was a success, and it strengthened the relationship between the community and the state government.
