

Jason's Falafel House staff member, Tawin 2016, Councilman Andrew Roberts, Cameron Brooks and Ventrice Hodge prepare to deliver the 200 bagged lunches to KAT workers.

Giving back to KAT employees

By Mike Stealy
Senior Writer
stealy@knoxnews.com

"They are our front-line people we don't think about. They provide an essential service," said Cameron Brooks of Realty Executives Associates and the Knox County Election Commission.

He was talking about Knoxville Area Transit employees. Brooks had been pondering how he might show them some appreciation and he called Councilman Andrew Roberts. The two men talked about it and decided on a meal for the employees and followed through with the idea Friday.

Brooks and Roberts began raising funds on Facebook and contacted Yassin's Falafel House. "KAT Worker Appreciation Day" was announced and Friday at 11 a.m. Brooks and Roberts met at the restaurant at 706 Walnut Street to pick up individually wrapped and bagged chicken or steak gyro and french fries.

Ventrice Hodge, vice president of the Amalgamated Transit Union, joined the two men in helping to bag the 200 lunches with restaurant owner Yassin Terou. The staff of the Falafel House spent many hours and effort to prepare and bagging the food.

"I know Yassin really wanted to give out to the community," Brooks said.

They worked to coordinate the meals with KAT's

Human Resources Office and delivered the meals to the KAT office on Magnolia Avenue to be given out to employees.

Hodge said the bags of food would be picked up by transit drivers as they report for their work shifts.

Brooks said that a fund raising effort to cover the cost of the food exceeded what was sought and the rain held off as they loaded two vehicles to deliver a free meal to the KAT workers.

Absentee voting expanded to everyone

By Mike Stealy
Senior Writer
stealy@knoxnews.com

Until last week voting by mail in Tennessee was permitted only for registered voters who were 60 years old or older, traveling or had physical conditions that qualified for applying. Hearing exposure to the COVID-19 to let anyone who requests an absentee ballot to receive one. She ordered that state and local election commissions update their websites to let voters know how to request an absentee ballot.

Two weeks ago voting Knox County Director of Elections Curt Rodgers reported that applications for voting election for the August 6th primary and local election. The election commission is also available by calling 865-215-2480.

In the election four years ago 660 absentee ballots were cast according to Cliff Davis, the new director of elections. He told the Focus Friday that 3,905 requests had been received.

City Human Resources Department passes first reading

By Mike Stealy
Senior Writer
stealy@knoxnews.com

Knoxville Mayor Indya Kincannon's push to create a Human Resources Department passed in a split vote Tuesday. Several citizens called into the Zoom meeting to speak for and against the measure but a 7-2 vote passed the creation of the new department on first reading at Tuesday's city council meeting.

Mayor Kincannon said she hopes the next city council meeting won't be via the internet but live. That meeting could see the second and final reading of the ordinance.

Dr. Vickie Hatfield, Civil Service Merit Board Director, remarked that the amended ordinance excluded employees and the public from the procreation of a new department, said the ordinance was "not written in a co-operative experience."

The 21-year employee also said the creation of a new Human Resources Department moves most of her duties to HR where they become the duties of one person appointed by the mayor.

Hatfield said the idea is "the most divisive" she had ever seen and that most of the city employees oppose it. The Civil Service Merit Board voted 3-2 against creation of the HR department.

However, the spokesman for the fire department and the past president of the Knoxville Fraternal Order of Police supported the creation. Mark Taylor said the current system of hiring and over-