

City reserves police department's uniform, code of conduct policies

Seattle Police Department's uniform and code of conduct policies will remain in place, even as the city considers whether to merge with the county police department, according to a city council decision.

The city council voted 10-4 to reject a proposal to merge with the county police department, which would have required the city to adopt the county's policies.

The city council also voted to reject a proposal to merge with the county police department, which would have required the city to adopt the county's policies.

The city council also voted to reject a proposal to merge with the county police department, which would have required the city to adopt the county's policies.

Safe Summer Fun

Two young girls enjoy playing in a stream at the New Ijams Nature Center. The center offers programs for all ages.

New Ijams Nature Center programs offer fun for all ages

The New Ijams Nature Center, located in the heart of the city, offers a variety of programs for all ages. The center is a great place to spend a day with family and friends.

The center offers a variety of programs for all ages.

The center offers a variety of programs for all ages.

The center offers a variety of programs for all ages.

The center offers a variety of programs for all ages.

The center offers a variety of programs for all ages.

Size of Knox Commission before Charter Review Committee

The Knox Commission will be a key factor in the city's decision on whether to merge with the county police department.

The Knox Commission will be a key factor in the city's decision on whether to merge with the county police department.

The Knox Commission will be a key factor in the city's decision on whether to merge with the county police department.

The Knox Commission will be a key factor in the city's decision on whether to merge with the county police department.

Work session questions new northwest school

A person working on a project.

A person working on a project.

A person working on a project.

The work session questions new northwest school.

The work session questions new northwest school.

The work session questions new northwest school.