Knox County voters turned out in greater numbers than in previous years for the recent election, according to officials from the county clerk's office.

The high turnout was attributed to a combination of factors, including the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic and the efforts of local election officials to ensure a safe and accessible voting process.

County Clerk [Name] noted that the turnout was particularly high for certain precincts, suggesting that voters were motivated by the importance of the election.

The results of the election will be announced in the coming weeks, and officials are looking forward to serving the community in the future.
