Chief Noel attends first PARC meeting

schnellj@knoxfocus.com

The Police Advisory and Review Committee held its second quarter meeting of the year on Thursday evening. PARC is an independent group created to help keep the Knoxville city police force accountable. This was the first meeting for new city police Chief Paul Noel, who served in the New Orleans police department for 25 years before being hired by Mayor Indya Kincannon this year.

PARC Executive Director Tiffany Davidson read her report which reviewed an audit of the discipline process and the audits of investigations from the Internal Affairs Unit of the Knoxville Police Department. She also discussed the findings of audits of KPD policies and procedures such as audio/video recording equipment and codes of conduct. She highlighted recent developments and successes in the KPD/PARC relationship, such as committee members now having access to review case files.

Chief Noel was the meeting's key speaker and he thanked those present, adding, "Knox County has been overwhelmingly welcoming to me and my family."

New Knoxville Police Chief Paul Noel.

Noel shared his vision which he broke down into four priority groups: - Crime reduction as the

#1 priority, specifically violent crimes. - Community and creating partnerships within the community. Noel emphasized it is not an "us vs. them" situation.

-Culture: building upon the culture of accountability, focus groups and internal surveys to flush out issues and learn from it, and creating a culture where people are comfortable coming forward and feeling protected

when doing so.

- Career development for the police department and doing a better job at developing the goals they want to achieve. Noel explained, "Policies > are great, but you have to keep enforcing them. Senior leadership needs to be swift in their response."

One the first changes Noel has made in order to help in this response is by placing internal affairs under Deputy Mark Fortner. He hopes this structural change will allow more senior involvement in the daily operations without sacrificing the quality of the next for citizens to express their concerns. Some of the impassioned speakers asked how the police are protecting the children in the community, bringing up the deaths at Austin-East High School. Gun violence, the violence interruption program, and the recent increase in deaths of the homeless population were also topics brought up in forum. One speaker specifically cited the "lack of proper investigation leading the community to believe there is a potential predator in the community" targeting the homeless.

Police engagement within the community, the use of taxpayer's money, racial profiling and "fixing statistics" were also concerns voiced by speakers. Collectively, the community speakers asked for truth and transparency, which they hope to achieve by allowing civilians to have a presence in receiving public records.

In 1962, the university was in its second year of forced desegregation, having been ordered by the courts to admit Hamilton Holmes and Charlayne Hunter in January 1961. That September the university did not admit any black undergraduates but admitted Mary Frances Early in a one-year's master's program in education. She

Political Director... Really? responsible for working relationships with legisla- having been a Democrat dropped their campaigns

publisher@knoxfocus.com

Daniel Herrera and his merry band of political allies are planning and plotting. Not well, mind you, but nonetheless, they are planning and plotting. Herrera's latest escapade is trying to create a job for his compadre Erik Wiatr. The local ticket has been elected and the state Republicans are moving in to do what they can to try and lift Elaine Davis up for the general election. Things are not going as well with that as the primary was so brutal, that folks aren't coming back together.

In the midst of the chaos, most of it at the hands of Herrera and Wiatr, Herrera is proposing the Knox County Republican Party hire a "political director." Of course, no such post has ever existed, nor was there ever any need for one and there isn't now. Yet Herrera has been circulating a memo to the members of the Executive Committee of the Knox County Republican Party outlining the proposed duties and responsibilities for the purported "political director." "The Political Director will be responsible for identifying opportunities for growth and developing and meeting long term goals," the memo states. "During the election season, the directly with the Chairman and the Executive Committee to develop and implement a county-wide election plan." Even more interesting is the statement: "During the Legislative Session, the Political Director will be responsible for monitoring and implementing a plan to carry out the Knox County legislative priorities." Whose legislative priorities exactly? Evidently, Herrera and company, and most likely Erik Wiatr especially, see the political director as riding herd over our legislators and giving them instructions. Now, nobody in his/ her right mind actually believes for a nano-second the members of the Knox County Legislative Delegation would countenance being ordered about by the likes of Erik Wiatr. That little crowd would quickly run into the buzzsaw that comprises the legislative leadership in Nashville.

The supposed outline of just what, or rather who, should be applying for the political director's job is someone who has "excellent oral and written communication skills and demonstrate a history of hard work and willingness to work long hours, including evenings and weekends." "Previous campaign experience of 5 - 7 years with political campaign organizing, grassroots, or nonprofit advocacy is required and a Bachelor's degree is preferred." As an added thought, "Experience with databases is a plus."

A lengthy list of bullet points enumerates the vast responsibilities allotted to the part-time employee who is to be the Knox County Republican Party's political director. Among those duties are, "Foster tors, City & County elected officials, and their staff." "Monitor and oversee progress during the Legislative Session to ensure passage of Knox County legislative priorities." Another vitally important assignment is stated: "Assist with County convention as duties are assigned by the Chairman and KCEC." The memo says the supposed political director should be "self-motivated and will possess a strong interest in politics, a Republican infrastructure, is comfortable working with political candidates across the spectrum." Wiatr certainly assisted

Herrera admirably the last time. He summoned up a following from the aptly named Roving Patriots PAC and a rovin' they went. Regular readers will recall then-chair of the Knox County GOP, Randy Pace, who just ran dead last in the August primary for the state executive committee, named Christine Cruz as chairman of the county convention's Credentials Committee. An interesting choice, Ms. Cruz. The lady had barely been in Knox County for ten minutes and had never even voted in a GOP primary in our county. Is there anyone who thinks a person who has never even participated in a Republican primary is qualified to chair a committee at the party's convention? Especially the person in charge of vetting those attending? Nobody will ever know how many purported delegates were as qualified as Christine

As to working with political candidates across the spectrum, Wiatr has certainly been around the world politically speaking, and a losing candidate for the Green Party before popping up here as a would-be Republican. Now as to working with Republicans across the spectrum, Erik Wiatr is about the last person to qualify. How would he be able to work with Commissioner Larsen Rhonda Lee in the 7th Jay after having recruited Steve Weiner (then a member of the Executive Committee) to run against him? How could he work with Janet Testerman after having run Elaine Davis' campaign against her? Not very likely. Being familiar with databases doesn't necessarily mean someone is good at using them. The failed city council ticket recruited from Facebook and sponsored by Herrera demonstrates that fact well enough. Yet it did motivate the Democrats, who successfully raised a boatload of money off of Daniel Herrera's empty boasting. It was Wiatr who managed the effort to place a property tax cap on the City ballot, an effort which fizzled rather than sizzled.

According to our sources, Wiatr's numbers in the recent general election were way off target of the actual results.

From the very beginning of his reign as chairman, Daniel Herrera has been more mouth than action. Right from the start, Herrera tried to monetize his position with his stake in the Angle Group, which had two clients beginning with the Republican primary: Christine Cruz, who spent some months trying to run against Commissioner Larsen Jay, and Judson Mason, who was running for the 7th Commission district seat being vacated by Charles Busler. Both before the election. The only other candidate of the Angle Group was local attorney Deno Cole who lost the GOP primary to Bud Armstrong in the Chancellor's race. Wiatr did run the successful campaign of District commission race, which was predicated on a failed notion: that the commission can fix what ails the Hallsdale-Powell Utility District. Nobody is happy about the high rates of the Hallsdale-Powell Utility District and it has a pile of debt while KUB has a huge surplus, at least before going into the cable TV business as everybody else is trying to get out of it. Utility districts are regulated by the state and the fact is, the debt must be paid off until or unless Joe Biden decides to "forgive" that, too. Rhonda Lee can no more fix Hallsdale-Powell than our dog Sophie. The notice sent to the members of the Executive Committee of the Knox County Republican Party, primly states at the bottom of the document, "Interested candidates should submit their resume to the Knox County Republican Party, P. O. Box 431, Knoxville, TN 37901, by September 15, 2022." Yet, according to our sources, Daniel Herrera nominated Erik Wiatr for the job at the most recent Knox County Republican Party Executive Committee meeting. This obviously was well before the deadline on the document in what has been described as an attempt to fill the job long before the thing a fake political direcdeadline.

written on toilet paper. It is entirely for show and there is every reason to believe it is a sham. The political director memo, circulated behind closed doors, was intended and tailored to fit Erik Wiatr. The first pitched battle Ward fought on the county commission was over the Board of Health and its mandates during the pandemic. Congressman Tim Burchett left his vigil beside his injured daughter Isabel's hospital bed to be present, accompanied by his Chief of Staff Michael Grider. Bobby Griffits, the Chief of Staff for Burchett's predecessor in Congress, Jimmy Duncan, was moving through the crowd greeting old friends before Senator Hagerty took center stage. Burchett was clearly weary and the strain of deep worry etched his face, but the congressman quietly thanked the numerous people asking about the well-being of his daughter and wife.

Senator Hagerty deftly moved from topic to topic and took questions from the audience members. Hagerty demonstrated a wide yet thorough understanding of the problems facing our country today and those experienced by working families. Among the questions was one from Kyle Ward, the youngest member of the Knox County Commission, who asked about the senator's legislation on cryptocurrency.

Among those officials attending were Sheriff Tom Spangler, District Attorney General Charme Allen, Commissioner Larsen Jay, Commissioner-Elect Gina Oster, Commissioner John Schoonmaker, Trustee Ed Shouse, state Senators Becky Duncan Massey and Richard Briggs, and state Representatives Jason Zachary and Justin Lafferty.

Before closing his remarks, Bill Hagerty thanked Knox Countians and Tennesseans for giving him the opportunity to serve in the United States Senate. It was pretty clear the people leaving the filled-to-capacity room thought Bill Hagerty was doing pretty well by Tennessee and Tennesseans.

I am a native Knoxvillian and, except when I was in medical school and internal medicine residency, I have lived in Knoxville all my life. I went to Tyson Junior High and graduated from West High before going to college at UTK and then UT's medical school in Memphis.

When I was at West, I remember the James Agee facility next to the baseball field where I spent innumerable hours playing baseball. I had a vague awareness of James Agee, but I had never read any of his books. I'm correcting this now after his autobiographical book title, A Death in the Family, recently popped into my mind.

but some things are so important they need to be repeated. I have previously recommended a YouTube video entitled Political Systems 101: Basic Types of Government Explained. If you have trouble using the new technology, get your kids or grandkids to help you and you can be enlightened along with them and do some vicarious parenting! There is much that is problematic on the Internet, but there is a lot of good.

As I learned of dementdying. We are beyond the ed Joe's student loan proclamation, and the subversion of the rule of law in Nancy Pelosi's husband's drunk driving accident in California, I thought about what keeps us together. The US Constitution is the operating agreement that defines us as a country and a people. Likewise, the Methodist Book of Discipline is supposedly what defines my denomination. Both are being openly defied. Even Nancy Pelosi says iPOTUS does not have the authority to forgive student debt. And Methodist educators, ministers and Bishops don't have the authority to ignore The Book of Discipline, a polity agreement that denomination. But just like Biden, the Methodist leadership now openly defies what binds us together. Consequently, my beloved church is in schism.

Many think that Methodists are in schism because of controversies regarding human sexuality, the same issue that breached the Episcopal, Lutheran and Presbyterian churches. Actually, controversies regarding The Bible and the nature of Jesus Christ are far more profound but have gotten little attention perhaps because nonsexual doctrinal controversies are less titillating.

Recently, I went to the funeral of a dear friend. We sang an old hymn that has continued to resonate with me. One line goes, " § ...0 let me ne'er forget that though the wrong seems oft so strong, God is the ruler yet." This thought sustains me. I understand my origin and my ultimate destiny. Islam holds that everything is "God's will." However, I wrestle with this, my responsibility and purpose in this fallen world. Should I just accept lies, injustice, apostasy and idolatry as God's will? Must I love those who are opposing my understanding of God's will? How can I love the unlovable?

The Greek language rec-erly love and agape which is sacrificial love. English uses modifiers to define love such as I love my wife Becky, I love chocolate and I love the worship service at Sevier Heights Church.

A friend and I have been discussing personal love and impersonal love. You could say that my love of Becky is personal, whereas my love of chocolate or my love of country may be intense, but would be impersonal.

M. Scott Peck wrote the celebrated book The Road Less Traveled. He defines love as any activity which advances your own or another's spiritual development. Jesus said that we should love God with all our heart, soul, strength and mind; and our neighbor as ourselves (Luke 10:27). This ideal is tough, even after Jesus expanded on the concept with the parable of The Good Samaritan.

As Emmanuel, Jesus could extend his multifaceted love to everyone. I can extend my love beyond my skin to my wife, family and friends, but not to the ends of the earth because I am human and limited. Mahatma Gandhi was called the Great Soul and was said to have loved greatly. Jesus was ognizes seven types of the greatest soul and love. Examples are eros or loved to the ends of the erotic love, philia or broth- earth. I am far less capable. Nonetheless, I am challenged to do my best, to do my duty to God and country and those I love (Ferguson's modification of the Boy Scout pledge).

> I once heard that the opposite of love is not hatred but indifference. I'm not sure I accept this. To love someone requires a personal relationship. And because I'm human there are many souls on this planet with whom I have no personal relationship. I may be sympathetic to their journey, but empathy and love may be beyond my

Perhaps the same goes for hatred. There are people with whom I disagree, but no one that I hate. The hatred of Donald Trump by those who have no personal relationship with him is in my opinion an example of the antithesis of love. Such hatred has driven many insane, and our country is reaping the consequences of such irrational hatred.

I will close these ruminations with one of my axioms and a last thought to consider: "Sometimes the best explanation for the otherwise inexplicable is evil."

Ed Shouse is retiring from public service

Mike Steely Senior Writer steelym@knoxfocus.com

He's been in public service for more than 34 years, is a former Knoxville City Councilman and Knox County Commissioner, and a retired banker. He has a social studies degree from UT and is an avid reader. And he has a Knoxville street named after him.

Retiring Knox County Trustee Ed Shouse will be honored with a Retirement Luncheon today at 11:30 a.m. in the small assembly room of the City-County Building. The Knoxville Focus caught up with him to ask a few questions.

You are originally from Birmingham. What brought you to Knoxville and why did you decide to stay in the area?

I was initially attracted to UT (in 1970) because it had such a great football team and had beaten Alabama four years in a row, something no team had ever done to a Bear Bryantcoached football squad. After my freshman year, Knoxville became home. I came to love the mountains and the people.

What led you to elected office and politics?

I always had an interest in politics and thought there might be an opportunity to win a city council seat. I had no idea how hard it would be to win.

Part of the reason we sometimes have that longing to go back is that our lives have grown weary from adulthood. We have responsibilities now. Work isn't a choice for most of us; we toil so that we can pay for roofs over our heads and food in our stomachs. Some stash a little cash in the bank for emergencies. As we grow older, our desire to "go back" involves loved ones. Folks want to be with parents and brothers and sisters, and friends again. It's a natural thing to miss those we loved in our early lives. I find it almost impossible to believe that high school friends and even students whom I taught are gone. For eight years, Busler served on the Metropolitan Planning Commission. He has served on the grand jury, has been a member of the Powell Republican Club, the Halls/Powell Republican Club, and the elections chair for the 73rd Precinct and has had the honor of working for Habitat for Humanity on various houses, as well as the Habitat Park in downtown Knoxville.

The Knoxville Focus caught up with Busler during his final days representing his changing north Knox rural district.

What has surprised you the most about your years of service on the Knox County Commission?

What surprised me the most was the amount of knowledge I had to learn to represent the constituents. I was just getting to the stage of learning how to be a commissioner and now my term is over. There are a lot of committeesboth at a county level and state level-that require special knowledge. If I had studied as hard in school as I have the last eight years, I would have been a straight A student. How much time each week did your service on commission take up, including meetings, correspondence, and visits with citizens?

The amount of time required to do a good job was at least 40 hours a week. I am glad I was retired so I had the time for the community meetings, commission meetings, returning calls, working on road issues, flooding problems, zoning issues, committee meetings, going to high school programs, i.e. football games, basketball games, volleyball games, fundraising, TCCA meetings, TCSA classes. If I had a fulltime job I could not have represented the 7th District or Knox county properly.

I remember well someone telling me when I was trying to make up my mind to run for commissioner that I would have just two meetings a month.

What advice would you leave for your replacement?

If I was asked by the person replacing me for advice, I would say to do the right thing at the right time for the right reason.

What topic do you remember as having the most active citizen involvement during a commission meeting?

The most citizen involvement at a commission meeting was the issue about the health department and the masking issue. The meetings lasted long into the mornings. I was especially proud at one of the meetings when an abrupt adjournment was called and all but one of the commissioners remained seated to continue listening to the citizens representing both

The Fall of Congressman Clifford Davis, IV

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill rayhill865@gmail.com

Clifford Davis had represented Shelby County in the U.S. House of Representatives for twenty-four years when he announced he was running for his fourteenth term in 1964. Davis had been the Democratic nominee in a 1940 special election and had won again in the November general election later in the year. Davis had long been a highly popular local officeholder, which is precisely why E. H. Crump, leader of the Shelby County machine, chose Davis to succeed Walter Chandler in Congress. Chandler had been a very able congressman, but Crump had summoned him home to serve as mayor of Memphis.

Davis had gained some notoriety as one of the congressmen shot on the floor of the House when several Puerto Rican nationalists opened fire on the unsuspecting representatives from the galleries. In twenty-four years, Cliff Davis had only really had two serious challenges to his continued tenure in the House of Representatives. The first had come in the 1950 Democratic primary. The opponents of Crump, emboldened by the showing of Estes Kefauver and Gordon Browning, known to be hostile to the machine, had polled a respectable number of votes in Shelby County. John B. McKinney had run against Davis and won only a third of the vote.

were progressives. Cliff Davis won easily, although there were signs the congressman's support was slowly eroding. Davis won the primary with a plurality, while the combined votes of his opponents constituted a bare majority. The true shock had occurred in the 1962 general election where Congressman Davis was quite nearly upset by Republican Bob James. Davis won by little more than 1,200 votes.

Once any politician has demonstrated electoral weakness, he or she becomes a target for defeat. Bob James was running again in 1964 and Congressman Cliff Davis had drawn two opponents inside the Democratic primary. George Grider was a member of the Shelby County Quarterly Court (the forerunner of the county commission), retired from the U.S. Navy and was a practicing attorney. Frank L. White was a forty-year-old who had rapidly advanced from the Tennessee House of Representatives to the State Senate and was continuing his upwards trajectory. White described himself as a conservative, while George Grider was stance, some of the congressman's supporters worried White would pull votes from Davis rather than split the opposition

The contention of both Frank White and George Grider was that Clifford Davis was neglecting his responsibilities as a congressman while physically incapacitated. "I think I'm too busy to get into mischief that some would say I have," Davis said. One of the dangers faced by incumbents is challengers attempting to lay every ill at their feet. George Grider, speaking to the East Memphis Optimist Club, said Congressman Cliff Davis had failed to "lift a finger to clean up the mess" in the House Public Works Committee. Grider pointed to recent press reports of "political favoritism" in selecting the committee staff. "When you use your seniority to impede the workings of democracy, to take care of your henchmen, to do favors for your political associates in contempt of the national welfare, then eventually the citizens realize what is going on," Grider told the Optimists.

Congressman Davis attended the annual picnic to celebrate the Fourth of July holiday at St. Peter's orphanage, which drew an astonishing estimated 10,000 people. Davis handed out half-dollar coins with the face of the lenge came in the 1962 late John F. Kennedy on not just on election years," Davis told a reporter.

Cliff Davis received an endorsement from Tennessee's junior United States senator, Herbert S. Walters. "Mr. Hub" was one of the most prominent Democrats in Tennessee, a millionaire businessman and prolific fundraiser for Democratic candidates and the party. Walters had been appointed to the United States Senate by Governor Frank Clement to serve out the term of the late Senator Estes Kefauver, who had died in office. Walters, then in his seventies, did not seek to fill out the two years remaining in Kefauver's term, as Clement and Congressman Ross Bass were waging a spirited battle for the Democratic nomination for the Senate released a statement praising the "Dean of the Tennessee delegation" and Davis' "record of achievement." The lengthy statement ended with Walters stressing from his "firsthand knowledge of the requirements of a good congressman," the senator stated his own belief Cliff Davis was "the best qualified candidate to represent Shelby County in the House of Representatives." Nick Carimi, a "lifelong friend" of Cliff Davis and the owner of the Broadway Drug Company, hosted a luncheon where the congressman explained his vote for the recent payraise bill for members of the House. "I predict the day may well come when only wealthy people will be able to run for Congress because of the expense of running for office and living in Washington," Davis said.

By June each of the candidates, including Republican Bob James, had opened campaign headquarters. George Republicans had gathered together to support James along with their candidates for the United States Senate, Dan Kuykendall and Howard Baker. That same day Mrs. Kuykendall gave birth to a baby girl.

With less than one month before voters went to the polls, the Memphis Commercial Appeal endorsed incumbent Clifford Davis for reelection to the House Representatives. newspaper editorial reminded readers of Davis' long tenure in office, as well as the fact he had made many friends in Washington, D.C. and a telephone call from the congressman frequently could accomplish things for the folks back home.

The Commercial Appeal repeated an accolade given Congressman Davis by the late Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, who had praised the Tennessean's handling of the self-financing bill for the Tennessee Valley Authority. Rayburn had stated, "Davis was the only man who could handle it and TVA should be eternally grateful." The newspaper endorsement pointed to the congressman's vitality despite his age, noting "his present pace astounds friend and foe alike." "He is doing the thing he likes the best . . .

selling the brand of Davis service only he knows best. And he thrives on it," the editorial added.

The endorsement concluded with the newspaper saying it had listed numerous reasons for voters to reelect Clifford Davis in the Democratic primary, but also that his experience would help to navigate "the uncharted difficulties" that lay ahead for the country.

congressman had avoided appearhigh mud," buying a basket of peaches and visiting with voters on a handshaking tour of the northern area of Shelby County.

John Means, a reporter for the Memphis Commercial Appeal, noted there was a particular art to the shaking of hands for politicians. Means noted the late President John F. Kennedy and Senator Estes Kefauver had turned handshaking into a "production-line. . ." Not so Cliff Davis. John Means wrote Davis "spends 5 to 10 seconds with each handshake, and often uses both hands, the left resting on top of the right holds" the hand of the voter.

Rain had accompanied the congressman on much of his tour when he insisted his campaign workers make an unscheduled stop at Jones Peach Orchard on Highway 51. Cliff Davis had shed his raincoat and straw hat earlier in the day, but his cigar was "tipped at a jaunty Rooseveltian angle" as he made his way along back roads liberally decorated with his own campaign posters and those of his opponents. While moving through Crenshaw's Store, the congressman ran into Mrs.

moved on and was settled into a comfortable chair at Wortham's Realty and Insurance office, where a small crowd of mostly farmers had gathered. mid-July, Commercial Appeal reiterated its endorsements of the candidacies of Congressman Cliff Davis and Governor Frank Clement, who was contesting the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate with Congressman Ross Bass for the balance of the late Estes Kefauver's term. The Commercial Appeal added to its list of endorsements Senator Albert Gore who was seeking a third term.

As the contest inside the Democratic primary began to wind down, George Grider hammered home his contention that Congressman Cliff Davis had "lost touch" with the people of his district. "One of the chief reasons Memphis and the Mid-South have lagged industrially is that we have a congressman who has lost touch with the economic needs of our community." While Grider campaigned in Shelby County, Davis had flown back to Washington, D.C. where his help was needed to break a filibuster in the House Public Works Committee.

BZA loses Development Plans review powers

Ronnie Collins, president of the Alice Bell Spring Hill Association, joined other opponents in speaking against removing development plans from the Board of Zoning Appeals' purview. The opponents, who appeared before the Knox County Commission with signs and public forum speakers, lost their effort.

Despite the objections of numerous neighborhood groups and citizen speakers, and what appeared to be growing opposition within the commission the Knox County Commissioners voted to remove reviews of subdivision development plans from the Board of Zoning Appeals' purview.

Director Mike Moyers told last week's regular meeting that the commission had the powers to assign subdivision development plan appeals to the BZA, the commission did not do so. An amendment to the Knox County Codes passed in a split 6-4 vote after an attempt by Commissioner John Schoonmaker to delay a vote for 60 days failed.

Schoonmaker said removing the BZA review powers would violate state law and that the amendment had been modified and needed to be heard as a first reading, not a second and final reading. That motion failed 7-3 with Commissioners Schoonmaker, Dasha Lundy and Courtney Durrett voting for the delay.

The ordinance change then went back to the original motion, sponsored by Mayor Glenn Jacobs and Commissioner Randy Smith, to which Commissioner Terry Hill joined the three in voting Chairman Richie Beeler said he had "wrestled with this" and had heard from a lot of people. He said the change might come before the next commissioners who will be seated in September as well as possible legal action.

Smith said that development plans are very technical and that BZA members are not qualified to hear complaints.

The BZA has always heard citizen comments on "use on review" votes by the Knoxville-Knox County Planners as well as comments on development plans. Opponents of the amendment told the meeting that planning commission members are not more Larsen Jay.

qualified to hear technical details than the BZA, which hears challenges to development plans about once

The change would make citizens take their objections to court, which opponents say most citizens can't afford. The argument for passing the ordinance is that courts will speed up the process in a time when Knox County is suffering from a housing shortage.

With one commissioner, Justin Biggs, absent the hopes of the neighborhood groups for keeping the appeals within the BZA fell short. Voting "Yes" were Commissioners Smith, Beeler, Kyle Ward, Charles Busler, Carson Dailey and

Old Tazewell Pike decision passed to the next commission

Senior Writer steelym@knoxfocus.com

Old Tazewell Pike runs from Murphy Road in North Knox County to Luttrell Road and, for the past few months, has been proposed for partial closing before the Knox County Commission. The second and final reading of the proposed closing was back before the commission last week but got booted until September when the new commissioners will join in a decision.

The idea involves a large subdivision being proposed nearby — a development that had passed the planning commission recently in a 5-3 vote. Last week the commission approved the development at 0, 5511 and 5313 Old Tazewell Pike without opposition. Developer Benjamin Mullins successfully had the zoning changed from Low-Density Residential to Planned Residential with five units

Mullins said, during the approval, that the partial closure of Old Tazewell Pike will have no effect on the housing project.

Knox County Engineering Director Jim Snowden said a TDOT traffic survey was completed but did not arrive to him until the morning of the commission meeting. asked for a 45-day delay in voting on the closure, adding that area residents don't like the Ridgeview Road intersection and the issue needs more study.

In other action, the commission voted to ask the planning commission to reconsider an ordinance that prohibits travel trailers and motor homes from parking on property zoned for Agriculture. Commissioner Charles Busler introduced the idea noting that while people are building a home in rural Knox County they are permitted to place construction trailers or mobile homes on the site during construction but not RVs. He suggested a "short period of time" be permitted for owners to live in RVs while a home is being built on the lot. He said that RVs have a safety factor and permit owners to supervise the security of a building lot. Commissioner Larsen Jay

Rebels run away from Admirals with second-half outburst

By Bill Howard

A common cliche in sports is "the game was a tale of two

For West High School's football team Friday night at home against visiting Farragut High School, the two-halves cliche was a perfect summation of West's 40-21 win.

Down 7-6 at half, the Rebels dominated both sides of the ball in the second half, and a 27-7 third-quarter advantage put the game long out of reach.

"We were just shooting ourselves in the foot in the first half," said Rebels' coach Lamar Brown. "Penalties, taking a sack, bad snap. In the second half I thought our offensive line and backs came out and played really well."

"Second half we didn't play very well," said Admirals' coach Eddie Courtney. "Give them credit. They things happen our way."

West took a 3-0 lead late in the first when kicker Tyson Siebe lead on the ensuing drive when, for a 73-yard score. Admirals promptly took a 7-3

Another missed field goal by Siebe - this time as the half expired - gave FHS a 7-6 lead at intermission.

"We just had to execute," Brown said. "The kids came out and executed. We didn't call any different plays; just executed a whole lot better."

That second-half execution by West took one play to unfold.

On the first play from scrimmage from their own 20, senior running back Brayden Latham took the handoff and went over right tackle. It appeared Farragut's defense had him stopped. But suddenly Latham broke free and galloped 80 yards for the touchdown and a 12-6 lead.

Farragut (1-1) answered right back to take a 14-12 lead when, on second and 11 from West's 24, Johnson again connected with Auker for the score.

Central takes rivalry game behind Johnson IV's running, defense

By David Klein

With a physical running game led by Frank Johnson IV and a defense creating six turnovers, the Central Bobcats ensured this year's "Battle of Broadway" would be their game. The Bobcats took a close first half and created separation in the second half to defeat the visiting Fulton Falcons

"That's what we need to be about, all year," Central Head Coach Nick Craney said, regarding the running game. "We need to be able to block anybody in front of us, knock them back, get great movement because we got a special back behind you that can run. We did a great job of that, creating running lanes

Paul Shelton in charge at South-Doyle

By Mark Nagi

When Clark Duncan announced that he was stepping down as South-Doyle's head football coach and athletic director back in January, it was the end of an era. Duncan had been at South-Doyle since 2003 and had been their football coach the previous 13 sea-

To find his replacement, South-Doyle looked west, hiring UC Davis assistant coach Paul Shelton.

He is from East Tennessee, having previousstaffs at Unicoi County and "I learned a lot at UC Davis under (head coach) Dan Hawkins and (offensive coordinator) Tim Plough in how to mentor kids and hold them to a my dream and my goal. You have two kids, and your wife works. It feels good to be around (family) and still get to coach football and impact young men." The Cherokees are a work in progress, with an infusion of inexperienced players on the roster. "We are just super young and every single thing that you don't think you need to teach, is a new teaching moment around every single corner," said Shelton. "Our guys are willing to learn. It's frustrating for everybody in a lot of ways, but we are trying to teach them how to play football the right way, and how to transition on and off the field, but a lot of these guys have never actually played football. So, teaching them what Friday night looks like, what Monday night JV looks like. We have hungry guys that are willing to learn and are great teammates cess. We have a pretty high ceiling so we will continue to grow because of that."

Shelton is trying to implement his style of play South of the River.

"We want to be an aggressive tempo flying around kind of football team." Said Shelton. "We don't look like that right now. We have to learn what that looks like, what it looks like on film. Offensively when a bad play happens you are still a tempo team. When a good play happens, ly worked on coaching you are still a tempo team. And on defense we have to get 11 hats to the football. That's a lot of stuff that these guys don't know about. We are just trying to teach them that. Ultimately, we want to be an aggressive defense and aggreshigh standard, but still love sive offense that's flying them the right way and hold around and playing at a them accountable," said high tempo. Hopefully, as Shelton. "I got to achieve the weeks go on, we will continue to be that way."

"I'm not a big end goal kind of guy," said Shelton. "There are a lot of things that are beyond your control when it comes to state championships and playoffs. We want to go to the playoffs because we want to win every game. But just understanding it is not about the opponent. It is about our standard and teaching our guys to stay neutral, win or lose. Are we playing to our standard? That's the biggest thing, trying to build a good culture, wanting to play highlevel football and have these guys having fun playing high-level football."

By Ken Lay

A fast start propelled the Gibbs High School girls soccer team into the win column Thursday night as the Lady Eagles continued their season long road trip with a 5-1 victory over Anderson County Thursday night.

Gibbs High's Carolina Pittman scored the first of her two goals against the Lady Mavericks in the fourth minute of the match in Halls.

The Lady Eagles (3-1), who are playing their home matches at Central High School's Dan Y. Boring Stadium and Tommy Schumpert Park, extended their advantage to 2-0 when Neomy Casillas in the 24th minute against an injuryplagued Anderson County Gibbs coach Jason French was pleased to see his side start fast.

"We got off to a fast start at Tommy Schumpert Park and this was a huge win for us," French said. "It's always big and good for us to beat Anderson County. They're a great team.

"They're well-coached and we've been going at it with them for years."

Bearden defense 'carried the torch' in Jones' first career win

By Steve Williams

Josh Jones' first victory as a high school head football coach was special.

"It was a total team win!" said Jones, after Bearden turned back Oak Ridge 14-10 Friday night.

"Offense did enough, defense carried the torch. Our student section was electric and fed our team energy all night. Oak Ridge is a really talented team. We were able to make one more play than them." Jones said the o-line and

Poplar and Haydon enjoy reminiscing old times By Steve Williams

Willie Poplar's induction into the Greater Knoxville Sports Hall of Fame Thursday night also was a reunion for him and former Tennessee School for the Deaf coach Troy Haydon.

"It was probably 20 years ago and feels like we hadn't missed a day," said Haydon, recalling the last time the two had seen each other.

They shared "a lot of memories" about their times together at TSD in the mid to late 1960s.

"Willie recalled how much he enjoyed going to school at TSD," said Haydon. "He said all the kids were very friendly and the teachers too, and he really enjoyed his time." Poplar's family was at the Hall of MAC is the Middle School age football league that started three years ago under the direction of Nathan Meeks.

Meeks is now excited about the new YAC league.

"I think with the success that we've had at the middle school level with the MAC over the last three years, some of the youth teams saw the growth, approached us and asked, 'Hey, would you be able to put something together for the youth age groups." In the YAC and MAC leagues, "everything is centered around the communities," said Meeks, "so even now at the youth level, they are going to be playing games at the high school. They will be able to have concessions and play on the same field that the

The Knoxville FOCUS Lewis Thomason announces diversity scholarship, new CFO

As part of its ongoing commitment to diversity, Tennessee law firm Lewis Thomason, P.C., has established the Lewis Thomason Diversity Scholarship at the Belmont University College of Law. This is the third such scholarship the firm has established in recent

"For the past several years, we have actively recruited minority law clerks in each of our offices, enjoyed hosting minority high school summer interns, and developed a minority scholarship at the University of Tennessee College of Law in Knoxville and the University of Memphis Cecil C. Humphreys School of Law thereby developing a pipeline of potential attorneys for our firm," said Lisa Ramsay Cole, managing shareholder of Lewis Thomason. "This scholarship, through the College of Law, will likewise support a mentorship mutually beneficial relationship and develop well-prepared young attorneys."

Lewis Thomason has always considered diversity a priority. For the past 25 years, the firm has been successively managed by two female presidents, including the current president who has served as the president and managing shareholder for the past nine years. The former president served during a time when female leadership was all but unheard of in law firms. In 2021, the firm established InclusivLT, a DEI committee to further enhance the firm's commitment to diversity, equity, and inclusion. Creating an inclusive environment at Lewis Thomason is important to facilitating the longterm retention of diverse attorneys.

program, providing recipients a voerwhelming number of our attorneys have never worked for another firm, and we believe that is because at Lewis Thomason. we treat each other like family."

Tim Downard Named Chief Financial Officer at Lewis Thomason

J. Timothy Downard has assumed the role of Chief Financial Officer for Lewis Thomason, effective August 8.

"We are thrilled to have Tim join us as Chief Financial Officer. His experience, financial acumen, and years spent managing his own client facing financial services firm make him a tremendous asset to Lewis Thomason," said Lisa Ramsay Cole.

Downard will be responsible for the firm's financial strategy, financial planning and analysis, and he will collaborate with Cole and the Board of Directors, including Board Chair, Rodney Fields, to make decisions regarding Lewis Thomason's financial strategy and operations. Downard has an extensive background in finance and was most recently the Controller and Finance Director at Vericom Global Solutions. Downard earned his Bachelor of Science in Commerce and Business Administration at the University of Alabama, an Equivalent Bachelor of Science in Accounting at University of Alabama in Birmingham, and his Master of Business Administration at Samford Uni-

He is a CPA and is Certified in Financial Forensics. Prior to joining Vericom, Tim was CFO at SoZu Solutions, Inc. and owned and managed his own CPA firm, Hayes Downard, LLP.

Safety & Awareness Series – South

The next neighborhood meeting focusing on neighborhood safety and awareness practices will be held on Tuesday, Aug. 30, from 6-8 p.m. in the sanctuary of Woodlawn Christian Church, 4339 Woodlawn Pike. Residents of the 1st City Council District - including Fort Sanders and South Knoxville neighborhoods - are invited to learn about the specific types of crimes happening in their neighborhoods and best practices for community safety, crime prevention, and safety awareness. If you have questions you would like to be answered at the upcoming meeting, please send them to neighborhoods@knoxvilletn.

A meeting for North Knoxville neighborhoods will be held later this year. Meetings focused on East and West have already occurred.
