All bars, restaurants serving alcohol must close at 11 p.m.

The City of Knoxville has announced that all bars and restaurants serving alcohol must close at 11 p.m. This new ordinance is intended to help reduce the risk of COVID-19 transmission in public spaces. The city is also encouraging businesses to take other safety measures, such as wearing masks and maintaining social distancing. The new closing time will go into effect on June 15, 2020. Businesses that do not comply with the ordinance may face fines and penalties. The city is committed to protecting the health and safety of its residents and is taking these steps to help slow the spread of the virus.

The new ordinance is a key part of the city's strategy to control the spread of COVID-19. By limiting the hours that bars and restaurants are open, the city hopes to reduce the number of people who are in public spaces during the evening hours. This will help to reduce the risk of close contact between people, which is a major mode of transmission for the virus. The city is also providing resources to help businesses understand the new requirements and to help them stay open and safe. The city is confident that these measures will help to protect the community and to get the city back on track.
