

PHOTO BY AMY BOX FELLHOELTER

On Nov. 21, members of the public take their first look at three unique designs from the architects of BMA who created the science museum concepts.

By Mike Steely
Senior Writer
steelym@knoxfocus.com

When the Knox County Retirement and Pension Board met last week the class action lawsuit against Knox County was only mentioned once.

Pension Board Director Jennifer Schroeder, in giving her report and setting up meeting dates for 2020, asked Attorney John Owings if the meetings should be longer "with the report going forward in regards to the lawsuit."

"Do you see us having meetings in less than an hour?" she asked. Owings replied "No."

After an executive session of the pension board two months ago, Owings asked for and received permission to represent the pension board to intercede in a county lawsuit. The pension board is not mentioned in the lawsuit but it is a result of actions by that board in granting vacation days in calculating retirement for some Knox County Sheriff Department employees.

The pension board then voted to move their monthly meetings from 2:30 to 3 p.m. The meetings are held in Room 640 in the City-County Building.

Commissioner Hugh Nystrom gave an Investment Committee report noting that "everything is up" and moved to recommended changes in some investments.

Three Concept Plans Proposed at Science Museum Meeting

By Amy Box Fellhoelter

More than forty people ventured out last Thursday night to the City-County Building to watch a presenta-and COO Kelly Headden walked the attendees through the details of each design option.

Others, presenting at the public

Foundation, City Councilmen George Wallace and Andrew Roberto, and other representatives of BarberMcMurry Architects