

Rural Metro opens new Strawberry Plains Pike fire station

By Mike Brady
Editor
mikebrady@ruralmetro.com

For many, it's an early start to work and business in the heart of the Blue Ridge. The citizens see the station. Rural Metro Fire of the county opened Strawberry Pike Fire Station 27, at 1000 Strawberry Pike, about 10 miles from the highway, on the corner.

The new fire station is a new facility, built in 2010, and it's the first fire station in the county and the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county.

The new station was built in 2010, and it's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county.

The new station was built in 2010, and it's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county.

Rural Metro Fire of the Blue Ridge opened the new Strawberry Plains Pike fire station. The ribbon is held by state and county officials including Rural Metro Fire of the Blue Ridge.

The new station was built in 2010, and it's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county.

The new station was built in 2010, and it's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county.

The new station was built in 2010, and it's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county.

The new station was built in 2010, and it's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county.

The new station was built in 2010, and it's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county.

The new station was built in 2010, and it's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county.

The new station was built in 2010, and it's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county. It's the first fire station in the county.

High renovation in progress

By Mike Brady
Editor
mikebrady@ruralmetro.com

The new high school is a major renovation of the old high school. The new school is a major renovation of the old high school. The new school is a major renovation of the old high school.

The new high school is a major renovation of the old high school. The new high school is a major renovation of the old high school. The new high school is a major renovation of the old high school.

The new high school is a major renovation of the old high school. The new high school is a major renovation of the old high school. The new high school is a major renovation of the old high school.