Supporters answered an early wake-up call to attend the Emerald Youth Foundation's annual prayer breakfast.

The inner-city youth ministry hosts the annual fundraising event on the first Friday in May at the Knoxville Expo Center.

Emerald President and CEO Steve Diggs discussed the work that the foundation has done in the past with Knoxville's urban youth but he also looked toward the future as the Emerald Academy, the organization's K-8 charter school, has lost a large portion of its federal funding.

"Knox County Schools has extended our partnership for 10 years but we got a phone call saying that our federal funding cut off, and it was cut off immediately," Diggs said. "But the Lord never ceases to provide for us.

"We've had success. We have four scholars applying for every opening we have, but we face challenges. Our neighborhoods are changing and our youth face many distractions, largely from screens."

City council debates duplex units, violence prevention oversight

By Mike Steely Senior Writer steelym@knoxfocus.com

Updates to Knoxville's One Year Plan and a contract extension took up much of the city council's long meeting Tuesday.

Several citizens and most of the eight council members present spoke on the idea of opening all of the city for duplex development, either via building new units or renovating existing single-family homes into duplexes.

The discussion saw a tiff between council members Charles Thomas and Lauren Rider on the duplex issue and came to a 4-4 split vote with Mayor Indya Kincannon taking the unusual step of voting "Yes." The One Year Plan passed on final reading to include the expansion of all areas to permit duplex housing with a "use on review" required for RN-1 and RN-2 zones.

Fox continues to object to federal grants

By Mike Steely Senior Writer steelym@knoxfocus.com

Last week, District 9 Commissioner Andy Fox continued his objections to the county accepting federal funding for any project when he disagreed with a Knox County Schools item on the regular meeting's agenda.

The KCS agenda item authorizes the acceptance of $47,977.54 in grant money for use in immigrant education. He said the grant would go for teaching English to students with questionable immigration status.

First District Commissioner Damon Rawls responded that the commission has no authority to act on school board agenda items, and Deputy Law Director Mike Moyers agreed, referring to a court order that requires approval of all school board items on the agenda.

Fox said the grant would be "expanding their budget," but Moyers replied that the commission has no power to tell the school board what to do. Fox then moved to delay the item for 30 days, but the motion failed with only Fox and Commissioner Angela Russell abstaining in the vote. The school portion of the agenda continued on the "consent" list and passed.

The collective efforts of Keep Knoxville Beautiful, Keep Tennessee Beautiful, Ijams Nature Center and Keep the Tennessee River Beautiful were honored last week by the Knox County Commission on a resolution sponsored by At-large Commissioner Larsen Jay. He described the groups as vital to the clean up efforts and said that he was inspired by former Commissioner Carson Dailey who sat next to Jay in meetings and was well known for his campaigns against trash.

County Finance Comptroller Perry Benshoof presented a summary of what the county has received over the past year in federal grants and what is expected to come in the future. The report, requested by Commissioner Shane Jackson, detailed all funds coming from the federal government, with a total of about $178 million to the county and the school system last year. He said that the county has received about $23 million and the schools about $78 million so far this year in 140 different accounts. Fox and Russell were the

S. Department of Housing and Urban Development funding, $1.2 million in one grant and $410,000 in another.

> Fox then presented his idea of requiring all federal grant requests to be filtered through the commission before being submitted. That suggestion brought Knox County Mayor Glenn Jacobs to the podium to oppose the idea.

"I sympathize with the idea," Jacobs said, but added,

"However, we have no control, and if we don't get them, someone else will. We are competing with other places."

Jacobs also said that filtering all grant requests through the commission would not allow the county time to apply for the grants and asked the commissioners to vote "No."

Rawls said the commission "does not have the expertise" in those areas, and to the commission, the applications would be "gibberish." Russell commented, "All or nothing is not the right approach."

At last week's Knox County Commissioner's Rules Committee meeting, Commissioners Terry Hill and Courtney Durrett introduced a possible rule change dealing with what a commission chairperson may say publicly if they disagree with a ruling made by the commission.

The topic was "amending the Rule II, Section D, Responsibilities of the Chair, regarding public comments of the Commission Chair when his/her position on an issue is at odds with the official position of the commission." Hill brought up the idea and mentioned Henderson's testimony was "embarrassing."

"Your responsibility as chair calls for a higher standard," Hill, a former school board chair, told the Rules Committee. She suggested that any chair or vice chair who speaks following a decision made by the commission should clarify that they are not speaking for the body.

Commissioner Andy Fox said a chair should make it clear when they are expressing their personal feelings when speaking. Attorney Mike Moyers said the rule would only apply to a chair or vice chair and a disagreement with the commission "is rare," adding if someone doesn't like the proposed new rule, then, "Don't run for chair."

"I don't mind the chair being held to a higher standard," said Rule's Chairwoman Kim Frazier.

"It's such a narrow rule, we'll spend more time talking about it than it will ever be used," Moyers said.

"Why do we need this?" asked Commissioner Rhonda Lee. "I think it is limiting speech. What happened in Nashville, not everybody is offended by that."

The proposed rule was amended to include the vice chair and passed on a motion by Durrett and Commissioner Damon Rawls. It will go to the full Continue on page 4

PAGE A2 The Knoxville Focus May 5, 2025 I Wish I Could Stop Reading About The Slaughter In Gaza

From a distance

By John J. Duncan Jr. duncanj@knoxfocus.com

As I sat in church last Sunday before the service started, I thought maybe I read too much.

I wish I had not read about Mohamed Hegazy, a seven-year-old Palestinian boy who was blinded by an Israeli grenade that blew up in his face as he played outside his home, which is now rubble.

His father said he used to smile all the time. "Now we rarely see him smiling. He is having difficulty interacting with people around him due to his blindness and the psychological trauma he suffers."

constantly clinging to me and afraid to be separated from me, even more than a moment."

Over 17,000 of those killed in Gaza during the last year and a half are children under 14 years of age. Four to five times that many have been wounded, many of them very seriously.

There is something wrong with anyone who does not think all this killing, maiming and blinding of little children is not horrific. And most of it has been done by Israeli soldiers using billions of dollars worth of American bombs, shells and weaponry paid for by American taxpayers.

I wish I had not read about Hossam Shabat, a 23-year-old journalist who was killed by the Israeli military in late March. He had a premonition and wrote the following shortly before his death: "When this all began, I was only 21 years dreams like everyone else." He added: "I documented the horrors in northern Gaza minute by minute, determined to show the world the truth they tried to bury. I slept on pavements ... anywhere I could. Each day was a battle for survival. I endured hunger for months, yet I never left my peoples' side."

At least 208 unarmed journalists have been killed in this one-sided slaughter. Shabat ended with this plea: "I ask you now: Do not let the world look away. Keep fighting. Keep telling our stories - until Palestine is free."

I wish I had not read about Fatima Hassouna, 24, who also had a premonition and was killed by an Israeli airstrike a few days before she was to be married was announced that a documentary she made about her life in Gaza would be shown at the Cannes film festival this month.

She had written on social media that she wanted "a death the world will hear."

On April 19, 36 members of the Board of Deputies of British Jews criticized what it called this "most extremist of Israeli governments."

Their letter said: "Silence is seen as support for policies and actions that run contrary to our Jewish values. Led by the families of the hostages, hundreds of thousands of Israelis are demonstrating on the streets against the return to war. We stand with them. We stand against the war. We acknowledge and mourn the loss of Palestinian life."

Before he became president, Mr. Trump criticized the war in Iraq. Last year

President Trump received approximately $100 million for his campaign and another $100 million for his inauguration from Miriam Adelson, widow of a Jewish multi-billionaire, apparently for a promise of complete, total support of the Netanyahu government in Israel.

George D. O'Neill Jr. summed things up best on April 16 in the American Conservative Magazine: "When did Jesus say and children, while turning a blind eye to the suffering of the weak? The answer, of course, is never. Yet for years, a vocal strain of American Christian Zionist leaders have supported policies that do precisely that - enabling the starvation and slaughter of Palestinians while underwriting broader wars that have decimated ancient Christian communities across the Middle East. How did we arrive at a place where those who claim to follow the Prince of Peace justify such unchristian horrors?'

the president social media, that Warsh told him to cool down the rhetoric, leading Trump to say that he was not going to fire Powell (which would be a royal mess). Warsh suddenly became the focus of the media, giving speeches, being on panels and showing up on talk shows. quits. Of course,

Nonetheless, Warsh would not be a logical fit given the president's obsession with low interest rates. Warsh was not a fan of the expansive monetary policy during then Fed chair Ben Bernanke's final year. He was also critical of term as governor doesn't Bernanke straying outside

So Bernanke introduced the press conference following the Open Market Committee Meeting - something continued by Janet Yellen and Powell. Previous Fed chairs were more secretive by not giving the public and the markets what amounts to forward guidance. When I was a Nashville Fed director, I recall a meeting in Alan Greenspan's office. In two frames was a reporting of a testimony on what the Fed was going to do with interest rates. One article said that Greenspan indicated that rates might go down. The other said that Greenspan hinted that rates might go up. Greenspan said it was the perfect testimony. Greenspan also ordered the firing of a regional bank director who told his local newspaper about the deliberations held at one of the policy ber Greenspan telling all of us directors and all the reserve bank presidents to never say anything that could move markets. I had also served on the deregulation committee established by the Monetary Control Act of 1980. Paul Volcker was the chair and cautioned secrecy. These Fed chairs followed the dictum of "never explain and never apologize." One thing a Chairman

Warsh would do is to stop the Fed's reliance on current government data. This too is a product of Bernanke. Monetary policy operates with a significant lag of 12-18 months. Current data reflect the impact of actions past. Thus, the market waiting breathlessly to see what the latest figures on unemployment and inflation is of little value in monetary policy today. Moreover, those are preliminary data that are being reported. Those data are always revised later and could be quite different from the earlier data. Yet the Fed is acting as though these unreliable early projections are in fact important in decision-making. Warsh would stop this nonsense.

A Chairman Warsh would return the Fed to its roots. The chair would not be blabbing about the outcomes of the Open Market Committee. Warsh would also be less accommodating to the whims of the Congress and importantly to those of the president. Bernanke's Fed endorsed increased federal spending, leading to an increase in the national debt and the resulting inflation that characterized the Biden years. making decisions about Warsh has said, "Each time the more it expands its size and scope, encroaching further on other macroeconomic domains, encouraging misallocation of capital, increasing the risk of future shocks, and compelling the Fed to act even more aggressively." Does that sound like someone who would be simpatico with Donald Trump's obsession with lowering interest rates? Not likely, and if Warsh were appointed Fed chair and abandoned his principles like so many have before him, the markets would not take seriously anything else he might say.

By the way, Warsh does not need the job. He is married to Jane Lauder, heir to the Estee Lauder fortune.

No One Should Be Above The Law, Including Liberal Judges

For the entirety of his four years, Joe Biden insisted there was nothing he could do without Congress to fix the problem at our southern border. Donald Trump's first 100 days as president has put the lie to the test. The fact is Biden and his administration deliberately opened the border and willfully let anyone and everyone into our country in the midst of a pandemic and beyond. Nobody was vetted many American families. Biden and his administration deliberately refused even Democrat judges. to enforce the law. During Trump's first 100 days in office, the flood of illegals crossing the border has diminished an astonishing 99.99%!

Now some are squalling over the arrest of two judges who violated the law. Leftists in our nation have been telling us time and again, "no one is above the law." What they mean is Donald Trump is not above the law; anyone who violates it, breaks it or ignores it to virtue signal from the left most certainly is above the law. Look at the state employee in Minnesota who got a tap on the wrist for keying six Teslas. One judge actually walked a wanted illegal alien, a guy who was violent and had allegedly punched a neighbor some 30 times, out a private door to deliberately avoid ICE agents. Judge Dugan broke the law and judges who willfully break the law aren't fit to adminand the violence wrought by ister it to anyone else. She

Hey Terry, Knox County Already Has An Ethics Policy

The Knoxville News Sentinel is all heated up about local government ethics and patting Commissioner Terry Hill on the back for bringing up the subject. The Sentinel's righteousness is, as always, selective. Did you ever read in the Sentinel about any ethical violations by liberal Democrats especially during the Biden administration? And don't kid yourself, it wasn't because there was nothing to report. Like CBS, ABC, NBC, CNN and MSNBC, the Sentinel has a skewed view of ethics, government corruption and dishonesty. As far as I could tell, the Sentinel always was well in the middle of the pack of Leftsupporting corporate media entities that covered for Joe Biden and perpetuated his dishonesty at every turn, ing in front of city blocks in flames to tell us about the "mostly peaceful" protests.

Locally, the Sentinel should be aware that there is an ethics policy provision that requires county commissioners and school board members to make a disclaimer statement that, in essence, they have a potential or perceived conflict but are voting in what they believe the majority of their constituents would have them do. The other side of that coin is the public official recuses himself or herself as Commissioner Angela Russell has rightfully done with her husband being employed by the property assessor. That provision has somehow seemingly been forgotten by some, but it is there and it exists. Terry Hill has appointed herself as the new champion of ethics in county government. However, if my memory serves me correctly, her daughter was employed by the Knox County School system as a "restorative interventionist," which sounds very much like part of a DEI-type was not speaking for the program, while momma entire board of education served on the Knox County Board of Education. Terry Hill routinely voted on the school budget and for pay raises for employees without, as far as I know, recusing herself or acknowledging her own potential conflict. For years her husband was a lobbyist, as was her son-in-law. As Terry Hill said about Commissioner Russell's adherence to the current ethics policy, we can't be sure that everyone would be that ethical.

The Sentinel has not printed, so far as I have seen, a single word about fraud, waste and abuse located by DOGE or the federal government, which speaks volumes about the daily newspaper's selective righteousness. It does, however, like to bring up cuts in a bloated federal government that have touched someone locally.

The truth is, Terry Hill is still chafed over her public political feud with Betsy Henderson, chair of the Knox County Board can't take a vaccine for of Education. Henderson did acknowledge she when she spoke in support of school vouchers in this past state legislative session in Nashville. Hill has ignored that fact, and she is presently riding her high horse, along with the Sentinel, all in the name of selective ethics.

We Need More Common Sense

Congresswoman Marie Glusenkamp Perez of Washington state made the evidently radical statement that "Americans believe that only U.S. citizens should be determining the outcome of American elections." Speaking at a town hall, the congresswoman's statement caused an uproar of cuss words, shouts, boos and hisses, enough to cause Glusenkamp Perez to be hustled out of the meeting for her own safety.

It's too bad a person common sense. Too many people seem to have built up an immunity to it.

By Ken Lay

In a meeting that lasted just 30 minutes, the Knox County Board of Education unanimously approved its proposed budget for the 2026 fiscal year.

The board, which convened Tuesday night at the Summer Place, voted to approve a $700.3 million budget, a figure that represents a 3.1% increase over the previous budget.

It includes $19.7 million earmarked for increases in pay for faculty and staff. KCS's proposed pay increase is intended to prepare for the Teacher Paycheck Protection Act, which will be implemented during the 2026-27 school year as the state will mandate that each teacher be paid a minimum of $50,000 per year. The budget, which must be approved by the Knox County Commission, also allocates $24.4 million for capital improvements, including a new gymnasium at Gresham Middle School as well as improvements for air conditioning and ventilation systems and other district-wide facilities improvements.

The capital improvements portion of the budget also includes $1.8 million to be earmarked for the first planning phase for a K-8 school to serve the communities of Mechanicsville, Beaumont and Lonsdale.

School meal prices will also rise as the School Nutrition Fund will have an estimated price tag of $33.76 million. Meal prices will be raised to offset rising food Superintendent of Operations and delivery costs. The budget increase would support the 63 county schools, which are in the Community Eligibility Provision, which provides free meals (breakfasts and lunches). The price increases will go into effect at the other schools.

Breakfast will go up from $2 to $2.25. Elementary school lunch will increase from $2.75 to $3.25. Middle and high school lunches will now cost $3.50 as opposed to $3. Adult breakfast will increase to $3 and adult lunch will be $5.

Transportation appears to be a concern in the budget.

Contractor John Llewellyn spoke of his concerns with the transportation.

"Our transportation director asked for an increase of six percent and we got zero," Llewellyn said. "Since 2022, we've had a raise of 22 percent, but inflation is at 21 percent, so we're at zero.

Llewellyn noted that his company spends $500 monthly for the recruitment of drivers, and that the budget as is wouldn't affect him personally, but his drivers would suffer.

"My lights will stay on and I will still eat, but it will make a difference whether my drivers will be able to eat or pay their light bill."

Both Adams and KCS Superintendent Dr. Jon Rysewyk pledged to revisit transportation at some point in the fall.

Should the chair be limited on speaking after a vote?

The committee also discussed commissioners who have family members who work for the county and why they should abstain from any voting that involves their relatives. Moyers noted the current rule in the county ethics policy.

Durrett said that the executive branch needs the freedom to "act quickly" on grant applications and added that requiring commission approval of applications "blurs the lines." Commissioner Terry Hill said no one has indicated a problem with the current process and added, "In the end, we have the final say" on approval of grants.

Commission Chair Gina Oster noted that Jacobs is the "elected Republican Mayor" and all grant requests come through his office. She said that "micromanaging" that process would damage the county's funding. She asked for a future grant summary to be reported to the commission and said, "I cannot support

I'm having fun. President Trump

I envision my iPhone as an extension of my persona. It connects me to others around the world and to the World Wide Web of information. My device is always with me, except in the shower. And the Timehop application on my phone daily retrieves pictures and rekindles memories of my children, grandchildren and friends. I no longer have to set up Super Eight movies or locate picture albums. My pictures and videos are always with me and readily available. As I speculate in my science fiction novels, someday we may have a biomechanical chip in our brains and no longer have to carry smart phones.

Future historians will refer to ours as the information age, just as we now label other historical periods as the Industrial Age, the Enlightenment or the Renaissance. We live in the age of computers and tips. And are at the cusp of AI (artificial intelligence) as further extensions of the human condition. Al is at the center of the concluding novel of my Stellar Trilogy, coming soon!

information at our finger-

It was just 20 years ago that Steve Jobs and Apple began to develop a system to consolidate mobile phones, Blackberries and music in one device. In 2007 the revolutionary first iPhone put powerful connectivity in our hands, and this innovation changed the world.

I remember when "beepers" became available and I could be on medical call, but not slaved to a land phone. I remember putting a dime (yes, a dime) in a payphone along Chapman Highway and struggling to hear a patient over the ongoing traffic noise. The days of announcements at sporting events calling, "Doctor # 99, please call the Doctors Exchange," are over. This doctor loves have to sometimes rely on America Great Again with younglings to help me with the help of accomplished my devices.

For me, the first of every week presents a recurring issue. I have a 1,000 word essay due by 6 p.m. on Thursday. As a result, I'm always looking for things which might interest the reader or intrigue me sufficiently to research and write about. (I realize the last sentence ended in a preposition, but I'm no longer in English class and sometimes following the rules of grammar makes a sentence seem contrived.)

Lately, the buzz is about President Trump's first 100 days in office. Like so many other manipulations, the notion of a president's first 100 days is a media contrivance. Nonetheless, a new administration must seize the day because election cycles are always approaching and political capital can quickly become mired and sink in the quicksand of the Washington swamp and with the corrupt and politized media.

News blogger Don Surber recently said of Trump, "He learned (from his first term) and he returned." Trump 2.0 hit the ground running with executive actions and the appointments of some of the most talented people in America. Being an outsider, Trump took the advice of Washington elites in his first term which became problematic. He returned wiser and technology even when I more determined to Make and loyal people.

> Cindy Lauper once sang, "Girls just wanna have fun..." I don't understand it, but President Trump says he's "having fun." Perhaps it is the fighter who rose from the stage in Butler, Pennsylvania, the man who defeated Democrat impeachments, crooked judges and bogus court cases, exposed the dishonest news media and along the way sued networks to ruin. Trump vanquished the Democrats in November and has continued to troll and provoke them to destroy themselves because they can't control their irrational hatred of Trump. It is amazing to watch. My schadenfreude is still tingling!

As an example, I cite Trump's spectacular accomplishment of closing the border to illegal invasion and arrests of criminal aliens, gang members and their accomplices. We didn't need new laws. We just needed a real president to enforce our laws. And the Democrats continue to take the side of illegal aliens and criminals rather than law abiding American citizens. Last week I wrote about Democrats taking the 20% side of just about every issue rather than the side taken by 80% of American citizens. I love Trump trolling the media (90% of which are Democrats) with 100 mugshots of arrested criminal aliens on the White House lawn. President Trump, Director of ICE (Immigration and Customs Enforcement) Tom Homan and Secretary of Homeland Security Kristi Noem are working to make Americans safe again.

President Trump was historically reelected to change the status quo that was leading our country (if not the entire Western World) to economic collapse. Doing nothing has produced a $37 trillion debt which is criminal. The federal government raises enough income. It just can't curb its profligate spending. And nibbling around the edges to fix it, as both political parties have done, has been a failure of leadership and arguably criminal.

Trump is revolutionary because he is fulfilling campaign promises. This is not what politicians do, but Trump is not a career politician. Sixty years of leadership by politicians has led us to the brink of collapse. What has been good for the world has not necessarily been good for America. Our revolutionary has the courage to fix the border crisis, reindustrialize America, address waste, fraud and abuse in the government, eliminate the inherently racist DEI, reform the dysfunctional education system, reform international trading inequities and restructure America's geopolitical government Big Democrats and RINOs, unelected bureaucrats, the media, academia, and apparently judges don't want change nor their gravy trains to be upset. These elites have opposed the agent of change with categorical lies, 92% negative press, impeachments, spying on Trump's family and campaign, fraudulent court cases, attempts at removing him from ballot boxes, violating the sanctity of his home and two assassination attempts. And now judges break the law while screaming "No one is above the law."

The ancient Greek philosopher Heraclitus said everything changes. And the changes that are necessary to save our country will cause some distress and upheaval. I'm not smart enough to expound on tariffs and Trump's revolutionary agenda. But I do know that doing the same things over and over has not worked and will lead to collapse. Everyone knows it, but only one has arisen with the courage to make the tough calls which are necessary.

Therefore, I trust the experienced businessman, the negotiator and the MAGA revolutionary. I trust Trump.

I taught composition and emphasized grammar. I swore to those students how important the rules of our language were for clear communication. I used a red pen to mark papers, and many students panicked as they thought passing was impossible. God knows better than I To me, seeing the smiles

> I wasn't the best at teaching literature. While I enjoyed the pieces and the books that were covered in class, I had to agree with the students that sometimes interpretations of literature were more like opinions than facts. I chose poems that left clear messages for readers. On a couple of occasions, I required students to commit to memorizing a poem because I knew that the overall message would stick with them into adulthood and even into old age. My greatest love of all > is grammar. I believe in those rules and know how stability of our language. Today, many of those rules are under attack. I blame television commentators and popular individuals for the problem. For instance, these folks with far-reaching platforms have decided to destroy the comparative and superlative forms of words. We used to use "er" and "est" for most one and two-syllable words. At some point, someone who didn't know the rule just put the word "more" in front of all adjectives. "Happier" became "more happy;" "purer" became "more pure." I wonder how many people, recalling failed test grades of this rule, are riled about these new uses.

These same popular folks have decided to make up new words or to use existing words in inappropriate ways. Of late, people are saying, "The agency is 'disappearing' prisoners." The conventional usage would be, "Agency prisoners have been disappearing."

Another made up word is "gifted." Too many people say, "I gifted ... " Folks, the word "gift" is a noun. It is not a verb. You can give a gift; you can receive a gift, but "gifting someone something" is incorrect usage.

As I've said in other pieces, too many Americans have no Idea when to use "I" or "me." The biggest problem comes when the choice is made after a preposition, and it usually is used with another noun or pronoun. Sadly, too many people say "for Mary and I." If Mary were left out, folks know that "me" is the only word that correctly fits.

For years, teachers have drilled students on correct usage. Now, those rules are open to personal preference, even though a person who misuses words often comes off sounding uneducated. The question is whether today's teachers know correct grammar. If not, our country's ability to effectively communicate will suffer. Compared to other problems in the U.S., such a matter seems trite. However, the less people are able to talk things out, the more they seem to turn to more violent solutions.

Forgiven (Genesis 4:23-

Jesus shared the importance of going after someone who has wandered from the faith with the parable of the wandering sheep (Matthew 18:10-14). Jesus then went on and talked about the process of helping restore someone who is caught up in sin. Following this discussion, Peter asks a question in the context of reaching out to someone who sins against you: "Lord, how many times shall I forgive my brother or sister who sins against me? Up to seven times?" (Matthew 18:21).

When you hear the word "forgive", we probably all have something that pops up in our head. It is likely someone has hurt you pretty badly, and you are having a hard time forgiving that person. But Jesus answered, "I tell you, not seven times, but seventy-seven times" (v. 22). Jesus takes these vant owes him ten thouer Abel, and now generations down the line, Cain has a descendant named Lamech. Lamech takes two wives for himself, the first time we read of polygamy. He is not a good man. Listen to what he says to his wives, "I have killed a man for wounding me, a young man for injuring me. If Cain is avenged seven times, then Lamech seventy-seven times"

Jesus' response seems crazy. I want you to forgive seventy-seven times. In other words, you stop counting. You don't keep track. Jesus is saying his disciple needs to be extravagant in forgiving. The exact number of times to forgive is hyperbole, not exact calculation. You are missing the point if you are looking for an exact number of how many times to forgive someone. The point is the extravagance of God's forgiveness. Jesus then tells a story to make his point, the parable of the unmerciful servant (Matthew 18:23-35).

There is a king who has a servant, and the serplay the piano or football. We are talking about currency. A denarius was one day's wage. This guy owes ten thousand talents. One talent was comparable to around six thousand denarii or six thousand days of work. So, what does ten thousand talents add up to? Sixty million denarii or sixty million days of labor. Do you know how long that would take? 164-thousand lifetimes to pay this debt back. Keep in mind that then "thousand" is the largest number for which a Greek term exists, and the talent is the largest known amount of money. When the two are combined, it is like saying "zillions."

The servant then begs the king for time to pay the debt back, something which he never could have done. The king's response is amazing. The king had compassion and forgave and released the entire debt. What God has forgiven people is beyond human calculation. His response should have been one of excitement and joy. But instead, he finds a fellow servant who owes him 100 denarii and chokes his neck demanding his money back. This amount of debt is not insignificant, but it represents only one six-hundred-thousandth of the debt the first servant has words from Genesis 4. sand talents. We are not just been forgiven. The Cain has killed his broth- talking about talents as king finds out and calls in gifts like being able to him "the wicked servant." Being wicked is equated to not showing compassion. The king then releases him to the jailers to be punished. Receive the amazing forgiveness Jesus has for you. Trust it and let it go deep in your heart so it shapes you and allows you to forgive those who have hurt you.

May 5, 2025 www.knoxfocus.com PAGE B3 Rise & Fall of a Congressman John M. Coffee of Washington State

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill rayhill865@gmail.com

For a decade, John Main Coffee simultaneously held Coffee served in the U.S. House of Representatives. Reporter Jack Pyle of the Tacoma News Tribune summed up Coffee's career after a failed comeback attempt in 1958, writing the congressman had been "unbeatable up to 1946, and unelectable after that." Coffee had come to Congress as an ardent supporter of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal in 1936. Coffee had done a great many things for Tacoma and Pierce County during his ten years in Congress, as well as for many individuals. Burly and possessing a fine mind, John Coffee had been an opponent of Francisco Franco in Spain, against providing scrap iron for the Japanese Empire as it was actively engaged in a bloody conquest of China, and foe of big business. Coffee was for expanding the role of government and backing organized labor.

Times change, as do people's feelings about the issues confronting the country. John M. Coffee lost his seat in the House of Representatives likely for two reasons; the first being that 1946 was a banner year for GOP candidates who were campaigning on the slogan "Had Enough," which sum-War. The other reason was the breath of scandal had seared Coffee through the investigation of the Senate's Special Committee to Investigate Contracts Under the National Defense Program, better known as the "Truman Committee," for its first chairman. New York U.S. Senator James Mead inherited the chairmanship after Truman. An investigation of Congressman Andrew Jackson May of Kentucky eventually landed the Bluegrass State lawmaker in the penitentiary. While John Coffee did not go to prison, the revelations from the committee certainly tarnished his reputation during an election year. John Coffee was a native of Tacoma and graduated from Yale University's School of Law. Coffee came into politics early, working for the election of Clarence C. Dill to the United States Senate in 1922. Dill defeated Republican incumbent Miles Poindexter and took the 25-year-old Coffee with him to Washington, D.C., as his secretary (chief of staff). Coffee returned to Tacoma, where he practiced law until 1933. With the advent of the New Deal, John M. Coffee became the secretary of the Advisory Board of the National Recovery Administration in the Roosevelt Administration.

the position of appraiser and examiner for Pierce County for the State Inheritance Tax & Escheat Division until his resignation in 1936.

Coffee's chance to run for Congress came when Wesley Lloyd died on January 10, 1936. Lloyd had been elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in the 1932 Democratic sweep in Washington state. Congressman Lloyd died of a heart attack in Washington, D.C., at age 52. After making his formal announcement as a candidate for the Democratic nomination, John M. Coffee plunged headfirst into the campaign. Coffee campaigned as a supporter of the New Deal and President Roosevelt. On Election Day, Coffee walloped the Republican nominee, winning better than 67% at ters causing an epic outthe peak of the popularity of Franklin Roosevelt and The Connecticut industhe New Deal.

After winning the election, the congressman-elect promptly contacted Morris Motors, the local Packard dealer in Washington, D.C. When he and Mrs. Coffee arrived in the Capitol at the end of December, awaiting the congressman was a brand-new Packard 120 club sedan. At the time, Packard was the leading marized the frustration of luxury automobile in the millions of Americans who country. When first electold. It soon appeared that one point denied knowing Coffee had a long political future before him. Even when the New Deal appeared to be receding in the 1938 election, Congressman Coffee appeared to have solidly entrenched himself inside his district, winning quite nearly 73% of the ballots cast. Coffee was routinely reelected every two years, never dipping below 61% of the vote in the general election. Coffee was given to florid pronouncements such as that he made when Japanese forces occupied the Aleutian Islands in Alaska during World War II. During the summer of 1942, Coffee had stated, "There will be an attack on the Alaskan mainland, British Columbia or the Pacific Northwest before the end of the summer." John Coffee also delighted in the publicity he oftentimes received, such as when he read excerpts from the private correspondence of Vivien Kellems, a successful Connecticut businesswoman, and Count Frederick von Zedlitz, a Nazi engineer residing in Argentina. It soon became clear the censors who had gone through the private correspondence had somehow leaked at least portions of the letters to muckraking national columnist Drew Pearson, who had in turn shared them with Coffee. The congressman read tidbits of what were obviously love letburst from Miss Kellems. trialist gave out a statement to the news media, saying, "The perfect coordination ... among Secretary Morgenthau, Mr. Pearson and Mr. Coffee is a joy to behold ... Come off the floor of that House, Mr. Coffee, where you are protected by your Congressional immunity ..." Miss Kellems raged that "any man who would do what you have done," meaning Congressman von Zedlitz, but she also claimed to have turned over valuable evidence on the count to the state department. That was news to the Department of State, which said it found exactly nothing in its files. Then came the allegation made by a local contractor. The Mead Committee heard testimony from Eivind Anderson, a contractor from Tacoma, who had won a $93,517 bid for As a congressman, John a construction job at Fort Lewis. Anderson testified he had met Congressman Coffee in a "narrow, deserted Capitol corridor back in 1941." According to Anderson, the congressman had said, "I understand from Paul (Paul A. Olson, Coffee's secretary) that you will pay $2,500 for our representing you here in Washington!" Anderson said he would be happy to pay $2,500 and, again, according to the contractor, Coffee said, "Send it to Paul ..." Naturally, Congressman John M. Coffee came before the Mead Committee to offer his own testimony. "There was never any question of his hiring me," Coffee insisted. The money given had been a campaign contribution. Had the congressman reported the contribution to the appropriate authority in the House, Senator Homer Ferguson wondered. No, Coffee replied. The congressman replied the law called for "reporting contributions received 10 days before and 30 days after an election." John Coffee explained that the $2,500 he had received from Eivind Anderson was an "interim contribution." When asked how the money had been spent, Coffee explained he had used it to reimburse himself for expenses incurred during the 1938 and 1940 campaigns.

For voters at the time, the contribution was significant as it had the same purchasing power today as more than $50,000. Coffee, "would be public- While the statute of limitahad suffered deprivations ed to Congress, John M. ly horse whipped." Vivien tions had run out, had any Andrew J. It didn't help that Senator Mead, a Democrat, had referred to Coffee's acceptance of the contribution as "morally wrong." Mead's further observation that the government "did not lose any money" likely didn't much matter to some voters. The Spokane Spokesman-Review noted the old adage about "it makes a lot of difference whose ox is gored" that it apparently made a considerable difference in Washington, D.C., as to "whose questionable public activities shall and whose shall not be investigated." Reporter Harry J. Brown archly noted that it also seemed to make a big difference in whether an investigation was requested by a Democrat or a Republican. Brown wrote that there were lingering questions left hanging following the testimony from the Mead Committee's investigation. If indeed the $2,500 had been a campaign contribution, why was it made in a year when there was no campaign, Brown wondered. "Usually, campaign contributions are made in the summer and fall of a campaign year; not a year later."

entitled "Public Morals," which stated Congressman Coffee's attempt to "sweep away the implications of a $2500 check paid in 1941 to his secretary by a contractor for whom he had gone to bat at the war department by saying that the Mead committee's decision to look into the case is 'strictly politics.'" The Post readily acknowledged as two GOP senators had submitted photostats of the $2500 check "there can be little doubt that political motives are involved." The editorial then stated, "But we fail to see how that minimizes the gravity of Mr. Coffee's offense against sound political morals."

try, and the odor of scandal hung over Congressman John M. Coffee as he entered the 1946 campaign. Coffee faced the same Republican opponent in 1946 as he had in the 1944 election, Thor Tollefson, a name which was evocative of old Viking legends. Tollefson had been the prosecuting attorney for Pierce County. The 1946 campaign did not go well for the incumbent in several important respects. Coffee, under increasing fire for his left-leaning politics, claimed to have a letter from Congressman Martin Dies Jr., a Texas Democrat nationally known for his chairmanship of the House Un-American Activities Committee. According to Coffee, the purported letter stated that Dies would campaign throughout Washington state at his own expense to proclaim Congressman Coffee's patriotism. Norman Shut Jr., an enterprising young Republican, telephoned and spoke to Congressman Dies and released a transcript of their conversation. "I had not written to John Coffee offering to go to Washington state to campaign for him or to say anything for or about him," Dies said. "I am diametrically opposed to Mr. Coffee's politics and have no intention of speaking in his behalf."

The statement by Martin Dies undermined John Coffee badly, especially in light of Thor Tollefson having pointed out the congressman had been "identified with 28 Communist front organizations." "It is hard to believe that Mr. Coffee, the congressman, is the same person as Mr. Coffee, the candidate," Tollefson said.

Three of Washington's Democratic congressmen - - - John M. Coffee, Hugh DeLacy and Charles Savage - - - had signed a letter to former Vice President and Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace praising him for his foreign policy stand and asking him to speak in the Evergreen State. The conservative Spokesman-Review published an editorial entitled, "Faithful Trio Hew to the Line." The editorial flatly accused the congressmen of being "three faithful who don't deviate in their loyalty to Russia." The newspaper sarcastically noted that each of the congressmen was against the "capitalistic-imperialistic" Second World War until Hitler violated his pact with Stalin and invaded the Soviet Union.

The battering to his reputation and the scandal helped to take Congressman John M. Coffee under. He lost the general election, winning 46% of the vote. Only 49 years old when he lost his seat in the House, it is hardly surprising that Coffee tried to seek elective office once again. Coffee did not attempt to regain his seat in Congress in 1948, but rather chose to wait until 1950 to wage another campaign for the House. At the time, Washington used a blanket primary with the two top candidates going on to the general election. The fall of Congressman Congressman Tollefson got including John Coffee, who won only 27%. Coffee fared little better in the general election, polling under 40% against the popular Tollefson. Eight years later, John M. Coffee made yet another attempt to return to the House. Once again, Coffee trailed Tollefson in the blanket primary, winning only 17% of the vote in a field of seven candidates. In one of the best years for Democrats since 1936, John M. Coffee could muster only 45% of the votes cast. At that point, Coffee knew his political career was over.

UT Gardens' May Plant of the Month

Submitted by Mary Lewnes Albrecht

Professor emerita, Department of Plant Sciences, UT Gardens, Knoxville

With more than 10,000 or so cultivars to choose from, why not try hostas?

Hosta species and cultivars, sometimes called plantain lily, are very easy to grow in the garden. They are the queen of the shade garden. Many with white to yellow foliage can take some morning sun, but all need protection from the hot afternoon and evening sun.

Plant in compostamended soil and keep the plants well-watered, especially during establishment or dry spells. There's a saying when it comes to hosta - first year they sleep, second year they creep, and the the cultivar, mostly white Designated as the official third year they leap! So be to lavender to purple botanical garden for the patient!

Hostas come in all sizes: minis (up to 7 inches tall), small (8 to 11 inches), medium (12 to 18 inches), large (19 to 24 inches) and giant (over 25 inches), so they can fit in just about anywhere in any shade garden. And they also do well in pots.

The foliage can be shades of blue, green, yellow and variegated with white to yellow in the middle or on the margins; some with very waxy leaves. Others have leaves that are thin and easily eaten by scales and slugs. Unfortunately, deer love them, too, regardless of the leaf thickness.

Breeders are introducing shades of red in the petioles and hoping to get the pigment in the leaves. Some form neat clumps, others can spread slowly. Flowering will vary with

So, where do you start? With the very reliable, large, mounding hosta named 'Guacamole.' This one has shiny chartreuse/ apple green leaves margined by a wide green edge. Large, fragrant, pale lavender flowers appear in August. Plus, it's a fast grower and can handle

KIL BOYS TRACK AND FIELD MEET Keegan finds a way to go out a winner again

By Steve Williams

Keegan Smith came into his final Knoxville Interscholastic League Meet last week wanting to top off his career winning streak in the 800-meter run, but lost to Farragut senior Evan Beeler by twotenths of a second.

Disappointed that he didn't get win No. 4 in the KIL 800, he still left Hardin Valley Academy as a record-setting winner Tuesday night after coming from behind to edge Farragut senior Tanner Coggin by fifteen-hundredths of a second in the 3200.

Coggin jumped out to a big lead early and maintained it for most of the race with Smith far back in second place.

Keegan said he used the scoreboard timer to let him know how much distance he needed to make up and it was showing "three seconds" after laps 4 through

"I found something in the last 100 meters," recalled Smith, "but Tanner responded very well. I thought maybe I wasn't going to get him, but I prevailed at the end so I'm just super blessed and thankful to bounce back so quickly after a disappointing 800.

"I wanted to four-peat," added Keegan. "That's been circled on the calendar this whole senior year and when that didn't go my way, I was pretty bummed right afterwards."

Smith said his coaches encouraged him to 'flip the page and get ready' for the next race.

"To end it with that win and the way I came back and fought the whole time,

HIGH SCHOOL BASEBALL

Diamond Notes: Local teams remain in limbo after Friday's rain Seymour wins district title By Ken Lay

Now that the 2025 high school baseball season has concluded, schools across the area can now begin postseason play and the task of competing for district championships.

Some leagues began postseason play on Tuesday. Most, however, started on Wednesday and kicked into high gear Thursday night with a pair of upsets in Class 4A.

In District 4-4A: Top seed and three-time defending state champion Farragut went down at home as fourth-seeded Maryville outslugged the Admirals, 8-5, at John Heatherly Field.

If Farragut is to make another deep playoff run it would have to win twice avoid being eliminated.

All games scheduled for Friday and Saturday were rained out. Play was set to resume Sunday at Farragut. Results were not available at press time.

The Rebels, the No. 4 seed, who opened tournament play Wednesday with a 6-5 victory over West High, had a 7-0 lead over the Admirals at one point in the contest.

Also in District 4-4A: Hardin Valley Academy, the No. 3 seed avenged a late regular-season loss to Bearden, notching a 12-2 victory at Bearden's Phil Garner Ballpark. The third-seeded Hawks got a grand slam from Caleb Van Lant. He had two hits and drove in five runs in the contest. Jaxson Jones also collected hits and knocked in two runs for the Hawks. Steve Kiner (June 12, 1947-April 25, 2025) now belonged to the ages, the memory banks worked overtime recalling his impact on the Vol program.

Kiner was a starter from the beginning, the center of attention wearing jersey No. 57.

He was the 1967 SEC "Sophomore of the Year," a year in which the Vols were 9-2 overall and 6-0 against the SEC. The Vols won their first SEC title since 1956 and repeated in 1969.

Kiner was fast enough to cover the field sideline to sideline, while Jack ("Hacksaw") Reynolds, his sophomore running mate at linebacker, anchored the middle. His head coach, Doug Dickey, once said that Kiner was as fast (or faster) than many of the offensive backs he was chasing.

The Vol performance that October day had to have had a positive impact on prep prospects in Tampa, Florida; Cincinnati, Ohio; and Kingsport, Jackson, Johnson City, Nashville and Oliver Springs, Tennessee. That's where some of the top prospects for the 1966 freshman class were located, and the Vols got them all: Kiner, Reynolds, Vic Dingus, Don McLeary, John Rippetoe, Mike Jones and Gary Kreis.

Kiner was a two-time All-American and All-SEC selection in 1968 and 1969. He was the 1969 SEC Defensive Player of the Year.

The Vols were 26-6-1 during his tenure, playing in the Orange, Cotton, The 1967 Alabama and Gator Bowls against Oklahoma, Texas, and

> In 1969, Tennessee was ahead comfortably in the fourth quarter, as Dickey was ready to unleash a number of subs on the Crimson Tide. Before Kiner came off the field to the Vols' bench area, he unleashed a memorable (and unprecedented) tirade directed toward players wearing crimson jerseys. His comments were a frontal assault on the Vols' long-time rival.

"Look over there at that poor old man," he said. "Can you see him? You sorry guys have let him down. You should be ashamed of yourselves."

After the game, he told how happy he was to have been a part of beating Alabama for a third straight year. "But, I swear, I can remember when there was some pride associated with wearing those red jerseys," he said.

His response? He point-He was an alternate ed at each finger and running back he had to tackle. That made the point succinctly.

Is Kiner the best linebacker in Tennessee football history? There are three Tennessee linebackers in the College Football Hall of Fame, Kiner (1967-69, 1999), Frank Emanuel (1964-66, 2004), and Al Wilson (1995-98, 2021). The answer is not an easy one, because their careers speak for themselves. You can make an excellent case

Emanuel led the way in 1965. The Vols played in the school's first bowl game since 1957 and compiled a record of 8 wins, 1 loss, and 2 ties, defeating Tulsa in a rain-swept Bluebonnet Bowl.

Wilson willed the Vols to the national championship in 1998 with a leadership style that brought out the best in his teammates. He earned the respect of everybody connected with the Vol program.

You can get in a whole bunch of trouble comparing players across the generations. Each of them has a great deal to offer, from the way they played on the field to their leadership over the course of their careers. Those of us who saw each of them in action or heard the voices of George Mooney, John Ward, and Bob Kesling on the Vol Network can readily attest to their bona fides.

Steve Kiner was 77 when he left this earth, but through the magic of videotape and the collective memories of those who watched him play, his place in Tennessee football history is secure. He gave his all for the Vols play after play, game after game, and season after season. He definitely earned the title "Vol For Life."

NFL Calls on Vols

By Mark Nagi

The NFL Draft isn't a perfect representation of how a college football program is faring... but typically, the number of players selected goes hand in hand with a winning culture at the FBS level.

Back in Tennessee's glory days of the 1990s and most of the 2000s, former Vols were repeatedly selected by the pros.

Nine Vols were picked in 2000, 10 Vols were taken in 2002, and eight Vols in 2003. You see where I'm going with this line of thinking.

With team success comes individual success. Last season, the Vols won 10 games and advanced to the College Football Playoff. That's a pretty good year. In turn, the NFL found four Vols worthy of selection, each of them coming in the first four rounds.

In round 1, the Atlanta Falcons took edge rusher James Pearce, Jr., with the 26th pick. At one point, Pearce was predicted to go much higher, and the Falcons had him 15th on their draft board. PABLO COPPER – 2 years old, 66 lbs.

Meet Pablo Copper, the sweetest boy! He would make a wonderful adventure buddy and would be a great hiking dog. He loves to go on daytrips with volunteers. He is a gentleman when riding in the car. It takes him a bit to get comfortable but eventually curls into a ball on the seat. He loves to walk/run and smell everything around him. Being a hound, he loves to sing! Just listen to his lovely howl. In playgroups, he likes to hang out with other dogs but is lower energy. He is such a joy to spend the day with and we hope he finds his forever home soon!

GIZMO – 11 months old, 47 lbs., Animal ID: 56601300 Meet Gizmo! This is a note from Gizmo's foster: He's a recent visitor in my home. He's a mixed breed puppy that I found with YWAC. Gizmo is playful, very loving, housebroken, and VERY smart. He gets along well with my senior dog's and responds well to my senior dog's gentle corrections as they each figure one another out. He also responds indifferently to having food removed even while in the middle of eating and so far has exhibited zero signs of aggression. He's just a loving playful pup! He even plays with the neighbor dog through the fence!
