piethora of folks selling produce, as well as food trucks taking up parking spaces on the upper tier of parking right next to the building where the voting was taking place. With a Knox County Parks and Recreation vehicle blocking another exit. with the added precaution of having set out traf-

Wild REPUBLISHED IN 266 W

Canopy tents and food trucks block the west outlet on the upper tier of the New Harvest Park early voting location on Thursday afternoon. Thirty-nine of 68 parking spaces, including several handicap-accessible parking spaces, were taken for produce vendors, eliminating through-way, ingress and egress. Also the set up encroached upon the fire lane shown with the yellow stripe markings above.

for cars to maneuver in the tent was set up for mayor- candidates are allowed to the Mannis tent looked area where the voting was all candidate Eddie Mannis greet voters. When com- like a small outpost in occurring. On the lower tier which was well outside the pared to the tents occupied the desert. Cliff Rodgers, fic cones, it left little room the parking lot, a canopy 100 feet marker where by the produce people, administrator of elections there before Cliff arrived that some folks coming to vote, especially elderly folks, were overwhelmed or otherwise put off by the difficulty of parking near the building where voting was taking place. There is a wonderful pavilion which was unused on the site, as well as other Continued on page 4

UNE COUDING OF TOURS I WAS

Don't miss the history fair Saturday!

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

History comes alive Saturday in and around downtown Knoxville during the East Tennessee History Fair. The free event draws hundreds, if not thousands, of people to the one-of-a-kind gathering of historians, reenactors, authors, vendors, organizations, and musicians. You might even meet and speak with the likes of Abraham and Mary Todd Lincoln, Union General U. S. Grant, and maybe even Davy Crockett. There's free parking in the city garages and free trolley service to various events. While much

Rezoning and much ado about nothing for Knoxville-Knox County Planning

By Ken Lay

The most heavily discussed request at the monthly Knoxville/Knox County Planning Commission Thursday turned out to be much ado about