Something special happened last week in the Norwood neighborhood. Resident Ashley Lyons was lamenting the lack of a group Easter Egg Hunt. She took to the Nextdoor website with a suggestion.

"I've been working in yard all day. Just came in catching up on news. Why would any church hold services, outdoor activities, or gatherings? Why would you risk your congregation safety? I just don't understand! You can have church at home!" she posted.

Oh, Norwood, how wondering if anyone would be interested in posting an Egg in their window for kids to hunt while walking or riding our neighborhood?" she asked.

Textweekend is Easter Week-end and with everyone having to stay at home while staying safe, I thought this would give parents and kids something to do. We have so many wonderful neighbors out walking their pets and with kids it would be fun," Lyons continued in the post she titled "Egg Hunt - Norwood with Social Distancing."

The idea caught on quickly and Lyons heard from LouAnn Rodgers, Bryan Thomas and Fonda Crawford of Camberland Estates and Marge McPhee of West Haven Village. Nancy Coon of Ashley Phillips of Norwood decorated her front window with Easter Egg pictures so children walking by can spot them. Many other residents did the same and the idea caught on.

After a moment of silence and the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, Chancellor Horn relayed the state SOI will meet Thursday, April 9, to address student credits, grades, attendance, and matters which are affecting education directly. Once the Rock County SOI receives the state information from this meeting, it will be relayed to the county accordingly.

"Thanks to all those watching at home ... tremendous efforts are being made to meet the physical needs of our students through programs as our food distribution plan and ... our K-12 home program," said Horn. She explained that paper packets are available for kindergarten through eighth-grade students whose homes lack a computer.
