

Commissioner Barker speaks up on pension bill resolution

By JAMES HARRINGTON
The pension bill that passed the Legislature last week, which would require the state to contribute to the pension fund, was a landmark achievement for the state, said Commissioner of the Department of Social Services, James Barker. Barker said the bill was a major step in the state's effort to address the pension crisis. He said the bill would ensure that the state would contribute to the pension fund, which would help to ensure the long-term solvency of the fund.
