Farragut residents unhappy with SG

Farragut residents are expressing their dissatisfaction with the current state of the city. They feel that the city government is not doing enough to address the issues facing the community. The residents are calling for more transparency and accountability from the city officials.

TVA Towers move, Andrew Johnson Building sale on commission agenda

The Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) is planning to move its towers to a new location. This move is part of a larger initiative to modernize the agency's infrastructure. The Andrew Johnson Building is also up for sale, with the proceeds from the sale to be used for other city projects.

The Andrew Johnson Building is a historic landmark in Knoxville. Its sale is a significant event for the city, as it will provide a source of funds for various public works and community development projects.

The TVA towers are an important part of the city's skyline. Their relocation will require careful planning and coordination with the city and other stakeholders to ensure a smooth transition.

The city is committed to improving its infrastructure and providing better services to its residents. The sale of the Andrew Johnson Building and the relocation of the TVA towers are key steps in this process.
