

in the upper tier of parking right next to the building where the voting was taking place. With a Knox County Parks and Recreation vehicle blocking another exit, with the added precaution of having set out traffic cones, it left little room

Canopy tents and food trucks block the west outlet on the upper tier of the New Harvest Park early voting location on Thursday afternoon. Thirty-nine of 66 parking spaces, including several handicap-accessible parking spaces, were taken for produce vendors, eliminating through-way, ingress and egress. Also the set up encroached upon the fire lane shown with the yellow stripe markings above.

for users to maneuver in the area where the voting was occurring. On the lower tier the parking lot, a canopy tent was set up for mayoral candidate Eddie Morris which was well outside the 100 foot market where candidates are allowed to greet voters. When compared to the tents occupied by the produce people, the Morris tent looked like a small outpost in the desert. Cliff Rodgers, administrator of elections talks, were overwhelmed or otherwise put off by the difficulty of parking near the building where voting was taking place. There is a wonderful portion which was crossed on the site, as well as other Continued on page 4

Don't miss the history fair Saturday!

By Mike Stealy
mstealy@knoxnews.com

History comes alive Saturday in and around downtown Knoxville during the East Tennessee History Fair. The free event draws hundreds, if not thousands, of people to the one-of-a-kind gathering of historians, re-enactors, authors, vendors, organizations, and residents.

You might even meet and speak with the likes of Abraham and Mary Todd Lincoln, Union General U. S. Grant, and

Rezoning and much ado about nothing for Knoxville-Knox County Planning

By Ken Lay

The most heavily discussed request at the monthly Knoxville/Knox