City passed Growth Plan in split vote

By Staff Writer
 The city council passed a growth plan in a split vote during a recent meeting. The plan outlines the city's long-term vision for growth, including the development of new housing, commercial, and industrial areas.

Supporters
 Supporters of the growth plan argued that it would provide the city with the resources needed to address its long-term needs, including the need for new housing and commercial space.

Opponents
 Opponents of the growth plan argued that it would lead to increased traffic congestion and the loss of open space. They also expressed concern about the impact of the plan on the city's environment.
