

Former Knoxville mayor and Tennessee governor Bill Haslam catches up with mayoral candidate Eddie Mearns, left, and David Wright, right, at Wright's Cafeteria, a popular spot in Knoxville known for homemade lunches.

By Mike Stealy
Senior Writer
mstealy@knoxnews.com

There are 92,993 registered voters in Knoxville but only 10,879 votes, about 1.1%, were cast in early voting. That's better than in past years but much less than what it may have been if the election was held during a state or federal election.

Absentee vote totals in the early balloting was 982, bringing the entire early vote totals to 11,861. What does the election commission forecast for the turnout in Tuesday's Election Day turnout?

Chris Davis, deputy director of the election commission, said Friday that they are expecting anywhere from 13,000 to 15,000 more voters Tuesday, bringing the total to somewhere between 26,000 and 27,000.

Continued on page 2

Carson Dailey Launches Reelection Campaign

By Focus Staff

Carson Dailey, the popular County

Armstrong, who had just left an event. Crg. Pavlis and Carson Dailey worked for his Chief Deputy, David Rusk, closely together. Former County

County hires new lobbying firm

By Mike Stealy
Senior Writer
mstealy@knoxnews.com