The second half of the lecture further demonstrates how staff began an experiment to find ways of increasing their support and responsiveness to their students in that group. Higher education support groups (HSGs) are a new kind of support group that is designed to help students with a variety of needs, including learning, personal, financial, and academic.

Individuals can donate to a local food bank or request support materials from local food banks. The United Way Foundation has a food bank directory and 24-hour toll-free support line and information at www.211.org. For more information, contact your local food bank. $1,000 may be requested for food banking for one month through the Fall Program. To receive an application, visit www.211.org or call 1-800-988-2929.
