Butta (center, the Kings County Commissioner who represents the 8th District, withdrew several public issues last week the normally spent official spoke up on the resolution he introduced pertaining to the current citizens' lawsuit against the county over the settlement of the case against the Kings County Retirement and Pension Board.

The law director brought suit against the pension board actions that went against the county charter but was stopped by the Kings County Mayor and County Commissioner who dismissed the suit in a commission vote.

Butta's resolution was to direct the outside hired attorney to seek the 'sole legal issue' and not spend taxpayer money in an attempt to dismiss the case prior to a court ruling.
