commercial real estate firms have announced their joint venture on an extensive real estate portfolio. Goldman Partners Realty will now be the front-facing real estate agents for most properties developed or owned by well-known real estate developer, Tony Cappiello and his various investment entities.

More than 50 Cappiellocontrolled properties will now be presented by the Goldman Partners Realty build-to-suit. These properties are located throughout Knoxville, Oak Ridge and beyond and include retail, office and raw land properties. Several of the properties are prominent and even historically significant such as the former Naples restaurant, former West End Antiques, and former Arnwine Furniture in Bearden.

According to Tony Cappiello, real estate developer, investor, and principal lo Real Estate, "I want to focus on my passion of both ground-up construction and the redevelopment of older properties. While I will continue to represent myself on some properties directly, working with Goldman Partners Realty on most of my portfolio will get the properties the attention they require and allow me to concentrate on such projects as the Oak Ridge City Center and Creekwood Park in

He went on to say, "Steve Goldman and I have worked on many real estate transactions going back to my 2010 acquisition of the former Lord Lindsey in downtown Knoxville. I have always found him and his team to be some of the most competent, professional, and organized commercial real estate agents with whom I have worked. I am confident that they'll do a fine job in finding great tenants and buyers."

School mask mandate taken to commission

By Mike Steely Sénior Writer steelym@knoxfocus.com

Three school board members, aided by Knox County Mayor Glenn Jacobs, went before the Knox County Commission's work session Tuesday evening demanding an outside attorney be hired to fight the federal judge's mask mandate in county schools.

Two other citizens also spoke to the meeting arguing that "normal has been taken away from our children" and charging that the Knox County Law Department were very critical of Buuck is "inadequate" to argue the case.

Susan Horn charged that Law Director David Buuck doesn't want to look at new "medical evidence" and added, "There's a sense of urgency in the county."

School board member

Buuck responded to the speakers by saying he totally agrees with them and said he's appealed the judge's decision and is waiting on a chance to appear before the 6th District Court. He also answered questions and comments from the commission.

Some of the comments although he responded that he and his depart-Jacobs followed by ment are doing everyclaiming the federal thing the school board judge's ruling involves has asked. He did note that there was no vote in the board's last meeting on presenting the issue to the commission and said that the three school board members asking for an outside attorney do not represent the entire board of education. The item wasn't on the agenda until just before the meeting. Several commissioners, including Larsen Jay and Kyle Ward noted that the resolution would need to be reworded before it is presented again at today's regular board meeting. Jay suggested amending the resolution to hiring an outside attorney to advise the law department on the case rather than to represent the school board separately. He also suggested that if an attorney is hired the school board should pay for the representation. In a unanimous vote the resolution proceeds to the meeting this evening.

Dr. Jon Rysewyk and Dr. Linda Cash address the audience at a public meeting Thursday night at Bearden High School. Rysewyk and Cash are seeking to become Knox County Schools' next superintendent.

"more than Knox County schools." He said that such a ruling could even apply to all public buildings. He charged the law department "doesn't have the bandwidth" to handle the case.

The county mayor said that other departments have hired outside representation.

The public discussion came after Chairman Richie Beeler introduced a motion to consider the request. Knox County Board of Education Chair Kristi Kristy and members Betsy Henderson and Susan Horn took the podium to request the commission authorize and bankroll a separate attorney. Kristy said that 60,000 students and the school staff are being punished for the sake of four children. Henderson said other places are "opening up, but we still have the mask mandates."

Dr. Jon Rysewyk and Dr. Linda Cash had their final interviews and now all that remains is for the board to vote at a called meeting Tuesday afternoon at the Andrew Johnson Building.

The meeting begins at 5 p.m. and will culminate the search process, which began after Thomas, who has been KCS Superintendent since 2017, recently announced his intentions to retire in June. Thomas has spent five decades in public education in East Tennessee.

Cash is the director of schools in Bradley County, a district that serves approximately 10,000 students while Rysewyk is an assistant superintendent at KCS and serves as the district's chief academic officer.

While each finalist has a unique vision for the future of Knox County Schools, both agree that the students must be the primary focus and that they must have a team of solid people to do the job successfully.

They also agree that board and the superintendent must work together and stand united on controversial decisions.

"When we have an issue and we have to make a decision that could

"There should never be a voice from my office that says,' I don't think they should have done that. I think the voice should be, 'We are so proud that our board had to take a hard stance and we are 100 percent behind them."

Rysewyk said that the board and the superintendent must work together even if a disagreement exists.

"You're going to disagree sometimes," he said. "It happens but we have to work together. Our job is to execute the board's will when that happens."

"I want to be the superintendent in Knox County. This is the only place that I want to be."

Both expressed the importance of teamwork in a district the size of KCS, which serves 60,000 students and has 7,000 employees.

"I've been a team builder everywhere I've been," said Rysewyk, who served as assistant principal at Fulton High School and as director of Emerald Academy, Knox County's only charter school. "This is not a one-man job in a district the size of Knox County.

"You have to have a team of people that you trust."

Cash, too, said she couldn't do the iob alone.

The two finalists to replace Bob Thomas as Knox County Schools Superintendent concluded a busy day by making their cases to the public Thursday.

Dr. Linda Cash and Dr. Jon Rysewyk answered questions submitted by the public and asked by WBIR's John Becker Thursday night at Bearden High School.

Cash and Rysewyk each went before the Knox County Board of Education Friday, after having lunch with community leaders and touring schools around the county during the day Thursday.

On Thursday night, the two candidates addressed several issues, but both said that the district's first priority should be its students.

Cash noted that she has three children who all received a public education and were athletes said that the district must invest in its students.

"We have to develop grit," said Cash, who heads a district that has 17 schools and serves approximately 10,000 students. "We have to be a part of that change and

duncanj@knoxfocus.com

Bob Yarborough, the very popular host of a morning show on WOKI, hit the nail on the head recently when he said what some people were calling misinformation today should more accurately be called disagreement.

Some on the left just cannot stand to have anything they say or believe even be questioned, much less opposed.

Mr. Yarbrough was pointing out many things on COVID and its vaccines.

Rahm Emanuel, the former congressman, mayor of Chicago, and presidential aide, said years ago that liberals should never "let a crisis go to waste" in their efforts to expand the power and control of government.

So those on the left, seeing that the economy was so good that Donald Trump was about to be reelected, jumped on the virus for all it was worth.

They greatly exaggerated the danger and extent of the virus to give them an excuse to shut down the economy and the schools, to spend trillions of federal dollars, and to buy votes by sending checks to everyone.

> I have never heard Joe Rogan. But because he has so many millions of listeners and because he put on two experts who spoke with facts about the dangers and harm of the vaccines, there have been demands to censor him.

against the prevailing attitudes of the government, big pharma and medical elites about vaccines and face masks".

Napolitano added that the "Lefties...who want Rogan silenced prefer that there be no public dialogue on health care because they hate and fear the speech that liberates."

On that same day, Alex Berenson wrote "the White House has begun an extraordinary assault on free speech in America. It is no longer content to merely force social media companies to suppress dissenting views. It appears to be setting the stage to use federal police powers."

He wrote this because of a Department of Homeland security bulletin describing the "terrorist threat" from those who spread "misleading narratives" or physicians who agreed "undermine public trust in Traunmüller of the Univergovernment in institutions."

Berensen, who is a former New York Times reporter, has written many fact-based columns on the virus and the vaccines, none of which have been proven wrong.

Keith Preston wrote in Chronicles Magazine last year that "all the tech and media executives who are censoring and de-platforming voices on the right (are) closely tied to the central state and its agencies of surveillance and control, and increasingly wedded to the cultural and political goals of the left."

Columnist George Will has said there is less free speech on college campuses today than in any place else and that our university seemed to "celebrate diversity and everything but thought.'

Professors Richard

sity of Mannheim and Matthias Reeves of the University of Leeds wrote a lengthy study entitled "Is Free Speech in Danger on University Campuses?"

They found that it was and wrote "left-leaning students are less likely to tolerate controversial viewpoints."

It has long seemed to me that those who are the loudest in proclaiming their tolerance are the least tolerant of all.

Professor Jonathan Turley of George Washington University wrote "society is denying speech rights in the name of tolerance, enforcing mutual respect through categorical censorship." He added that of allowing the true free speech protected by the First Amendment, "we take refuge instead in an awkward and forced silence."

> Currently only two states exempt active duty military from paying all state income taxes while fifteen others allow a portion of military pay to be exempt from state taxes - usually combat pay. Thirty three states exempt military retirement pay from state income taxes. I wish that this were extended to all states. Since Tennessee does not have an income tax, it exempts military payment of motor vehicle registration taxes. I would like this extended to a rebate on sales taxes. If any state did not want to exempt military pay, then there should be a 100% write off on federal income tax filings by military personnel of any taxes paid.

I think it is time to show our military and their families our appreciation for their sacrifices, their patriotism and their service. A tax exemption at the Federal, state and local levels would be a start.

Magnolia Avenue project may get a tax break from city

Bv Mike Steely Senior Writer steelym@knoxfocus.com

Knoxville City Council's Tuesday night meeting may see approval of an amendment to the Magnolia Avenue Warehouse District Redevelopment project to give businesses there a tax break.

A similar agenda item will be discussed at the next Knox County Commission meeting. The resolution would amend the boundaries of the area and authorize tax increment financing there to help develop the neglected portion of the city.

Lakeshore Park will get a second and final reading for distribution of beer by licensed vendors holding server permits. Beer Board Chairwoman Janet Testerman is sponsoring the ordinance.

Also on second reading is closing the "slivers" along Willow Avenue and East Jackson Avenue

The council may also vote to increase a contract for the I-275 Business Park Improvement Project, upping the agreement with CDM Smith Inc. to just over $1 million.

Gun violence is the subject of another resolution sponsored by Councilwomen Gwen McKenzie and Amelia Parker. They are asking the state legislators who represent the city to work toward recognizing gun violence as a public health issue.

For a number of years, I have sent to my representative (but not Tim Burchett) and my senators (not Marsha Blackburn) the idea that active-duty military should be tax exempt from all taxes, federal, state and local. Nationally, the exemption would apply to federal income taxes. Locally, it would apply to all sales taxes. The reply from the politicians always was that due to the federal deficit, such a proposal would fail due to the budgetary implications. I don't care. The budgetary impact on a trillion dollar budget would be trivial. The tax exemption should be

Former Sheriff's Narcotics Chief Faces Federal Indictment

Another one of former Knox County Sheriff Jimmy "J. J." Jones' model employees seems to be in a spot of trouble. Actually it could be big trouble. David Henderson, supervisor of the Knox County Sheriff's Narcotics Unit during much of Jones' administration, has been indicted in the U.S. District Court. The indictment, which has just been unsealed, alleges other unnamed people joined Henderson in a conspiracy involving seized drug money. The indictment accuses Henderson of having used those seized drug monies as well as a "drug expense card" for personal purchases. According to the unsealed indictment, the scheme allegedly occurred from 2011 through 2018 while David Henderson headed the narcotics unit in the sheriff's department. WBIR-TV states the indictment alleges Henderson ordered subordinates to purchase items amounting to thousands of dollars "ranging from electronics to herbicide to Yeti coolers to lounge chairs with the money," all for the benefit of Henderson and his family and friends. According to the indictment, David Henderson "directed several of his subordinate KCSO officers to construct a duck blind on property owned by benefit of the former Knox County sheriff."

This is not the first time that close associates of former Sheriff "JJ" Jones have run into trouble. Former Knox County Commissioners Ivan Harmon and Scott "Scooby" Moore were fired by current Sheriff Tom Spangler following a scathing report issued by the Tennessee State Comptroller's office that pointed out several glaring deficiencies in the program they managed, which is putting it politely. Jones, who is challenging Spangler for the GOP nomination for sheriff in the May Republican primary, was quoted by the Knoxville News Sentinel as describing Moore and Harmon as "model public employees."

Gina Oster, who is running for the Knox County Commission, has insisted upon remaining on the Knox County Sheriff Office's Merit System Council, which is scheduled to hear the appeals of both Moore and Harmon, who are appealing their firing from the sheriff's department. Interestingly, David Henderson's merit council file has nary a mention of any federal investigation of Henderson in it. Readers will recall Henderson suddenly retired from the sheriff's department after the FBI investigation into his conduct was beginning.

Oster and her colleague on the merit council, Jim Jennings, have been close political allies of "JJ" Jones for years.

Do Bylaws Mean Anything?

The first person to congratulate Elaine Davis for picking up a petition to run against state Representative Eddie Mannis tells a tale and illustrates an important point.

Davis is the vice chair of the Knox County Republican Party and, as this is written, I still don't think a former employee of Knox she has resigned her office to educate our children, a plan the board would County for the personal as required by the state it's action. It's not about accept.

party bylaws. Indeed, Davis symbolic action, it's not appeared at a recent meeting of the West Knox Republican Club where she identified herself as the party vice chair while soliciting signatures for her petition. I believe it is a clear violation of the state party bylaws for Elaine Davis to remain in office as vice chair of the Knox County Republican Party while a candidate against an incumbent GOP officeholder.

And the first person to offer Davis congratulations for picking up a petition was Knox County Republican Party Chair Daniel Herrera. It's yet another example of the continuous violation of the state party bylaws by the locals and interference in primaries. The party leadership is supposed to be strictly neutral.

Recalls Successful

Nobody can dispute San Francisco is one of the most liberal and permissive cities in the United States, yet even voters there have signaled they have had enough of woke politics. Voters in San Francisco just recalled three Democrat members of their local school board, including board chair Gabriela Lopez and board vice chair Faauuga Moliga as well as Alison Collins. Nor was the vote close; as this is written it appears the three were swept out of office by better than 70% of the vote.

Even ultra-liberal Mayor London Breed thought too many school board members were more interested in progressive politics than the welfare of the children attending schools in San Francisco.

The recall effort was sponsored by that bane of school boards in every Leftist community: parents.

Siva Raj, a local parent who was a recall activist, summed it up, by saying, "The city of San Francisco has risen up and said this is not acceptable to put our kids last. Talk is not going about changing the name on a school, it's about helping kids inside the school building read and learn math." Exactly.

School Board Members Ask County Commissioners To Violate County Charter

Siva Raj could do some good here in Knox County. Kristi Kristy, chair of the Knox County Board of Education, and her colleagues Betsy Henderson and Susan Horn are busy riding a see-saw in their effort to push the county commission into allowing the board to hire an outside attorney at a county commission workshop last Tuesday. These board of education members' actions follow a series of events, which the dynamic trio apparently chose to ignore.

The board of education voted 5-2-2 to support a motion made by Mike McMillan to give Knox County Law Director David Buuck more time in sorting out the suit brought by a group of parents to enforce a masking policy. Federal Judge Ronnie Greer told the board to adopt a plan to protect roughly four students most vulnerable to the virus. The judge's decision was akin to Suzie having a peanut allergy and Tommy is banned from bringing a peanut butter sandwich for lunch from home because she might somehow get hold of it.

Henderson offered up a plan, which failed. Betsy never tweaked her plan, nor did she ever ask her colleagues what she could do to alter it to get five votes, a majority of the nine member board. Neither did Betsy Henderson ever bother to visit with Law Director David Buuck about her concerns or ask for help in crafting

At the same board meeting where a majority of their colleagues supported the motion made by Mike McMillan, Kristy sent around a letter asking the commission to allow the board to hire outside counsel. It already had the signatures of Kristi Kristy and Betsy Henderson. Nary another member of the board of education signed the letter and why would they? The board had just voted to give Buuck a vote of confidence. Yet Kristy, Henderson and Horn were the stars of a kabuki political theatre before the county commission's workshop last week.

The theatre was for the benefit of those parents angry about their children having to wear masks. Knox County Mayor Glenn Jacobs has bravely posted on his social media that he stands with the parents and the commission seems quite willing to follow the mayor down the path of performance art.

Jacobs is, by profession, an entertainer, and he and the commissioners are all acting out their part of a well plotted drama, which is accomplishing exactly nothing. Kristy, Henderson and Horn evidently don't like the idea of instructing the law director's office about the lawsuit in public and the commission would be simply gambling with the taxpayers' money. There is absolutely no guarantee of success and the likelihood of a suit being resolved before the end of the school year in May is about the same as Halley's Comet descending into someone's backyard tomorrow night. Nor did Kristy and Henderson even have the right to ask the commission to intervene once the board had acted.

Does it resolve anything for the parents who are frustrated and angry? Does it accomplish anything? Does it fix the problem? Does it do anything aside from spending more tax money? Nope.

Aside from spending money, it wouldn't accomplish a single thing except create a constitutional (charter) crisis. The Knox County Charter specifically states that the Knox County Law Director has complete and sole authority of all legal affairs of Knox County. I would suggest that Kristi Kristy, Betsy Henderson and Susan Horn actually read the Knox County Charter. This could very well prevent a serious and expensive litigious conflict between the law department and any Knox County government entity that might violate the county charter.

Ethics Complaints and Sunshine Law Violations?

Now comes the news several ethics complaints have been filed by citizens against Kristi Kristy, Betsy Henderson and Susan Horn. The board of education has an ethics committee composed of Mike McMillan, Jennifer Owen and Evetty Satterfield. The board's ethics committee will have to meet, elect a chair, and decide the procedures it will follow during its hearings on the complaints filed against Henderson, Horn and Kristy.

The timing couldn't be worse as the filing deadline closed on last Thursday and Henderson picked up another opponent. Kristy has an opponent inside the Republican primary, Phil King, and a Democrat challenger in the general election. Horn is not up for re-election this cvcle.

What Kristy, Henderson and Horn likely saw as potential political triumph, silly as that sounds, has degenerated into yet another distracting political brawl. It has fired up the Left as much as it has excited the Right and has obscured the goal shared by just about every Republican officeholder in the county of allowing school children to get back to why they are in school anyway - to learn.

Again, working off my very basic knowledge of tax law, it's my understanding that the return received is reduced when married individuals file separately instead of jointly. However, filing separately may be the best option.

Bridging City, County Governments Together

By Ralphine Major ralphine3@yahoo.com

I vaguely remember the site before the structure was built. For years, the Old Knox County Courthouse at the corner of Gay Street and Main and the Old City Hall atop the hill at Henley Street and Summit Hill Drive had served area citizens. In 1980, the new City-County Building brought a new look and a new location for Knox County and the City of Knoxville governments.

The long, horizontal style building overlooking the Tennessee River is positioned alongside and extends behind the Old Knox County Courthouse. Dwight D. Eisenhower of two decades, the Tenhad carried Tennessee in the 1952 election, albeit it only barely, with the final totals being 446,147 for "Ike" and 443,710 for Democratic nominee Adlai Stevenson. It was a difference of 2,437 votes. The 1956 presidential election saw a rematch between Eisenhower and Stevenson. Tennessee was considered to be something less of a battleground state as Stevenson had allowed the Democratic National Convention to select his running mate without any interference from him. A host of prospective vice presidents had jumped at the chance, including Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota and Senate Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson of Texas.

The Volunteer State found itself with an abundance of political talent with no less than three vice presidential hopefuls: Governor Frank Clement and Senators Estes Kefauver and Albert Gore. Clement had been the keynote speaker and as an orator of considerable ability and note, great things were expected from the governor. Clement, a wonderful speaker on the hustings, did not come across nearly so well on the relatively new medium of television. Governor Clement's speech was not a success. That left Senators Kefausetts began to rise in the vote totals: John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Amon Evans was publisher of the Nashville Tennessean, the voice of liberal Democratic politics in the state, since the death of his father, Silliman, the previous year. The younger Evans, believing Gore's continued candidacy might make it possible for Kennedy to overtake Kefauver, sought out Tennessee's junior United States senator and reportedly demanded that he withdraw and throw his support to his colleague. Evans reportedly told Gore he would oppose the senator in the future if he did not withdraw. For whatever reason, Gore saw the handwriting on the wall and the break caused a stampede for Estes Kefauver who finally won the vice presidential nomination. Few Tennessee Democrats believed the Volunteer State would abandon its native son in the general election and confidently believed the Stevenson -Kefauver ticket would carry the Volunteer State in the general election. Yet the Republicans had hardly given up the ghost as in past elections. Most believed the personal popularity of President Eisenhower gave the GOP an even chance to win Tennessee. As had been the case for the better part nessee Republican Party was dominated by Carroll Reece, a congressman from the First District, and his supporters. Reece had been the Southern manager for Ohio U.S. senator Robert Taft during the 1952 Republican National Convention. Having served as chairman of the Republican National Committee, Reece had a plethora of contacts across the country and likely knew more Republicans in Tennessee on a first name basis than any other single individual. Yet Eisenhower had carried Tennessee by winning more than merely the usual Republican vote in the Volunteer State. The 1952 election saw the first real movement of white middle-class suburban voters begin to move toward the Republican Party in Tennessee. Some of those who had joined the Republican Party in the state because of "Ike" did not relish the domination of Congressman Reece. A struggle between Reece and West Tennessee Tennesseans who had cut their political teeth as members of Citizens for Eisenhower sought to take over federal patronage in the area. In 1953, a committee of three Reece supporters and three members chosen by the Citizens for Eisenhower group was proposed to select those the campaign. As might be paign of "sweetness and at-large to the Democrat- didate from our own down- shop for another dress shirt imagined, that proposal was one which Carroll Reece did not much care for and the wily congressman gave his opponents a lesson in practical politics. Daniel Taber of New York was the chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee and was opposed to President Eisenhower's proposal to extend the excise tax. Taber proposed to hold the president's bill in his committee without acting upon it. The Eisenhower administration was one vote short on the Rules Committee to discharge the bill from the Ways and Means Committee to the House floor. Eisenhower called Carroll Reece, who was a member of the Rules Committee and asked the Tennessean to change his vote. Reece did and the members of the Citizens for Eisenhower organization were stunned to find the President had restored full control of federal patronage in Tennessee to the congressman from the First District. Almost four years to the day Richard Nixon had come to Nashville to campaign in 1952, he returned in 1956. There was one big difference; now Nixon was Vice President of the United States. He would be greeted at the Nashville airport by 3,000 wellwishers, who ignored sleep and had been gathering at to the scores of youngsters the airport terminal since well before 10:00 p.m. By the time the plane carrying the vice president and Mrs. Nixon taxied down the runway to a specially protected area, the terminal building was "bursting at the seams" according to a Nashville Banner report.

James Stahlman, publisher of the Banner, joined Congressmen Carroll Reece and Howard Baker, and Guy Smith, editor of the Knoxville Journal and campaign manager for the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket, to be on hand to greet Vice President and Mrs. Nixon. A motorcade took the Nixons to the Hermitage Hotel where they spent the night. The next morning, Jim Stahlman hosted a breakfast for Richard and Pat Nixon and the newsmen traveling with the vice presidential party covering light." Instead, Stahlman recommended the GOP campaign be waged with "sledgehammer blows" while stressing the fact Eisenhower had brought "peace, progress and prosperity" to the country. "President Eisenhower's popularity is greater today than it was in 1952 or at any other time," Congressman Carroll Reece agreed. Publisher Jim Stahlman made the introduction of Vice President Richard Nixon in the auditorium of the War Memorial Building which was filled to capacity and overflowing. An appreciative Nixon said Stahlman's introduction was "the most rip-snortin' and best introduction I ever had." The vice president said he had traveled to 32 foreign countries and one observation he had come away with was President Eisenhower was "the most revered and respected man in the world." "Don't settle for second best when you already have the best in Dwight D. Eisenhower!" Nixon cried. As Nixon closed his speech, he alluded to the prosperity theme and brought gales of laughter from the crowd when he said, "America doesn't want warmed over Truman hash when they can get Eisenhower beef and potatoes."

waving campaign signs and said, "If this tremendous support is an indication of the feeling in Tennessee, President Eisenhower will carry the state again in November just as he did in 1952." Richard Nixon summarized the choice of the voters as he saw it; they could "go forward with Eisenhower or back to the policies of the Truman regime." Tennessee Democrats rallied around their own ticket. Former United States Senator Kenneth D. McKellar had not been a warm admirer of Estes Kefauver when they had served together; quite the contrary. Yet McKellar was a Democrat and he contributed $200 to the Stevenson- Kefauver campaign. In today's dollars, that would have the buying power of more than $2,000. The eighty-sevenic National Convention in 1956 and although a plane was put at the crusty political warrior's disposal, McKellar's physician thought it better for him to remain in his hotel apartment. Very reluctantly, McKellar followed the advice of his doctor. McKellar had been one of the first to congratulate Governor Frank Clement on being named keynote speaker for the Democratic National Convention. "It sure is good news for both the governor and for Tennessee generally," McKellar said. "It's a fine compliment for the governor to be selected and I am sure he'll do a great job." According to the Nashville Tennessean, Knoxville became "the political capital of the South" when Adlai Stevenson and Estes Kefauver arrived. Democrats from 11 states dutifully filled "special buses" to join a 100-car motorcade to McGhee Tyson Airport to welcome the Democratic Party's standard bearers. As Democrats arrived in Knoxville, they were escorted to the Andrew Johnson Hotel by uniformed state troopers. Herbert S. "Hub" Walters of Morristown and Democratic Party state chairman, thought it was "a historic occasion for Tennessee." Walters pledged both he and Governor Frank Clement intended in November. Agriculture Commissioner and future Governor Buford Ellington said, "Neither Stevenson nor Kefauver should have a moment's concern about the South's vote this fall." Ellington said when the election was over, Democrats intended to "spell out Evans, was there. Gore, to the nation that the South is solidly Democratic once again."

Willard Yarborough, a reporter for the Knoxville News-Sentinel and sometime member of the Knox County Quarterly Court (the forerunner of the county commission), covered the "unity session" hosted by the Democratic nominees. Yarborough noted in his article "some great Southerner" had once insisted during the dark days of Reconstruction "the South will rise again!" Although Stevenson was from Illinois, Yarborough pointed to soaking wet with perspira-South Tennessee" as the two ticket mates conferred with Democratic leaders from ten states in Knoxville. "Adlai Stevenson and Estes Kefauver would have risen to sing 'Dixie' had someone struck up the band," Yarborough wrote. Although from the Land of Lincoln, Willard Yarborough polished his prose and noted the former governor "looked the part of Jeff Davis" and better still apparently, "talked like one." The meeting was held in Confederate Hall. Kefauver assured those assembled if Adlai Stevenson were elected president, he would guarantee the "South returns to its place in the sun." Stevenson, admired for his wit by his supporters, was even telling southern jokes. "Dick Russell of Georgia (U.S. senator) told me about a Georgia scarecrow," Stevenson told his fellow Democrats. "This one was so good it not only scared all the crows away, but the crows returned all the corn they had stolen the year before." Alabama's governor "Big Jim" Folsom was present and the Democrats gathered together insisted he get up and speak. Likely they didn't have to ask more than once. Folsom grabbed the microphone and thundered, "Down in 'Bama when the wolf packs to return Tennessee to get after our sheep we get the Democratic column our guns... and aim for the leader of the pack."

> Adlai Stevenson had warm words of praise for Governor Frank Clement, who played host to the visitors and led the pep rally for Democrats. Senator Albert Gore, doubtless recovered from his cussing by Amon according to Governor Clement, was "one of the jewels" of the Democratic Party. Senator Gore told the audience he expected to give all his time from September until the November election to working on behalf of the party's ticket.

It was mighty hot that August as Senator Kefauver discovered while in Anderson County. The senator was wearing no undershirt and kept removing his suit jacket to cool off a bit. By the time Kefauver returned to the Andrew Johnson Hotel his shirt was size 17 and a half with a 35-inch sleeve. The homespun Kefauver, whom no less than Lyndon Johnson once dubbed "the greatest campaigner of them all," simply took off his shirt and placed it on the air conditioning unit inside his hotel room to dry it off. Once dry, the senator donned the shirt once again and campaigned throughout the evening. The Knoxville meeting left Democrats, especially those in Tennessee, feeling mighty good. Governor Clement grinned and predicted a victory for his party by a "pretty big" margin. Yet the Republicans felt they had yet another opportunity to win in the Volunteer State, Democratic optimism notwithstanding.

Nixon paid special tribute

By Mike Steely Senior Writer steelym@knoxfocus.com

More than 60 candidates have returned petitions for the May 3rd Knox County Primary Election, vying for 34 different offices. Thursday was the filing deadline and saw a few candidates failing to return the completed forms to qualify. Among those were Republican Tracy A. Clough and Independent Greg Mills for Knox County Mayor. Others with petitions not returned include Marcus A. Lowery, a Democrat for County Clerk; Scott M.

Whaley, a Republican for school board District 4; Heather Hensley, Republican for school board District 6; and Cameron Ward, a Republican for school board District 7.

More than a dozen candidates filed during the final week. Those included Democrat Jackson M.

Fenner for District Attorney General, Democrat Debbie Hensley for County Mayor, and Republican Nicholas Ciparro and Democrat Stuart Hohl for Commission District 3.

Others to file the final week included Republican Allen Merritt for Commission District 7, Democrat Sarah Keith for Sessions Judge Division I, Democrat Dana E. Moran for Circuit Civil ocrat Scott Crammond for Register of Deeds.

Filing for school board seats during the final week were four people for District 1: Democrats John Butler and Charles Frazier and Independents Breyauna Holloway and Reginald Jackson. Independent Paul Michael Sherman filed for District 6 before deadline last week, as did Republican Sessions Judge, and Dem- Steve Triplett for District 7 and Annabel Henley, a Democrat, for District 9.

The May 3 Primary will select a Republican and a Democrat to face each other in the August general elections. All the independent candidates will not appear on the primary ballot but will be in the general election.

Current candidates have until February 24 to withdraw.

Knox County girls to defend state wrestling titles

By Steve Williams

Knox County will have two defending state champions in this week's TSSAA state wrestling championships, which begin Thursday at the Williamson County Expo Center in Franklin.

Carter High's Jailynn Tindall captured her state title last season in the girls' 140-pound weight class and Ella Murphey of Hardin Valley took first place in the 190-pound division.

Tindall is a senior this year and Murphey a sophomore.

Tindall's record this season is 30-1, while Murphey is 11-0. Both captured region championships Friday at Alcoa High.

This week's individual wrestling championships also will include the boys' Division I Class A and AA tournaments.

Elston Turner will have street named in his honor

By Steve Williams

The City of Knoxville is honoring basketball great Elston Turner today (Feb. 21) with a street bearing his name.

Elston Turner Drive, a fitting name for a player who often drove inside to score as well as swishing in points from the outside, will be celebrated in the new Austin Homes area in East Knoxville with a ceremony beginning at 4:30 this afternoon.

The street to be renamed is Burge Avenue and is located between South Bell Street and Harriet Tubman Street.

Gwen McKenzie, who represents the 6th District of the City Council, applied for the street's new name to honor Turner.

Elston led the Austin-East Roadrunners to Knoxville's first state basketball championship in the TSSAA's classification era in 1977. That A-E team, guided by Hall of Fame Coach Clifford Ross, defeated Memphis Hamilton 72-59 in the finals at MTSU's Murphy Center.

PAGE B2 The Knoxville FOCUS West wins a 3 for 1 district deal

By Steve Williams

Elimination games have not been as plentiful on the expanded high school district tournament scene this year as in the past.

But the few that were played offered big rewards.

West's boys basketball team found that out last week in the District 3-4A tourney at Campbell County. The Rebels' 66-57 win over Powell assured them of three more games, beginning with a semifinal contest against top seed Oak Ridge Saturday night.

Depending on how that game turned out, West will play Tuesday in the district's consolation or championship game and will be guaranteed of at least one game in the upcoming Region 2-4A tournament.

Where else can you get a 3 for 1 deal like that?

The Rebels earned it with some long-range accuracy in the first half against Powell and a new and improved 2-3 zone defense that Coach Aubin Goporo highly complimented after the victory.

West also had the most to gain from the district's two elimination games. The No. 5 seed Rebels had lost both regular season games to the No. 4 seed Panthers and came in with a 7-11 record.

They shot the ball like they were much better than their record. In fact, in one eight-minute segment of the first half, the West team looked like it had just attended and graduated from a Stephen Curry 3-point Shooting School.

Five Rebels combined to make seven treys in that stretch and after the last one gave them an 11-point lead (35-24) midway through the second period, they didn't make anymore. But their defense didn't go away.

Powell did make a run at the start of the second half, cutting a 10-point halftime deficit quickly to three, but West got it back up to 10 when point guard Gabriel Pastrana intercepted a and was respectfully complimented the game. Biven added 19 and Noah Johnson 10.

As for that impressive 3-point barrage, Johnson and Biven made two Wrenn and Dave Britton one each.

Powell, which had some big wins ular season, finished 12-16.

February 21, 2022 Karns shakes off young and scrappy Bobcats

By Steve Williams

It wasn't easy, but No. 3 seed Karns pulled out a 71-64 win over No. 6 seed Central in their elimination game in the District 3-4A tournament Thursday night at Campbell County.

"No sir, it's survive and advance and (Coach) Andy (Hill) does a great job with those guys," said Karns veteran Coach Lee Henson after the battle. "They're 100 percent better. And you can tell; they got after it. It was a challenge, but in our district, it's going to be a challenge every night you play."

The Beavers (21-8) had lost by eight points at Central in the two teams' previous meeting.

"They had a good game plan tonight offensively and defensively, and in the first half we were trying to figure out what was going on," said Henson.

Coach Hill pointed out after the game he had put in some things that his team hadn't done this season. "We changed some things offensively and defensively, which is a lot to ask from a young group of kids."

Karns led 21-14 after the first stop, but the Bobcats trailed by only 38-36 at halftime and 50-49 at the end of the third period.

Henson said "our defensive pressure" ultimately was the key to the win.

The Beavers scored 11 straight points to start the fourth period and led 61-49 midway through the final quarter.

"We had a hard time keeping them off the offensive glass," said Hill. "We got some timely stops, but we couldn't finish the stop. Credit their guys. They kept attacking the glass and that was the difference down the stretch in the fourth quarter."

The Bobcats didn't quit and got within four points (68-64) in the final minute.

De'Sean Bishop was a physical force inside for Karns and scored a game-high 20 points. Jaylen Roberts added 18 and JJ Faulkner 16. Walker Lockhart chipped in nine points and Raley Henson eight.

Central (6-23) got 18 points from JD Harris, 13 from Nick Ellis and 11 from Blake McCarty. Andrew Hill and Chris Boseman contributed nine points apiece.

"We got a young group," said Hill. "They'll be back and they're going to go to work. The story is not written for this team yet. I was extremely proud of how hard they played and really how they bought into the preparation of coming up here and playing."

Ray Mears not only made orange a household color in

wherever else

Vol fans might have gathered. Orange became a respectable color to wear to the games.

By Tom Mattingly

He coined the phrase "Big Orange Country," despite assertions to the contrary. Tennessee basketball became a "must-see" event.

There is no greater tribute to Ray Mears than the sea of orange in the stands at Vol sporting events today. It all started ever so humbly, as businessmen started wearing orange neckties to the games.

Mears was on the Tennessee sideline in an orange blazer from 1962-77, pulling up the Vol basketball program by its bootstraps into a position of national prominence.

Mears roared into town in the spring of 1962, a few months short of his 36th birthday off a national championship at Wittenberg (Ohio) College, with gimmicks by the bushel and a burning desire to succeed.

U.T. president Dr. Andrew D. Holt, who wore an orange blazer to Vol home games himself, had challenged everybody involved in the athletics program to do better. It was a time for the Tennessee athletic program to reach for the stars.

The Vol athletic program was not nearly in the shape it is in today. There was a 4-19 record in hoops. There had been no football bowl game since 1957, a 10-10 record in the 1961 and 1962 seasons.

Ray Mears, assistant coach A.W. Davis, and the victorious Vols celebrate the March 1966 win over No. 1-ranked Kentucky in the final game at the Armory-Fieldhouse.

nothing but win. It was a marvelous time to be a Vol fan. The Vol program began to develop a swagger.

Head football coach Bowden Wyatt, acting athletic director after Gen. Robert R. Neyland's death March 28, 1962, tapped Mears to lead the Vol hoops program. He received a more than gentle push from assistant football coach Jim McDonald, an Ohio native.

When Mears arrived, the Vols were playing in the rarely filled Mears, Doug Dickey, Chuck 7,500-seat Armory Fieldhouse. Rohe, and numerous others were Four years later, the Vols opened

> The Vols won the SEC the first year Stokely was open (1967), twice more in the years ahead. Vol hoops were catching everybody's attention. A statewide radio network became a reality. When Mears first arrived in journalist Marvin West.

It was a hot spring day in 1962, when someone suggested it might be good for the players to be playing a pick-up game on the old concrete courts near Shields-Watkins Field on Mears' arrival.

The game started at 3 p.m. and was still going strong at 4 p.m., with no Mears. Finally, when all was nearly lost, Mears arrived.

"We were wilted and dragging, one short jump shot from dead," said A.W. Davis, Mears' first great player and 1965 All-American selection. "Coach Mears nodded. He did not appear to be particularly impressed."

Vanderbilt and Kentucky were the two biggest names in the SEC in the 1960s and Mears took each of them on with a vengeance.

The Vols swept Kentucky in his first season, Vanderbilt in the second, and game nights in Knoxville and other venues as well were starting to get fun.

Mears had his own brand of "Memorial Magic." In his coaching career against Vanderbilt, Mears' teams were 20-10, 9-6 in Memorial Gym, to go with an 11-4 mark in Knoxville.

"Ray Mears was not a good coach," said former UK coach Joe B. Hall. "He was a great coach. From such competition, great, and contentious, rivalries grow."

Vol fans today don't know what they missed by not seeing a Ray Mears-coached University of Tennessee team play at the Armory-Fieldhouse, Stokely Athletics Center, or at any other venue.

Fans arrived early for all the home game hoopla, from a pregame routine in which the players warmed up to the strains of "Sweet Georgia Brown," to the pep band marching around the arena as it made its entrance. A large American flag was unfurled from the ceiling. The Vols were introduced with the house lights dimmed, a spotlight focused on a large Big Orange "T."

Ray Mears, the man in the orange blazer all those years, got the job done, just as McDonald had prophesied.

Mears was some kind of promoter, some kind of coach, some kind of man.

He was the right man at the right time for the University of Tennessee.

His win total includes high school and middle school victories and he estimated he had coached around 750 games.

"I started out in middle school and won a state championship at Homestead in Cumberland County," said Smith.

Maybe it's the distance. Knoxville and Lexington are separated by approximately 170 miles. It's a quick three-hour trek down I-75.

Maybe it's the familiarity. These teams have played 234 times, with the Wildcats holding a 157-77 advantage.

Or maybe it's just that the Vols and Wildcats simply don't like each other.

With all that in mind, last week I ventured to Thompson-Boling Arena for the latest edition of this rock fight. A capacity crowd had their tickets scanned and were loud and rowdy from the jump.

Kentucky head coach John Calipari has been Public Enemy Number One since his days running the show at Memphis, and not much has changed since then. He received some of the loudest boos of the night when he walked onto the floor for the first time. Some of the loudest cheers occurred when Calipari received an early technical foul.

Nearly seven minutes into the game, a fracas occurred at the Kentucky bench. Tennessee's John Fulkerson fell out of the bounds and when Santiago Vescovi went over the help him up, the Kentucky strength coach stepped in his way. Vols guard Zakai Zeigler gave the strength coach a small shove and it was on.

Not that the game needed a spark, but it had one.

section? "Just like football... Clap. Clap. Clap clap clap."

Back in January, Tennessee was manhandled by Kentucky, 107-79. This time around, revenge was sweet with a 76-63 victory in front of their adoring fans.

"This game was personal," said Tennessee guard Kennedy Chandler. "We came out in Lexington, and we didn't play our best. I felt like this second time, we played like the team we are. We were capable of being a better team than we were when we played up there. I feel like they took us for granted. We came out and we didn't let up. What Coach Barnes and I were saying the whole time was, 'Just don't let up and keep it going. Never give up'. We just kept pushing. They made their runs, and they didn't give up. They made their runs, but we had to finish out strong."

"This building, I'm partial, but I think it's the best," said Tennessee head coach Rick Barnes, who is now 9-7 against Calipari and Kentucky. "I mean, everybody talks about the blue bloods, I mean the orange bloods are right there. Our fans, I mean tonight it was special, but there's a lot of games this year where our fans have just been spectacular. Our players feed off of it, there's no question about that, absolutely they love it, they appreciate the support."

It's possible that these teams will play again this season, maybe at the SEC tournament in Tampa next month.

That would be all sorts of fun, wouldn't it?

It's rare when one player nears 40 points in a high school boys basketball game, much less two.

But there was a spectacular battle within a battle as Karns went against Carter Feb. 8 at Jim Williams Gymnasium in Strawberry Plains.

When the individual scoring was tallied after the Beavers' 82-74 comefrom-behind victory, Karns' JJ Faulkner and Carter's Dalton McNew each had posted a career high 38 points.

wavs. Faulkner, a quick 5-10 guard, had nine points at halftime as Karns trailed 45-35 but poured in 29 of his team's 47 points after intermission.

"JJ is the engine that ed layup. goes for us," said Karns Coach Lee Henson. "The other guys feed off of him when he gets going."

JJ hit four 3-pointers and made 8 of 10 free throws. Most of his points simply came when he beat the defense and drove into the lane for layups.

For the Hornets, McNew, 6-2 and strong, scored the first three points of the game on a steal, layup and one. He also made the last shot of the contest with a dunk.

The Beavers took much better care of the ball after intermission and moved ahead 56-54 at the third stop. An 8-0 run, including two layups by JJ, extended their lead to 10 with three minutes to go. Carter got no closer than six the rest of the way.

Presidential Truths

We made the best of Day, but on this Thurstimes in the worst of times. Kathryn Limbaugh

There is a famous scene in the movie "A Few Good Men" where actor Jack Nicholson, portraying a marine colonel, shouts, "You can't handle the truth!" in defense of his murderous actions. Apparently, entrenched bureaucrats in the deep state, elite government agents and the corrupt media consider We The People similarly. Vladamir Lenin and Joseph Stalin once derisively called duped Russians "useful idiots." Apparently, the ruling class has disdain for their subjects in all countries.

All week I kept waiting for my story/essay to find me. It finally did, but only late in the week. By the time you read this column it will be Monday and Presidents' day before, I write in tribute to the commander-inchief of democracy, Rush Limbaugh, who died 2-17-2021.

Rush changed the landscape by opposing progressives/leftists and squishy RINOs (Republicans in name only) like Mitt Romney. Since more than 90% of the media are Democrat/ progressives, Rush provided a conservative counterbalance to the liberal media groupthink. Remember, there can be no debate if there is only one perspective. We are fortunate to have The Knoxville Focus as a counterweight to the local fish wrapper and its corporate masters.

baugh Letter recently dis- why is a more fundamental tilled Rush's principles for question. I wonder why Jill opposing the Democrat Biden pushed Ol' Joe to be progressive left: know your president?

enemy, don't be afraid to reject a false premise, stay on the offensive and don't give up. You can deliver a powerful counterweight to leftists and big government tyranny. For the sake of our children and grandchildren we must oppose what is happening in, for example, Canada, where Justin Trudeau evoked "emergency powers" against peaceful protesters. Some opposed to vaccine mandates are being arrested and their bank accounts are being frozen and taken by the government. Even those who financially supported the Canadian truckers are being doxed and threatened.

When I was younger we celebrated the birthdays of Abraham Lincoln and George Washington separately. Now, we have Presidents' Day to honor all those who have served We The People. As a kid I remember some who said that they would like to become president. I never felt that way and don't understand why someone would want to be president. As an internist I always ask myself why. I see what and I often understand how The editor of the Lim- something happened, but

One might wonder why Trump ran for president. Trump was a successful businessman and had more money than he could spend in a lifetime. He was healthy, loved to play golf and was not a politician. Apparently, he enjoys being on stage, so why not just stay with TV shows like the Apprentice, etc.? He could then remain a New Yorker and still be loved by Democrats who enjoyed schmoozing with Trump. However, in 2015 when he came down the escalator of Trump Tower, the long knives and liars came out to malign and destroy him. So why would "45" run for President? I have thought about this a lot, and the best explanation is Trump's own. He loves America and wants to see it prosper, as opposed to leftists who want to transform America into history's latest example of failed socialism. And it turns out Trump was right about a whole lot year of the Covid crisis of things that Democrats and their media propagandists called lies. According to Special Counsel John Durham, Hillary Clinton and the DNC were spying on the Trump campaign and his presidency. The infamous Steele Dossier which alleged that Trump colluded with the Russians was a lie. Even the dottering Robert Mueller and his legion of lawyers said so. Democrats and Clinton used the infamous and salacious Steele Dossier to lie to the FISA Court and obtain warrants to spy on Americans, including Trump. Covid did come from the Wuhan lab in CHINA. Illegal immigration IS a disaster due to Biden's open border resulting in human and drug trafficking. iPOTUS took us from energy independence under Trump to begging Saudi Arabia to pump more oil amid rising gas prices.

Dictators like Vladimir Putin, Xi Jinping, the Ayatollahs and Litt'l Kim respect strength. It is apparent they have no respect for Ol' Joe and as a result Ukraine and Taiwan are at risk and Iran will soon have enough fissionable uranium for an atomic weapon. Who could respect iPOTUS after his bug out in Afghanistan and arming the Taliban?

We are now in the third which continues to be stoked by Democrat fear mongering. We were once asked to shelter in place for two weeks, but this has morphed into a power struggle. Mr. Biden, keeping masks on our children causes harm and they are at a very low risk of serious infection with Covid. Mr. Biden, you preach that a woman should be in control of her body. Why should you have the authority to demand someone be injected with an experimental vaccine, especially if they have natural immunity? The answer is that Democrats are so blinded by their hatred of President Trump they will oppose anything he is for.

An economist opined recently that only nuclear war is more destructive than inflation to our country and the world. I hope the economist is wrong because inflation is skyrocketing and is going to get much worse due to our poor monetary policy.

A segue is a smooth transition from one topic to another. I marvel that women are seemingly able to change subjects without a segue, while men struggle.

I once read a story where the author asked why is God seemingly so elusive? He painted a visual image of God always disappearing around the corner in the block ahead. Perhaps the reason that Jesus came to live among us is to give God a face instead of always seeing the back of the President of the Universe's head. (How's that for a segue?!)

You know the story. A long time ago, lesus lived, died, and rose again. We tell it and re-tell it, and for good reason. But to what end? How does it really affect our daily life two thousand years later? "The Refugee King" is a fresh, vibrant play with music wherein a couple finds themselves in a story - unfolding at a kitchen table like yours - where they must choose to be like Jesus or like everyone else. The WordPlayers is a 501(c)3 theatre company. "The Refugee King" is sponsored by Warren and Kathy Payne, Leslie A Hull and Accentuate Communication. Upcoming programming includes "Hello, Dolly!" at the Bijou Theatre. For more information, see wordplayers.org.

Courtship, Romance and Intimacy in the Hazen Household

Join Mabry-Hazen House for a titillating new tour series, Rated R for Risqué: Courtship, Romance, and Intimacy in the Hazen Household on Thursday - Saturday, March 10-12, 2022.

Preserving the stories of three generations of women and their experiences in and out of love, Mabry-Hazen House will explore romantic conventions, behaviors, etiquettes, beliefs and taboos at the turn of the 20th century. Learn how each generation thought about romance and how it changed over the generations, so we can share what it tells us about our past and present experiences in finding and maintaining relationships. With much of the original furniture and decor owned by the family on display, visitors will see exactly where romantic interactions and exchanges occurred.

Beyond the original artifacts, the story of Evelyn Hazen, her ill-fated fifteen-year engagement to Ralph Scharringhaus, and the subsequent breach of promise and seduction lawsuit gives an intimate glimpse into the thoughts and actions of a couple falling in and out of love in the 1920s. With these provocative resources, Rated R for Risqué will flirt with a history of romance and love in the Hazen Household.

Tours on Thursday, March 10 and Friday, March 11 occur from 5 p.m.-9 p.m. with tours starting at 5 p.m., 6:30 p.m., and 8 p.m. Tours on Saturday, March 12 will occur from 11 a.m.-3 p.m. with tours starting at 11 a.m., 12:30 p.m., and 2 p.m.

Tickets are $15 per person and required. Each tour time is limited to fifteen visitors per tour. Visitors must be 18 or older and/or 16 or older with a guardian older than 21 years. This program will discuss topics such as sexual trauma and harassment and could be triggering for those sensitive to such issues.

February 21, 2022 www.knoxfocus.com PAGE C3 FROM THE MOUNTAINS BY JADON GIBSON The miraculous survival of Robert McGee

By Jadon Gibson

Robert McGee was a son of immigrants who migrated west, joining a wagon train destined for Leavenworth, Kansas in 1864. Both of his parents died along the way making Robert an orphan but others in the group looked over the young lad who was about fifteen years of age.

After reaching Leavenworth McGee was left to fend for himself. Men were needed to protect travelers and goods along the Santa Fe Trail. Robert applied for a position but was turned down because of his lack of maturity. Some youngsters joined the army but McGee was turned down there as well.

Robert knew he needed a job and his persistence was rewarded when he landed a job as a teamster with a freight company taking supplies to Fort Union in New Mexico. The wagon train was in charge of wagon-master J.L. Riggs which left Fort Leavenworth in July 1864, bound for Fort Union. The wagon train had a US army escort because the Indians were extremely hostile at the time. There were several minor skirmishes along the way but in each instance the army escort was able to ward them off without loss of life or property.

As they arrived at Cow Creek near Great Bend near dusk on July 18 the members of the wagon train had a false sense of security. Fort Larned was drawing near and the army escort was in the lead.

Too much so, however! The unexpected happened! Chief Little Turtle and his band of about 150 Brule Sioux Indians caught members of the wagon train

Those who were not annihilated were tortured. There were only totally off-guard and attacked. He knocked me down with his lance and shot me. The chief then shot me with two arrows.

Robert McGee, scalped by Sioux Chief Little Turtle in 1864.

two survivors. Robert McGee was one of them. Although he was tortured Robert would later say he never lost consciousness.

"I knew I was going to die but I was also aware that if there was a chance at all to survive it would be in playing dead," he said. "I was wounded and dragged before the chief (Little Turtle). The arrows actually pinned me to the ground. Each time I knew my life would go blank and I'd be dead... but somehow that never happened. I never lost consciousness.

"Then came the worst. The chief scalped me. I will say nothing more of that. I vaguely recall the other Sioux Indians beat me and poked me full of more holes with their knives and spears before riding away. I was supposed to be dead but I was alive."

The Indians destroyed everything in the wagons, tearing the linen goods to shreds and flour was strewn throughout the area. They burned everything they couldn't take and drove off with more than 100 mules that were captured.

The commanding officer at Fort Larned learned that day that the Brule Sioux were on the war path. The army scout went out with a handful of soldiers and struck the trail of Chief Little Turtle's group late in the afternoon. They followed it to the scene of the massacre on Cow Creek, arriving too late, two hours after the savages had fled. Dead men were lying about in the short buffalo grass, stained and matted by their flowing blood.

They were shocked at the widespread carnage and surprised upon finding the two boys who had miraculously survived. They were badly maimed ...barely alive.

Robert McGee was one of them. Surprisingly he was still alive even though he had been scalped, shot, stabbed and beaten like all the others. They took him to Fort Larned hoping he would live long enough to be treated by the post surgeon.

"McGee, a boy of about sixteen years, had been pierced by ten arrows, shot, scalped and tomahawked in a most brutal manner," Hulbert H. Clark M.D., acting post surgeon, stated in submitting his report as Proctor of the Committee on Military Affairs. His report #1228 was published by the U.S. Senate. "It was several days before McGee could whisper and be understood. He was handled by raising him in the sheet due to his many wounds, 14 in number, about the chest, arms and abdomen which prevented us from grasping him in the normal manner.

"The skill of physicians and careful nursing led him to partially regain his health though he suffers greatly from contusions of the skull and almost the complete removal of the scalp. He was very weak when he left the hospital and fully 2/3's of his skull had not healed, covered by a delicate coat of granulation which bled upon the slightest friction. A wound to the left elbow and groin was still open."

This may be difficult for some to read. It is difficult for me to write about but don't fret because Robert McGee survived and lived a nearly normal life. There is a great picture of him which was taken in 1890, 26 years after his terrible injuries. He appears robust, intelligent and kempt. He probably lived several more years after that.

Glory to God! Kudos to those doctors and nurses who assisted him while at the edge of Heaven's door. <sup>copyright 2022 Jadon Gibson</sup>

By Christy Martin

"Cudjo's Cave" is a book, a significant part of the Underground Railroad and a piece of history locally. In celebration of Black History Month, it is important to take a look at all three and how they intersect with some little known or talked about history of East Tennessee.

The Knoxville FOCUS

"Cudjo's Cave," the book, is an important story. It was published in 1863 by John Thomas Trowbridge who was prolific writer of the time period and "Cudjo's Cave" was a popular book. There are several stories within the story. The main character is a Quaker teacher who is an abolitionist in Tennessee and is tortured by Confederate radicals who are rampaging around the community looking for anyone loyal to the cause of the Union. The Quaker man's saviors are the proprietors of a cave that offers shelter, food, and medical help to several in the story. These saviors are black men. One a former slave, scared from horrific whippings, another well-educated and formerly the friend of his white master, was forced to escape when his promised freedom was denied. The book is written in the dialect and colloquialisms of the day; and the story, while fiction is based on some truths.

After the publication of the book, several caves that had been used in the Underground Railroad in Tennessee were referred to as Cudjo's Cave. One in particular is located at the Cumberland Gap and is part of the Cumberland Gap National Historic Park. Seasonally it is open for

The Real Cudjo's Cave

"Cudjo's Cave" by J.T. Trowbridge is available on Gutenburg.org and other outlets, including Amazon, as a free download.

tours. It is not however the original Cudjo's Cave. The original Cudjo's Cave upon which Trowbridge based his book is part of our East Tennessee history.

There is no real Cudjo's Cave but the one that gave the author the idea for the book and the place and people upon whom several characters in the book are created is located in Friendsville, Tennessee. The Quakers had settled in Friendsville, Tennessee in 1790. They were opposed to slavery and raised money in their meetings to help escaped slaves and those sympathetic to the cause. Quaker Friend William J. Hackney used the cave near his home to aid in the Underground Railroad system. It was well hidden and was, at the time across from the Friends church.

February 21, 2022

Hackney is said to have assisted more than 2,000 people on their trek north and was offered a reward for his work by Union General Ambrose Burnsides. He turned the reward down but in the process his efforts were noted by author John Townsend Trowbridge who based "Cudjo's Cave" on Hackney's work. Currently the Friendsville cave is on private property and the exact whereabouts of the cave are not made public. There were caves in both the Friendsville and Unitia communities that were reported to be used to assist in the Underground Railroad. One of the caves is said to now be covered by Louisville Lake. (Knox Focus columnist Mike Steely has reported on both the city of Friendsville and the link between the book and the cave in previous editions.)

While we can't visit the local cave there is a good substitute for that. For those who would like to read the book, it is available on Gutenburg.org and other outlets, including Amazon, as a free download. If you enjoy reading the history of this area, the book tells a story in the words of the time, of a nation and community divided, and the goodness of many of the people of East Tennessee.
