When the Knox County Commission meets in work session this afternoon, it may discuss approving a tax break for a large housing development along Magnolia Avenue.

The Park City Redevelopment and Urban Renewal Plan, prepared by the city's Community Development Corporation, would develop 2724, 2730, 2736 and 2733 Magnolia Avenue in a large mixed-use project that includes 57 for-sale condominiums and eight units.

Tax Increment Financing (TIF) is for renovations and preservation of existing improvements and the proposal comes from the Knox County Finance Department.

The commission may also consider a land swap with Walker Enterprises LLC: Walker's 2.38acre right-of-way could be exchanged for an unused 2.62-acre county property at Beverly Park. An agreement between the Industrial Development Board and the county may also include a land swap with Axle Logistics for $1.4 million. The project, inside the city, will include a payback included in the 2025 Capital Improvement Plan. The Axle project has been

$77 Million To Not Coach Is Crazy

A few months ago I wrote that I thought paying the Tennessee football coach $9,000,000 a year (over $24,400 a day) was ridiculous, and even in a way

I wrote that Coach Heupel seems like a nice man and he is a very good coach, but deep down inside probably even he knows he is not worth that much for coaching a sport. No one is.

Now, the sports world has gone even crazier.

coach, Jimbo Fisher, $77 million to not coach.

This follows about three years ago Auburn paying a coach $21.7 million to not coach, and then paying the next coach about $15 million when they fired him.

When Former LSU coach Ed Orgeron found out in 2021 that he was going to be paid $17 million to not coach, he said he told the Athletic Director, "When do you want me to leave, and what door do you want me to go out of?"

A very significant part of higher education, several hundred billion, is funded by state and federal taxes. Yet the major universities go to Congress and the state legislatures every year begging for more.

I know these payments come from money paid by very wealthy fanatical Texas A&M will now be football fans. But if Conpaying their recently fired gress and/or the state legislatures don't take "No one could really earn trillion. action, these payments will go even higher.

In my 30 years in Congress, I never voted for any tax increase because the federal government is so wasteful and inefficient. Also, socialist countries all over the world have proved that prices are lower, more jobs are created, and poor people are helped most when more money is kept in the private sector. But there are exceptions to everything, and paying coaches many millions to not coach is going too far. A tax law could be written to get some of the money, even if much of it is

At a Congressional hearing on vaccines a few years ago, when I found out Sen. Joe Manchin's daughter was making almost $20 million a year heading up a big drug company, I said, that much" in one year.

At the very least, state legislatures should stop making taxpayers pay for new buildings and the federal government should stop giving grants to colleges and universities that can get many millions contributed to pay coaches who are no longer coaching.

Thirteen months ago, I wrote another column about a bill that I said "may be one of the worst" that Congress has ever passed. It was called the Camp Lejeune Justice Act, but should have been called the Unfair To Taxpayers Bill or the Lawyers Get Rich Ouick Bill.

It has turned out to be even worse than I thought. I was in Washington a few weeks ago and read that there have now been over 17,000 claims filed under this law totaling $3.3

One Maryland personal injury law firm estimated that 100,000 to 200,000 claims might be filed.

Democrats seem to have no qualms about spending money we do not have. That is why we are $33 trillion in debt.

All the Democrats voted for the bill along with a few, but unfortunately enough Republicans to pass it. I told Congressman Burchett I was disappointed he voted for it, and I hope he is sorry he did so. Every bill that is introduced is given an apple pie and motherhood title. But if Congress passed every bill, the country would collapse.

This bill was supposedly for veterans, but the way it was written - to apply even to family members - most of the money will go to lawyers and even to people who never served one day in the military.

Hopefully, most of these claims will not be paid, but the lowest cost estimate I have seen on this bill is several hundred billion.

As I wrote about this bill last year, any well-organized group could find scientists who "would say that practically everything we eat or drink is toxic and harmful. Similar lawsuits could probably be filed about the water at every military base or even in just about every city."

This Camp Lejeune bill shows once again that it is simply too easy to spend other people's money. And when sports announcers dress up to be on TV while people dress down to go to church, it shows that to many millions, football is more important than God.

Balance the Budget?

In Washington, balancing the budget is a game with the Republicans pretending that they want to cut spending while the Democrats act as if any cut will be devastating. The farce is repeated every year with the result of everincreasing spending and deficits. Neither side is serious about fiscal responsibility. Balancing the budget is impossible in the short run. Given the political realities, the only solution is economic growth. However, burdensome regulations, measures that discourage small businesses and barriers to free trade hinder growth. Nevertheless, it is easier to grow the economy than for our politicians to cut spending or even cut the rate of growth in spending. The traditional decreasing spending or increasing taxes or both. For our politicians cutting spending is virtually impossible leaving increasing taxes as their only choice. Yet increasing taxes will only make things worse. The increase in taxes necessary to balance the budget will slow down economic growth, crash the economy and slow down revenues to the government. The budget is made up of two major components, nondiscretionary spending and discretionary spending. Federal nondiscretionary spending includes mainly social security, Medicare and federal retirement benefits. In the past fiscal year, nondiscretionary spending way of thinking is was $4.1 trillion. Discrethat a budget is tionary spending was $1.7 balanced either trillion. Tax revenues were $4.9 trillion. The interest on the national debt was $724 billion This leaves only $76 billion to spend on everything else.

> Of course, nondiscretionary spending is nondiscretionary because the government says it is. We all know that social security is considered sacrosanct and politicians are afraid to alter it. The same is true of Medicare. But the increase in both must either be corralled or the economy liberated to grow in order to achieve a sane fiscal policy. The economic literature offers evidence that increases in government spending lead to a reduction in private investment and economic growth. This is the classic "crowding out" effect. This is in contrast to where most politicians think that

Yet the evidence is otherthat regulations create burgrowth and that regulatory reform unleashes economic growth.

Reforming the tax code and eliminating regulatory burdens would stimulate the economy. The overly complicated US tax code creates over $1 trillion in costs to the economy. Moreover, the cost of compliance to business has been estimated to be over $2 trillion. The Federal Register which is a measure of an administration's regulatory actions increased by 80,756 in 2022. Much of these regulations are nonessential. It is just Big Brother looking over the shoulders of businesses. Burdensome regulations are especially a drag on small businesses that cannot afford the compliance experts of big businesses and small businesses are the growth engine of the economy. rity with a benefit floor previous year's GDP.

Compliance dens that slow economic does not add to the bottom line. I once had a minority banker tell me that the cost of complying with all the fair lending regulations had so adversely affected his bottom line that he was going to have to sell his bank to a large regional bank. In the past, small bankers have asked for regulatory relief but to no avail. The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau is not the friend of small financial institutions and in many cases, actively tries to put them out of business.

So I offer a few real solutions of my own.

1. Eliminate duplication in government.

2. Eliminate automatic escalators in nondiscretionary items.

3. Raise the full benefit age in social security to 70.

4. Privatize Medicare and Medicaid.

5. Privatize social secu- budget to 20 percent of the latory burdens must be reduced by at least 5 percent per year. 10. Limit federal pay (including perks) to no more than 10 percent over fist fight with the bad guy. As the two of them stare each other down, we watch the bad guy put on a set of brass knuckles so he can inflict maximum pain on the good guy.

This makes sense since he's the bad guy, but his very possession of brass knuckles is against the law in Tennessee.

Tennessee Code Annotated 39-17-1302 states: A person commits an offense who intentionally or knowingly possesses, manufactures, transports, repairs or sells: an explosive or an explosive weapon; a device principally designed, made or adapted weapon; a machine gun; hoax device; knuckles; or any other implement for infliction of serious bodily injury or death that has no common law purpose.

The law goes on to list some exceptions when people can use and keep these items, but generally it is illegal to even own these items. To own brass knuckles is a Class A misdemeanor.

After reading this law, I am really interested to know what in the world qualifies as a hoax device.

Jane George: Another Lockstep Liberal

Jane George, a failed candidate for the Tennessee State Senate four years ago, has announced she's off and running for Congress. George is a Democrat and says at least where fiscal policy is concerned, she's "pretty moderate." That doesn't cover a big swath of territory and leaves open to question what her idea of "moderate" is exactly.

incumbent Tim Burchett as some kind of extremist while trying to position herself, at least visually, somewhere in the middle. George says she intends to try and appeal to moderate Republicans. Really? If Jane George managed to get herself elected to the U.S. House of Representatives, would she vote for a moderate Republican for speaker? No. George would surely vote for Hakeem Jeffries who is about as moderate as Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez. While it is certainly true Republicans in the House even if the infrastructure vehicles, reducing consumhave been flying off in every direction, it is also equally true that the Democrats have stuck together like they were bonded with Gorilla Glue. Moderates of any kind are conspicuously absent from the Democrat caucus in the U.S. House of Representatives. House Democrats have a lot of folks like Jamaal Bowman, the guy who pulled the fire alarm to get out of the House Office Building, and Pramila Jayapal, who couldn't bring herself to say Hamas terrorists raping women and girls was vile and despicable. Democrats have gotten themselves into a bit of a bind since the rioting of the summer of 2020 and the season of the "mostly peaceful" riots that featured killings, burning and a whole lotta looting. There is a big element of the Democrat party who truly believe any means is justified. Some of those same folks are parading around streets George will try to paint carrying signs saying the horrors inflicted upon Israeli citizens are justified.

> There is no politician in Tennessee's Second Congressional District who better understands kitchen table issues than Tim Burchett, a fact Jane George will learn sometime next year. While she rattles on about climate change and says little or nothing about the travesty inflicted upon the Israeli people, don't expect Jane George to talk about the cost of gas, which really matters to working people. How many working people can afford a Prius was in place? Families are paying more in taxes and more for the cost of food and housing because of the policies of not Republicans, but rather Democrats. Families are spending about $800 more per month because of the inflation spawned by Joe Biden's policy. That's just what we need in Congress right now, another rubber stamp for Joe Biden's failed agenda and Bidenomics. There are NO moderate Republicans who support Biden and his agenda. Those are called Democrats.

Mandate for EVs Would Stifle Competition

Democrats are waging a war on fossil fuels and have already made our country energy dependent on others when we had been independent four short years ago. But Democrats routinely engage in "gaslighting." In fact, it is a standard prop in their usual bag of tricks. Republicans in Congress are currently working to stop what amounts to an Electric Vehicle mandate. Democrats ignore the cost differential (they don't care) between gas-powered vehicles and EVs, nor do they care whether the necessary infrastructure is in place. John Bozzella, the CEO of the Alliance for Automotive

Innovation, recently stated, "Auto Innovators does not believe [the new standards proposed by congressional Democrats] can be met without substantially increasing the cost of er choice, and disadvantaging major portions of the United States population."

In short, make a standard so stringent it becomes a de facto mandate. The Democrats also plan to raise the cost of gas-powered cars to make the price of EVs com-

Who benefits the most from EV mandates currently? CHINA, that's who. Biden says he will veto a bill that would kill the mandate. Of course, he would. How much money did his family get from the Chinese?

Antisemitic Hypocrites

"Many of the people who have expressed [antisemitic] statement in America aren't neo-Nazis, or cardcarrying Klan members or Islamic extremists. They are in many cases people that most liberal Jewish Americans felt previously were their ideological fellow travelers. Not long ago, many of us marched together for Black and brown lives." So said Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer, finally, about the rampant antisemitism in our country today, coming from the American Left.

The hypocrisy of the Left has been readily apparent to most everybody who isn't a faithful viewer of Rachel Maddow and MSNBC. The very same people who celebrate "diversity" and preach "inclusion" are largely those who sound like state officials from Hitler's Germany.

Much of that antisemitism is centered on college in this country and several university presidents have been called before the House of Representatives. These doyens of higher education did nothing to make any objective observer conclude they were smart, much less prepared to discuss the topic of tolerating open antisemitism. The handful of university presidents gathered before Congresswoman Virginia Foxx's Education & Workforce Committee. They still seem to be trying to explain their way out of what they said at the time of the committee hearings. In her opening statement, and university campuses

Foxx said, "However, after the events of the past two months, it is clear that rabid antisemitism and the university are two ideas that cannot be cleaved from one another. We must be clear on the ideological dimension of this problem. For years, universities have stoked the flames of an ideology which goes by many names - - - anti-racism, anticolonialism, critical race theory, DEI, intersectionality, the list goes on." And so it does.

Foxx pinpointed the problem, telling the university presidents the "value system . . . centers the identity on immutable racial and sexual characteristics" and "present a delusion that the color of one's skin and expression of one's chromosomes sort society into classes of oppressed and oppressors."

Virginia Foxx neatly sorted through what American colleges and universities have see the irony in that."

been filling the heads of students with for decades now. Foxx told the president of Harvard her university was "ground zero for antisemitism" following the brutal and vicious attack on Israeli citizens on October 7.

The presidents of Harvard, UPenn and MIT did little in their appearances to reassure anyone. Suddenly, these folks were talking about free speech, which has been denied conservatives on campuses for Congresswoman Elise Stefanik pointed out that the answers by the presidents involving the slaughter of innocent civilians left a lot to be desired just from the standpoint of being a decent human being. Stefanik said the answers provided to the House Education Committee were nothing less than "moral depravity." Stefanik denounced the "pathetic" attempts by Liz Magill, president of the University of Pennsylvania, who waited 24 hours to try and clarify her failure to truly denounce the bestial attacks, finally saying it was "evil."

Or as Senator John Kennedy of Louisiana said recently, "Because they have been taught this, we now know that many of our young people believe in diversity, equity, inclusion and the right to kill Jews. They don't see the inconsistency in that, they don't

Merit board asks commission to permit political activity

By Mike Steely Senior Writer steelym@knoxfocus.com

The Knox County Sheriff's Office Employees' Merit System Board of Directors voted recently to ask the Knox County Commission to permit merit members to be publically politically active in all local campaigns except the sheriff's race.

Meeting in the merit system office in the Old Knox County Courthouse last month, the 7-member board voted 4-3 on the idea.

Two proponents of the motion were John Valliant Jr. and John Marshall, a member of the former merit council. Marshall said that while he agrees with many of the updates the county commissioners made to the board's rules and regulations, he thinks the restrictions on board member political activity went too far.

Commissioner Larsen Jay, who spearheaded the reform and reorganization of the board, spoke to the meeting asking how a politically active merit board would benefit KCSO officers. He stressed that the county commission has the power to change the merit board rules.

Valliant disagreed, saying the commission does not have that authority. He cited free speech and Constitutional Rights. "We're not employees," he said.

Marshall said the very nature of the merit board is political. He noted that the commission revised its rules and now permits KCSO employees to seek political office while employed. Merit board member Lindsey Willis said the perception of the officers appearing before the board is important and asked that the proposal meet "somewhere in the middle."

Marshall replied he has spoken to officers from different divisions and there is "no pushback" on what the merit board wants to do.

Merit board member Clarence Vaughn urged the board to stay apolitical so KCSO employees would have confidence in them and also urged some middle ground in the proposal.

The reworking of the group, changing it from a 3-member council to a 7-member board and updating its rules and regulations, was the result of drama caused by previous merit council members being too political.

While board members may not publicly support a candidate for sheriff, they are permitted to attend political meetings and vote.

The split vote by the seven board members now goes to the county commission for a decision and is on the agenda for today's Work Session. The Knox County Commission will also consider amending the merit board rules to "allow a Right of Grievance for suspensions of any time length that result in a loss of pay" for KCSO employees.

Junior Commission applicants sought functioning democracy.

Hi there! I am WAMBLE, a two-year-old mixed bread who might be short in stature but is super sweet and loves to play. I could play endlessly! I can be a bit rough and tumble with my dog buddies and would like to meet any resident dogs before going home. I love going on walks and have excellent leash manners. I would prefer a home without small dogs or small children. Come meet me and other adoptable animals at Young- Williams Animal Village, 6400 Kingston Pike.

A Changed Life

find your gift.

The purpose of life is to give it away.

Pablo Picasso

I don't get out as much as I used to. All my life I was working or hurrying to get somewhere. And then I retired and discovered I was already there.

I love country music and one of my favorite artists is Alan Jackson. He has a song called "Chasin' That Neon Rainbow" and one of the memorable lyrics goes: "... just trying to be somebody, just wanna be heard and seen..." I can appreciate that pursuit of career, excellence and even notoriety. However, in a more recent song, "The Older I Get," Jackson sings of love, friends and getting older. That's where I am today. Tragically, Jackson is giving up his music career

due to a genetic peripheral

The meaning of life is to neuropathy that has made performing impossible.

Most careers run their course. Mine did. I was blessed with a rewarding and successful career in medicine. But it was time to move on. I remain a committed Christian, a husband, a father and a grandfather. And now I have been repurposed as a writer. This will be the 839th column of "The Doctor is in," and I am

"give it away." Recently, I was "Home Alone" because Becky was helping an ailing friend. Since I'm no longer rushing to the hospital or my office, I'm at home more, but I have managed to stay out of Becky's hair. We have different gifts and responsibilities. Becky is more practical and makes our house a home. I'm more contemplative, but I also manage the garden, orchard and vineyard as for instance, fruitcake, etc.

well as our yard, though we have no grass. I mowed grass all my life, so grass is banned from our home in the woods. Thankfully, in my new careers as a retiree and a writer, I have time for study, writing, and still get my chores done.

My education continues but in different directions. I'm not a chef like Mrs. Becky; I might lay claim to being a sous-chef. I can creditably peel potatoes and do other prep work for The Chef. And then, like the little girl from the old Shake & Bake commercial, I can proudly say, "I ha-lp'd." I also do the grilling and can cook simple things like a pot of beans with ham, carrots and celery. As a result. when Becky got home she was greeted with an aromafilled house, a crackling fire and a glass of wine.

Learning is a lifelong blessed that I am able to endeavor and my household education continues in retirement. I've learned to do laundry, clean toilets and refresh vegetables. I despise wilted lettuce and limp celery. But we Fergusons are a frugal bunch, so I've learned to put limp veggies in a pitcher of water, and voila! Freshened veggies. It works just like watering flowers. And one more tip, husbands: putting a cut piece of fruit in a container with, will moisten the cake. I was never taught such things in medical school.

The regular college football season is over so I've started watching pro football. It's a different game than college, where you never know whether your team will "show up." I've been a Vol fan since I went to UT Knoxville and remember going to football games in 1969 as an undergraduate wearing a suit and tie! Today's collegiate fan garb is often...eye-catching, but pales in comparison to the regalia of professional football fans. I don't have a favorite pro team since Peyton Manning retired. I do like Peyton's commercials, as well as Patrick Mahomes' of the Kansas City Chiefs. And the relationship of Taylor Swift and Kansas City tight end Travis Kelce has garnered extra attention for the Chiefs.

The colors of the Kansas City team are red and black, and fans often wear headdresses and do the tomahawk chop just like Atlanta Braves baseball fans.

I've learned that the majority of the mainstream media, and especially sports media, are liberal activists. This was recently demonstrated when a sports "journalist" wrote a hit piece on a little boy at a Chiefs' game who was said

Actually, the boy's face was painted red on one half and black on the other. I won't mention the scurrilous writer's name (though it sounds like Karen), or the website that published his screed, along with a picture showing only the black side of the kid's face to justify their racist story.

And not only did they malign the kid, we found out he's Native American! Folk's, this is "cultural Marxism" on display and it's everywhere. We better wake up, recognize and say, "No!" to these anti-American leftists who promote class warfare in race, sexual matters, immigration, religion, abortion, the economy and I could go on. As Jesus said, "You will know them for the fruit they produce." Their fruit is hatred and divisive class warfare.

As the Marxist culture war in America continues, have you noticed the Democrat left's political "pivot?" Since they can't run on Bidenomics, the border disaster, energy policy, national security, crime, gender dysphoria, men in women's sports or the drug crisis, they have accelerated their denigration of President Trump to coincide with their "lawfare" (political warfare to be in blackface and wear- using the courts). Actually, ing an Indian headdress. I much preferred Maganomics, a border wall, lower gas prices and so-called "mean" tweets.

Recently, Democrat politico James Carville, aka Skeletor, was on Bill Maher's show and continued the lie about President Trump's comments at Charlottesville. Thankfully David Rubin took Carville to the woodshed. But expect more lies about "dictators" and January 6 where President Trump actually told his followers to "march peacefully and patriotically" in protest of the corruption in the 2020 election. The guardrails of decency don't exist with leftists and cultural Marxists like antisemite Squad member Rep. Jayapal. Even Senator John Fetterman understands the crooks around him (Sen. Bob Menendez), and courageously spoke out on behalf of Hamas hostages. His mind is clearer than Biden's, AOC's Squad, Ivy League presidents or the feckless UN who can't speak against Hamas' sexual atrocities.

If the cultural Marxists have convinced you that President Trump must be locked up to save democracy, then you are indeed delusional, the fruit of hatred and are lost.

How did you get involved with Wreaths Across America's Knoxville campaign?

My mom told me about Wreaths Across America at Knoxville National Cemetery back in 2013. I looked into it and thought it would be a great way to give back to those who have given so much to me and my family. quickly came to mind, but so many areas. The rest of only a few seemed most important for now. I'll call the miracle the four Ps.

The first P is "polariza-

It's always been a problem, but since the 2016 election, the separation into different groups has become a frightening thing. Friends in the same room no longer text each other; they talk instead. Student grades might even improve if they have nothing to draw their attention away from the teacher.

The third P would be "politics." I am as bad as anyone about being sucked into the cable networks to hear the latest depressing news about faces of users. Life outside the things our so-called

Few, if any, bills are passed because all the time is taken in hearing both sides squabble over who is right. The miracle we need is to have only qualified people running for office. I don't necessarily mean lawyers or lifetime officeholders who've never held any other kind of job. I think that we could have this miracle by demanding that any person running for a federal office must be able to pass a rigid test on the Constitution. State candidates would have to pass a test on the state and federal constitutions. The things in this life that Such a demand assures truly matter would take the voters that candidates have some knowledge about the government for which they are making living in a new way. The decisions.

"Hurry" is the word that echoes in our minds and drives us to the point of exhaustion. Raymond E. Willis of Indiana

Pages from the Past

rayhill865@gmail.com

Raymond Eugene Willis was literally born into the printing business. His father, Frank, had been a veteran of the Civil War and owned the Waterloo Press. The son of "a country editor" and one of six brothers and eight children, Raymond E. Willis spent his entire adult life as a country editor. By eleven years of age, Raymond Willis was setting type in his father's press shop. While attending Wabash College, Ray Willis paid for his expenses by working in the college print shop. Willis prided himself on being able to personally operate every piece of equipment in his printing plant. Quite a few small-town newspaper publishers and editors made it to Congress and Raymond E. Willis was one of them. Perhaps one reason smalltown editors and publishers so often found their way to the halls of Congress was because they were at the heart of the communities in which they lived. Those same small-town publishers and editors were deeply woven into the fabric of the life of the community itself.

Right after graduating from college, Willis gained an interest in the Angola Magnet. That newspaper was later merged with the Steuben Republican and the Steuben Printing Company of Angola, which was owned by Raymond Willis. The Steuben Printing Company printed the Angola Herald and the Steuben Republican; both were weekly newspabeen active in Indiana's Republican Party. The first political post that Willis held was that of secretary to the Steuben County Republican Central Committee. That led to Raymond E. Willis being appointed postmaster of Angola from 1910-1911 under President William Howard Taft. During the First World War, Willis served as chairman of the Steuben County Defense in 1917. Like most small-town publishers, Raymond Willis was a joiner and was a longtime member of Rotary, eventually serving as the Indiana district governor. Willis was once president of the Indiana Republican was a 32nd degree Mason. Somewhat portly and jowly, Raymond E. Willis exemplified an individual at the heart of small-town Indiana. Belonging to a host of fraternal and professional organizations made Raymond Willis an appealing choice to seek public office. Willis also proved to be an able speaker and drew statewide notice for his oratorial efforts when he closed out a Masonic Convocation. "The world today is moving in a befogged social, moral and economic atmosphere," Willis told his fellow Masons. "The bewilderment has affected music,

Editorial Association and art, literature, finance, diplomatic relations and orderly concepts of government throughout the world." Indiana had been predominately Republican, but also had a strong Democratic Party and oftentimes became a battleground between the two political parties. Like much of the country, with the advent of the Great Depression, Indiana swung to the Democrats. Franklin D. Roosevelt had carried the Hoosier State in 1932 and swept in Paul V. McNutt as governor while Frederick Van Nuys beat James E. Watson, the incumbent and the majority leader of the United States Senate. McNutt, a handsome, silver-haired man with a tan, looked like the prototypical Hollywood ideal of a governor. Paul McNutt immediately set out to build a formidable political organization, which ruled Indiana for better than a decade. McNutt funded his machine by imposing a 2% assessment on all state jobs, which was used to fund political campaigns every other year. Indiana's other GOP United States senator, Arthur Robinson, was defeated in 1934 by

A diminutive and bespectacled attorney, Van Nuys had profoundly upset the McNutt machine and the Townsend administration by his strong opposition to FDR's plan to pack the U.S. Supreme Court in 1937. Governor Townsend practically read Van Nuys out of the party and at the time, nominations in Indiana were made by delegates to conventions rather than open primaries. Few doubted the state machine could easily deny Senator Van Nuys the Democratic nomination. The state organization underestimated the little senator who proved he too knew a little something about power politics. Senator Van Nuys opened his bid for renomination and reelection early and set out to identify 100,000 Hoosiers who backed him. Senator Van Nuys defiantly declared if his party denied him its nomination, he would run in the general election as an Independent. Former Governor Paul McNutt instantly knew if that were to happen, a Republican would surely win the general election. It made the GOP nomination for the

the more valuable and Senator James E. Watson, had 444 votes to 442 for favorite.

Indiana Democrats quickly fell into line behind Senator Van Nuys while Republicans fought over their own nomination for the U.S. Senate. On March 3, 1938, Raymond E. Willis released a statement officially declaring his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the United States Senate. "This deci-Sherman Minton and the sion was reached after careful consideration of the indorsement of many Republican editors and party workers from every section of the state," Willis said in his announcement.

> That same day, former rial nomination. "All my life I have been interested in sound government," Watson's announcement read. "My long experience in government should qualify me for further service in the solution of our present crucial problems." Watson said he was motivated by "my desire to assist my party" to declare his candidacy. Jim Watson had first been elected to Congress in 1894 and was 73 years old when he made his candidacy official. Watson was more than a decade older than the 62-year-old Willis. The origin of Raymond Willis's senatorial campaign began with a collection of northern Indiana editors and publishers, who urged him to run. The only other elective office Raymond Willis had ever sought was a seat in the Indiana state legislature. Willis won that election and retired after a single term. Indiana Republicans gathered in convention in Indianapolis at the Fair Grounds Coliseum in late June of 1938 to select their nominee for the U.S. Senate. Willis led on the first and second ballots, but never acquired a majority against three other candidates, including former Senator Watson, until the third. The first ballot

who began the race as the Jim Watson. It was on the third ballot that Raymond E. Willis began picking up steam and building to winning a majority of the assembled delegates. Willis sailed past the 881 votes necessary to win the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate. The victorious Willis mounted the platform as the delegates applauded him. "This has been one of the cleanest convention campaigns ever conducted," Willis told the delegates. "I stand here in humility as the leader of a great party and I am confident we shall have victory in November."

At the time of his nomitorials in his newspaper. Willis' candidacy received a boost with a pictorial in Life magazine, one of the most widely read magazines in the country at the time. Willis was a critic of Secretary of State Cordell Hull's reciprocal trade agreements and delighted in holding up a pair of what he contended were a pair of shoddily made shoes, which were imported from overseas.

The contest between Senator Van Nuys and Raymond E. Willis was as close as could be; the incumbent only eked out a win by just over 5,000 votes out of almost 1.6 million ballots cast between the two major party candidates. Willis was in a commanding position two years later when Indiana's other seat in the United States Senate came before the voters. Raymond Willis entered the GOP state convention as a heavy favorite for the senatorial nomination. Once again, Indiana Republicans gathered at the Fair Grounds Coliseum in Indianapolis to choose their senatorial nominee. The Indianapolis Star described Willis as "a typical country editor, quiet, unassuming serious, with a wide knowledge of events"

as well as a "world of information about government and its functions."

Once again, Raymond E. Willis faced a Democrat in the general election. Sherman "Shay" Minton was a formidable opponent, but unlike his senior colleague Frederick Van Nuys, Minton was a stalwart of FDR's New Deal. Minton had stubbornly supported Roosevelt's effort to pack the Supreme Court. Van Nuys' opposition to the court-packing proposal had won him admirers amongst some Republicans and Independents. Indeed, when it appeared the Democratic machine in Indiana would deny Van Nuys' renomination, some Republicans urged the senator to run as a Republican. The saving grace of Willkie's campaign, at least for Willis, was the fact Willkie, although a resident of New York, was a nativeborn Hoosier. Home state pride helped to propel Wendell Willkie's presidential bid in Indiana.

That boost was enough to help Raymond E. Willis beat Shay Minton in the general election. Minton would later be named to the U.S. Supreme Court by his one-time Senate colleague Harry Truman.

The 64-year-old Willis and his wheelchair-bound wife headed for Washington, D.C. The senator faced a formidable opponent in William Ezra Jenner, a young attorney and veteran, who had been elected to serve a few months of the late Van Nuys' term in a 1944 special election. The 70-yearold senator sent a letter announcing he would wage a "vigorous" campaign for the GOP nomination at the coming GOP convention. The senator already one announced opponent, Congressman Charles LaFollette, when he made his declaration of candidacy in February of 1946. At the end of March, Bill Jenner made his own candidacy official. All three candidates for the Republican senatorial nomination opened headquarters at the Claypool Hotel in Indianapolis. The objections to Senator Willis by some Indiana Republicans were his age, as he was approaching 71, and his inherent conservatism. LaFollette was considered to be a very liberal Republican, while Jenner was thought to be somewhere in the middle. The chief weakness of Senator Willis was his lack of support from the powerful GOP state organization, which was headed by Governor Ralph Gates. Jenner had been a former chairman of the Indiana Republican Party and was a favorite of many active Republicans. Young, handsome and aggressive, Bill Jenner provided a stark contrast to the aging country editor, who likely seemed outdated to many delegates to the GOP convention. Seeing the handwriting on the wall, Senator Raymond Willis withdrew his candidacy for renomination just before the balloting began. Jenner's strength at the convention was shown by his winning 1,994 votes to a paltry 105 for Congressman LaFollette. Thirty dele-

Jenner hurried to Senator Willis' room in the Claypool Hotel where the two were photographed shaking hands. The defeat sent Willis back to his newspaper.

On the night of March 21, 1956, Raymond Willis went for a walk after having had his dinner in downtown Angola around 6:30 p.m. Willis was walking when he suddenly felt ill and collapsed at the Hotel Hendry. Evidently, Willis insisted on being taken home, although someone had the good sense to summon a doctor who promptly sent the former senator to the hospital. At 8:30 p.m. that same night, Raymond E. Willis suffered another heart attack, which proved © 2023 Ray Hill

Smith rescues A-E in MAC JV finals

Maurice Smith came to the rescue in the fourth quarter to lead Austin-East's MAC Junior Varsity team to a 21-18 win over Karns in the championship game that was played at Farragut High.

Smith was warming up for the varsity game when JV coach Kris Kimbrough had him come back with the Roadrunners trailing by 11 points (18-7). After playing the first two quarters with the JV team, Smith was going to play four quarters in the varsity game under the MAC's "quarter rule" that allowed a 7th grader to play a total of six quarters.

Smith, a talented and physical quarterback and running back, threw a 45-yard touchdown pass to Marcos McCord that cut Karns' lead to 18-13 and then scored on a

When you're coaching 4-year olds through 6-year olds in flag football, you need plenty of assistance.

It's no wonder Coach Anthony McAlister said: "First I want to thank my coaches Cory Anderson, Brandon Winton, and James Ward. They put a lot of time in to help make this season a success."

The Roadrunners went 8-0 during the regular season and 3-0 in the playoffs for an overall 11-0 record en route to the Youth Athletic Conference 6U Flag Football championship.

"We played one of the other Roadrunner teams and won 26-20 after a touchdown run by Kam Anderson as time expired!" said McAlister, who added that Tre Ward also helped lead the way in the finals.

"Keeping them focused and engaged with their attention spans was a challenge as well as finding ways to keep it fun while teaching them the game," added McAlister, who was a TSSAA Mr. Football (Class 3A) honoree in 2005, following his playing days as a linebacker at Austin-East

McAlister said he was

'7U RR #ElmStreetBoyz' take title

The 7U champion tackle team in YAC this season was a scary opponent and Coach Charlie McCaleb referred to his squad as the "7U RR #ElmStreetBoyz" after the movies "Friday the 13th" and "A Nightmare on Elm Street."

McCaleb's Roadrunners went 10-0 and defeated the Fulton Falcons 18-6 in the championship game. Tomekian Pennington Jr. led the way and had two of their three touchdowns.

McCaleb said his team had a target on its back and had to "grind all year to be 10-0. Our kids put in to be 10-0. We pushed our guys all year and they responded - it's what I'm most proud of!"

When asked what was the most "challenging part" about coaching the 7U age group, Charlie replied, laughing out loud: "To keep them focused during

A question for the ages

If you're a college football fan enamored with collecting all kinds of memorabilia, you never know when you'll find something special about your favorite team that catches your attention almost immediately.

Collectors are unique individuals who instinctively know when they find something that's worth adding to their "stuff."

Price is no object. Thrift stores and estate sales are ready sources of memorabilia. Dr. Andy Kozar, the early 1950s Vol fullback, spent a considerable amount of time making the rounds in search of books, jerseys, and other souvenirs many other fans might dismiss out of hand. He had a special collection unrivaled in this area.

Closer to home, there is a photo on my office wall of John Majors in either Life or Look magazine from the 1956 Georgia Tech game. The full-page story was titled "Unbeaten Giants." There's also a Dyer Gram from that game signed by John Majors and Buddy Cruze, two of the game's heroes.

One other significant piece of memorabilia is a June 2010 tribute I wrote for the Knoxville News Sentinel after Haywood Harris died. The title was "Memories of Vols legend, good man."

There's other similar "stuff" there, but you get the idea.

I also remember once talking with Jim Keller of Huntsville, Ala., who was a University of Alabama grad, Class of 1979, and Crimson Tide football zealot (and that's putting it mildly). What he found at a Goodwill store in Santa Rosa, Fla., was really too good to pass up. While vacationing in nearby Panama City, he and his wife, Beth, were taking a spin across the countryside when the store

The store really didn't look like anything special, but a quick glance at one wall, behind a rack of clothes sitting on a little table, revealed an autographed football. It was complete with orange and white panels and appeared to be a keeper.

He recalled being ready to buy it immediately, but chose to take a closer look. After all, it's not likely that a significant piece of University of Tennessee football memorabilia would find a home in a thrift store in north Florida.

Looking carefully, Keller real," he did say. "Look at the sigfound the names "Condredge Holloway," "Ray Trail," and "Bill Battle" emblazoned on the ball, affixed with a ballpoint pen.

The football, autographed by Tennessee players and coaches before or during the 1972 season, had weathered the intervening years and probably any number of owners and locations where it might have been stored and/or displayed.

That piqued his curiosity.

The total tab was $3.99 (plus tax), so it was really too good a deal to pass up. For a brief moment, he had wondered if the whole deal was legitimate. He convinced himself it was, in fact, the real thing.

natures. It would have taken a lot of trouble to fake it. I would've gone crazy had it been an Alabama ball." Keller wondered how and why the ball had ended up in a thrift store. That is a question for the The Vols were coming off a series of winning seasons starting in 1965, with big wins, national rankings, bowl games, and two SEC titles over that time frame.

They had defeated Penn State for the second time in as many years in the stadium's first night game. Vol defenders allowed only 100 points over the 12-game schedule, including back-to-back shutouts at Georgia (14-0) and "There was no doubt it was at home against Ole Miss (17-0).

The season concluded with a 24-17 victory over LSU in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl, played at Houston's Astrodome. The crowd was nearly split equally in its loyalties and was involved in the game from start to finish.

Holloway, then a sophomore, had dazzled Vol partisans from season's start to finish. The team finished 10-2 and No. 8 nationally. Two close losses to Auburn (10-6) and Alabama (17-10) kept the season from being even more magical than it was.

Holloway and Eddie Brown were two of the main names among the nearly 40 players whose names were easily identifiable, while Battle and assistants Gary Wyant, Bob Davis, Ray Trail, Jim Wright, Lide Huggins, Tim Priest, Wayne Stiles, and Clifton Stewart were among the coaches. Keller said he enjoyed rummaging through "stuff" at estate and antique sales. He was "fascinated" with his find, recalling that his college roommate had been from Clarksville.

"I had always respected Tennessee," he said. "They were always our biggest rival, sometimes even more than Auburn."

On Keller's trip, the highlight was an orange and white Tennessee autographed football found at a thrift store in the heart of north Florida. The pigskin caught Jim's attention, allowing him to make an important discovery. The experience of being a fan and a collector is definitely something special. Jim Keller can attest to how special it can be.

Lady Admirals notch big win at Fulton

By Ken Lay

Defense and rebounds were the key ingredients in a recipe that spelled victory for the Farragut High School girls basketball team Tuesday night.

It was a good thing for the Lady Admirals that their defense traveled and that they were able to crash the boards, and particularly crash the offensive glass.

"We did a good job on the offensive boards, but we certainly gave ourselves plenty of chances to get offensive rebounds," Farragut coach Jason Mayfield said after the Lady Admirals routed Fulton 52-25 Tuesday at Jody Wright Arena. "We've got to make shots. I looked at it and we shot 22 percent on our two-pointers.

"We shot 30 percent on our three-pointers and that's a little better, and I was surprised that it was actually that good. A lot of that had to do with Fulton because they're athletic and they're long, but we've got to make shots. We had 17 offensive rebounds and our rebounding was pretty well spread out."

The Lady Admirals (5-3) endured their share of offensive struggles out of the gate but they still had enough firepower to hold a slim 9-6 edge at the end of the first quarter. They tripled their offensive production in the second stanza as they outscored the Lady Falcons 18-9 in the second frame.

Defensively, Farragut was particularly stingy in the second half as the Lady Admirals surrendered just 10 points after the break, and gave up just three points over the final eight minutes of the contest.

"We did a good job defensively," Mayfield said.

Despite their shooting woes, the Lady Admirals had three players post double figures in the scoring column. Jaci Neubert led the way with 14 points, while Annie Priest and Lilly Mullins added 10 points each.

K.J. McNealy had 12 rebounds for Farragut.

The College Football Playoff Committee Failed

Last week the College Football Playoff Committee picked the four teams that will take part in the playoff. 13-0 Big Ten champion Michigan and 13-0 Pac 12 champion Washington were no brainers. 12-1 Texas won the Big 12 and got in as well. It came down to a choice

And there's the biggest problem with this entire thing. You can have any opinion you want on the topic, but the truth is that the committee chose to favor what they think might happen in some hypothetical, make-believe matchup over what they have seen with their own eyes. I saw Florida State do everything they have been asked to do. They've won every game. They went 2-0 against SEC teams (LSU, Florida) and 3-0 against ranked opponents. I also saw Alabama struggle against mediocre opponents like South Florida, Texas A&M and Arkansas, and needed a miracle (and

But the committee chose to ignore all those facts and concentrate on Alabama's win in the SEC title game against Georgia. Last year the commit-
