Tuesday is Election Day for low-turnout city primary

By Mike Steely
Senior Writer
steelym@knoxfocus.com

Voter turnout so far in the Knoxville City Council Primary election has been poor, and each of the five races could be decided by a small margin. The campaigns conclude on Tuesday, the primary Election Day, and the top two candidates will go on to the general election on November 4.

Only voters registered in Districts 1, 2, 3, 4 and 6 may vote in the election and must do so at their designated local precincts. Election Coordinator Chris Davis is asking voters to be considerate when voting at any of the public schools, which will remain open during Tuesday's election. The polls are open from 8 a.m. until 8 p.m. If you are unsure of where to vote, you can check online at www.knoxvotes.org.

"The final vote count for early voting citywide is 5,284 votes cast. There are also 606 votes so far for absentee and nursing homes. Add those two numbers together and we have 5,890 votes cast," Davis told The Focus Friday.

Davis added, "The early voting period saw 14 days of good weather, but less than 8% of eligible voters have cast a ballot. There's a lot of work to do on Election Day, and I hope that voters turn out in large numbers on Tuesday, August 26!"

Changes coming to Chilhowee Park

By Mike Steely
Senior Writer
steelym@knoxfocus.com

Two major changes for Chilhowee Park were debated Tuesday night during the Knoxville City Council meeting: selling the former fair midway property to Emerald Youth Ministry and moving Muse Knoxville to the Jacob Building.

A large crowd of supporters and opponents attended the long meeting, where tensions got heated, and one protester was removed. Some opponents of the sale of the former midway rides area made attacks against Mayor Indya Kincannon and the city. Mayor Kincannon wore an emerald green dress to show her connection and support of the proposal, matching the t-shirts worn to the meeting by Emerald Youth staff and children. Councilwoman Gwen McKenzie announced a community meeting will be held this Tuesday at 6 p.m. at the Beck Cultural Center.

Three speakers for and against the sale, including Rev. Herold Middlebrook for the sale and community leader Vivian Shipe in opposition, spoke to the assembly and council members.

Mayor Kincannon promoted the transaction as similar to the successful Lonsdale project and said the Emerald Youth Foundation's planned facility was a result of a Request for Purchase announcement, with the foundation being the only bidder. She noted the plans call for a development for the education, wellness and athletic wellness of area youth.

After loud shouts and some abusive words, McKenzie moved for a two-week postponement of the vote.

The 12-acre site, according to Kincannon, will be sold at "fair market value" to Emerald Youth. David Brace, Knoxville's COO, said the sale involves a 20-year operating clause with the right to repurchase by the city.

"They came to us," Brace said. The property was appraised, and a $912,000 purchase price was agreed to during talks and community meetings. Councilwoman Amelia Parker and other members questioned not being included in the meetings or talks. She called the procedure "misinformation by the administration."

County facing bleak budget as bonds come due

By Mike Steely

steelym@knoxfocus.com

Knox County Finance Director Chris Caldwell painted a bleak picture of the county's finances over the next few years. He spoke during the Finance Committee meeting last week and warned that bonds issued years ago are coming due and must be paid.

His warnings drew some serious questions from the Knox County Commissioners, and he replied that there were two solutions: find new revenue sources or cut back county services. The problem, Caldwell said, goes back to 2003 and 2004, "a handful of bonds" were issued that are now becoming due.

"We're in the red," he said. This and next year, the county will need to draw from its fund balance to maintain the status quo, he advised, adding that the bulk of the debt will arrive in 2027. He said part of the problem is that no payments have been made on the long-term bonds for several years.

Caldwell said the commission and the county need to look at all the services and determine which services could be dropped or cut back. He said that

Board continues to review problems at the Bean Juvenile Center

The Knox County Juvenile Service Center Board of Directors held its second meeting on Wednesday to continue its review of the problems at the Richard L. Bean Juvenile Detention Center.

At-large Commissioner Larsen Jay serves as chairman and passed along information on juvenile detention centers across the state. Interim administrator Brian Bivens reported that he has hired a captain to assist him, and he is upgrading the camera system at the 3323 Division Street facility and upgrading the electronic key boxes at exit doors. He said partnerships are prior to trial or longer if they are being held on a violent or criminal charge. He said one youth, a Powell boy, may be held there for months. Jay and Bivens discussed finances, and Bivens said a budget request has not been submitted yet.

Juveniles may spend a few days at the center

Mark Anderson, the licensing director of the Tennessee Department of Children's Services, told the meeting that his agency is visiting weekly during the transition between the Bean staff and the Knox County Sheriff's Office's assuming operations next January, when the visits may shift to quarterly. He said the Bean Center has not been authorized by

Neocons Responsible For Russian-Ukraine War

From a distance

By John J. Duncan Jr.
duncanj@knoxfocus.com

On August 16, my wife, Vickie, and I attended a conference at the Dulles Airport Hilton just outside Washington, D.C. It was titled "A Blueprint For Peace" and was hosted by the Ron Paul Institute for Peace and Prosperity.

This institute was started by Rep. Paul at the end of his last year in Congress in 2012. I participated in the founding press conference, and I am still on the advisory board.

This year's conference had several outstanding speakers, such as Professor Jeffrey Sachs, Judge Andrew Napolitano, Col. Doug MacGregor, and others. The first day was a scholars program for college students headlined by Kelley Vlahos, former editor of the American Conservative Magazine.

Professor Sachs is from Columbia University and has been used by the United Nations to advise countries all over the world. He is considered to be one of the greatest foreign policy experts in this country.

In his speech, he said we need to dust off the Monroe Doctrine and stop intervening in so many wars and conflicts in the Middle East and elsewhere. He said the war in Ukraine and the slaughter in Gaza could be ended quickly if we made it clear we were no longer providing so much money and weaponry.

The Monroe Doctrine was a declaration made in 1823 by President James Monroe that basically said we would not allow political and military interference in our sphere of influence, the Americas, and in return, we would not try to run Europe.

This is not isolationism. We should have trade and tourism and cultural and educational exchanges with all nations, and we should help out during terrible humanitarian crises.

But almost all our wars over the last 60 or 75 years have been about money or power, or both. We have spent trillions and have lost many thousands of American lives to make a tiny few rich and powerful.

Most of this interventionism has been egged on by so-called Neocons, who are not conservative at all. In fact, columnist George Will wrote that Neocons were "magnificently misnamed," and that they were "really the most radical people in this City" (meaning Washington, D.C.).

Russia and Ukraine began peace negotiations four days after their war started in February of 2022, and basically had a peace agreement worked out by April 15, 2022, until Boris Johnson, the prime minister of Great Britain, and Neocons in our own State Department, principally Victoria Nuland, urged Ukraine not to sign. Their demands have led to the spending of about $350 billion by the U.S., according to President Trump.

Even worse, it has led to hundreds of thousands, possibly as many as one million, deaths, counting all civilians and soldiers on both sides.

Victoria Nuland has led our policy toward Ukraine. She worked as chief of staff for Bill Clinton's close friend, Strobe Talbott, in the State Department. Then she worked for Dick Cheney when he was vice president. From 2005 to 2008, George W. Bush appointed her as ambassador to NATO. Later, she was Under Secretary of State from 2021 to 2024, when she urged Ukraine not to sign the peace agreement with Russia.

Now she teaches foreign policy with Hillary Clinton at Columbia.

Nuland is married to Robert Kagan. Kagan is and has been one of the leading Neocons for years. Al says he "is known for his strong advocacy of liberal internationalism" and "has been a vocal proponent of U.S. interventionism." He was associated with the Project for the New American Century, the architects of our disastrous war in Iraq.

James Baker, then our secretary of state, gave Russia what he called an "ironclad promise" in 2012 not to move NATO further east - i.e., Ukraine - in return for Russia not contesting the reunification of Germany.

President Trump had six conversations with Putin during his (Trump's) first term, during one or more of which Trump said he would not advocate NATO membership for Ukraine. This is why President Trump says this war would not have happened if he had been re-elected in 2020.

Samuel Charap, distinguished chair in Russia and Eurasia Policy and senior political scientist at the RAND Corporation, co-authored a Foreign Affairs Magazine article entitled "The Talks That Could Have Ended The War In Ukraine."

He wrote, "Russia agreed to have a process to diplomatically address the dispute over Crimea," a Russian speaking area that Russia annexed in 2014.

Charap added that the concession by Ukraine "of renouncing its ambitions to join NATO was potentially enough to engender some relatively significant concessions from Russia," possibly even "some sort of compensation" to Ukraine for the Crimean Peninsula.

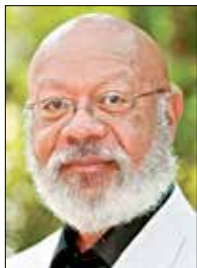

President George W. Bush promised repeatedly when he campaigned in 2000 that he was going to have a more "humble" foreign policy and put an end to "nation building" (of other nations). However, he allowed himself to be horribly misled and controlled by power-mad neocons.

Fire Lutnick!

The president fired the commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Dr. Erika McEntarfer, turning her into a cause celebre. Pardon me, but that was not a very smart move. The initial job numbers released by the bureau are always overstated and have to be revised downward. This is due to the first numbers resulting from employer surveys. Those surveys have lousy response rates and are unreliable. That

By Dr. Harold A. Black
blackh@knoxfocus.com

is why the numbers keep getting revised downward when the real figures come in. This year, the average revision downward has been 55,000 per month. In my opinion, Dr. McEntarfer should have been fired long before Trump did it for overseeing the production of such awful statistics during her tenure. Now, Trump got upset because the July jobs number was only 70,000. He had a hissy fit. But that number was only the job estimate. What was the real number? Most of the previous month's job growth that Trump was so proud of was actually a bad number. Most were state and local government jobs, while the private sector job growth was negative.

So, Trump did a really dumb thing. Instead of firing her because of having to adjust downward each month the previous month's numbers, he fired her because the initial estimate of July's numbers was low. This is beyond stupid. Trump said on Truth Social: "I have directed my Team to fire this Biden Political Appointee, IMMEDIATELY. She will be replaced with someone much more competent and qualified." Mind you, she was confirmed by the Senate 86-9. Does that sound like a Biden lackey to you? Trump then said, "In my opinion, today's Jobs Numbers were RIGGED in order to make the Republicans, and ME, look bad." A group called the Friends of BLS (I am not kidding) then responded, "This rationale for firing Dr. McEntarfer is without merit and undermines the credibility of federal economic statistics that are a cornerstone of intelligent economic decision-making by businesses, families, and policymakers." You think?

Actually, Trump should have fired Howard Lutnick, the commerce secretary, instead of Dr. McEntarfer, who was just the messenger. Lutnick played a bigger role. Back in February, he terminated two unpaid expert advisory committees on economic data. The committees were advising the administration on how to improve the reporting of statistical data. One was the Federal Economic Statistics Advisory Committee, which made recommendations on improving inflation and employment numbers and reporting on GDP (gross domestic product). The second group was the Bureau of Economic Analysis Advisory Committee, which consulted on labor statistics.

The committees were comprised of academics, private-sector economists, and data scientists focused on continually improving economic data produced by the BLS as well as the Commerce Department's statistical agencies, the Census Bureau and the Bureau of Economic Analysis. Even if one may even argue that most were probably Democrats and hated Trump, it doesn't explain the wildly inaccurate numbers under Biden. One expert said, "This will impact the quality of the data." No kidding.

Now, with the firing of the advisory committees and McEntarfer, Trump's critics have more ammunition to question any data reporting coming out of this administration. Several Democrat senators are asking if cutting back on cities surveyed for the CPI is an attempt to skew inflation numbers.

The market realized that the initial numbers were estimates and knew that they would be revised. However, the media usually ran with the initial numbers and wrote the headlines. Seldom were the revisions reported with the same gusto. I doubt very seriously if any business decisions were made on these numbers. Now going forward, they will likely be ignored. Trump will now put into these positions his own people (re: political hacks) who, knowing that their jobs are on the line, will be motivated to report only data designed to keep their jobs. No one will believe any of these data.

Again, Dr. McEntarfer just reported the numbers and was fired. But Lutnick is mainly responsible in that he fired the advisory committees months before. What was that about chickens coming home to roost? Advice to Trump: Fire Lutnick!

Publisher's Positions

Immigration Should be Very Selective

The idea that everyone who wants to come to the United States to live should be welcomed with open arms without a second thought is as simplistic as it is wrong. And it is terrible public policy, as time has proved over and over again. U.S. Citizenship & Immigration Services is updating its guidelines to prevent anti-American foreigners from changing their status in our country in order to remain here. That is very good news. There is nothing wrong with the idea that someone should be considered worthy to be allowed to remain in the U.S. Becoming a citizen of the United States requires an applicant to swear allegiance to our country. And, no, not everyone who wants to come here should be allowed to get into the country or be welcome. Not everybody has good intentions. Do you suppose the Leftists who are squalling about this change leave the porch light on with a sign reading: "The Door Is Unlocked, Come On In and Make Yourself At Home?" My guess is no; they do not. In fact, many of those same Leftists who try to shame us into doing as they please and adopting utterly nonsensical and harmful policies do so from the safety of their gated communities and buildings filled with security. How many of these empty-headed Leftists open their own doors to people they don't know, some of whom are carrying machetes, guns or knives? Probably not that many. I wonder how many Leftists have security alarms in their homes or security cameras? Why would they need them if everyone is welcome? Probably because the only illegals they know are cleaning their houses for a pittance, pruning their shrubbery or, like that congresswoman from Vermont said, wiping their behinds. Many of these terrorist organizations, like Hamas, seek the literal eradication of Western civilization and everything the Left holds dear. How many LGBTQ+ organizations do you suppose thrive in Gaza or anywhere outside of Israel in the Middle East? Quite likely, almost as many as there are feminist organizations. The Left doesn't think criminals should even be prosecuted, yet some of those they support literally cut off the hands of thieves. Nor is China a very tolerant society so far as the Left is concerned. Theirs is a very different kind of Communism. Kincannon Should Be More Open, Transparent And Inclusive It may be a sign of the Apocalypse, but it sure does look like the Knoxville City Council just stood up for itself. That hasn't happened since sometime before Victor Ashe was mayor of Knoxville. Her Highness, Indya, Lord

Mayoress of Knoxville, was in a mighty big hurry to sell off the old Midway portion of Chilhowee Park, known to many Knoxvilleans as the fairgrounds, to the Emerald Youth Foundation. Indya, not known for her speed in getting things done, moved with the alacrity of a goat on steroids when someone rattles a bag of Cheetos. Gwen McKenzie, the councilwoman for East Knoxville, had the shocking experience of actually seeing people who lived in her district as they filled the auditorium in the Main Assembly Room of the City-County Building last week. That could affect the family business, which is holding public office and collecting a check. That motivated Gwen to do something she rarely does: take the side of the people. Lynne Fugate, councilwoman at-large who used to advocate for taking a "Leap of faith" when she was shilling for former superintendent Jim McIntyre, wasn't as ready to jump for Indya. Things had gone south for Her Highness, the Lord Mayoress, indeed. God forbid that the council come out of its coma, much less start growing a spine. Next thing you know, some rascal will second one of Amelia Parker's motions! Bill Williams, A True Gentleman It is with great sadness that The Knoxville Focus family acknowledges the passing of a true gentleman. Bill Williams was for decades one of the most widely recognized figures in our community, arriving in Knoxville at a time when the local TV news still meant something and enjoyed a large viewership. Knoxville has seen the passing of an inordinate number of local former television personalities this year: Edye Ellis, Margie Ison, Ken Schwall and now Bill Williams. Bill Williams was the anchor of the nightly WBIR-TV newscast for almost thirty years in Knoxville and East Tennessee. Even then, it was highly unusual for a TV anchor to remain in place for that long. Bill Williams delivered the news impartially, and I never knew what his politics were, which is the way the news was supposed to be broadcast in a less hyperpartisan time.

In person, Bill Williams was kind, considerate and always a gentleman. It was neither a public face nor an act. He knew happiness and heartache. Williams lost his wife to cancer and watched helplessly as he lost two of his sons. One got a sense of the man's character in watching him, especially when he started "Monday's Child," a weekly feature on the evening news spotlighting a special needs child in the hope of finding that little girl or boy a forever family. It was a segment that could make a person laugh or cry, and oftentimes both. "Monday's Child" was not something dreamed up by WBIR to sell commercials; it was a project close to the heart of Bill Williams, and viewers got a glimpse of his heart during those broadcasts. WBIR promoted its slogan of "Straight From the Heart," and while Bill Williams was on the air, it was true. Bill Williams was the heart of WBIR-TV and much of East Tennessee. The passing of Bill Williams truly is the end of an era.

Knox Co. Commission to select a chair, vice chair

By Mike Steely
Senior Writer
steelym@knoxfocus.com

The Knox County Commission meets in special session on Tuesday, September 2, to reorganize and choose a chair and vice chair for the upcoming 12 months. Currently, 3rd District Commissioner Gina Oster serves as chair, and at-large Commissioner Kim Frazier is the vice chair. After a round of nominations, the new top officers will be selected. The commission then moves along, with the new chair presiding, to select members of the various committees and make appointments to subcommittees and other county functions and organizations. The first meeting following the selection of officers is the agenda review meeting on September 14, with the full regular meeting set for September 22.

Bean Juvenile Center

Cont. from page 1 the state in the past two years. Judge Tim Irwin said that the DCS was never present at past board meetings. Jay asked Anderson about any progress in a state comptroller's report on the past problems there, and the DCS official indicated the investigation is underway based on some past health issues. Dr. Marie Bly, juvenile court mental health director, said care there was "severely restricted" until Mr. Bivens came on board. She said the children being held are now screened at intake and provided immediate services if needed. Judge Irwin noted that attorneys for some youth halt services for the children on legal grounds. Heather Willis, Knox County Schools' social work supervisor, explained the center's work dealing with special education and subjects like math and science, along with therapy and speech. She said funding has been coming from the Title One program and the school system provides books, computers and other needs. The board was urged to work with other local agencies as the center is reorganized. Members of the group meet again on Tuesday, September 16 in the juvenile courtroom.

Schaad Road zoning appeal denied by commission

By Mike Steely
Senior Writer
steelym@knoxfocus.com

Schaad Road is growing and possibly ripe for commercial development, but last week the Knox County Commission turned away an appeal for a coffee shop along the busy route. Justin Ford, represented by Benjamin Mullins, asked the commission to overturn Knoxville-Knox County Planning's 11-4 vote against his request to rezone 1.5 acres at 5210 Schaad Road. He was asking for a neighborhood commercial zone in what is an agricultural area surrounded by residential homes. Area homeowners Heather Story, Jane Smith and Wilma Mullins spoke in opposition to the request, claiming future safety issues, incompatibility with the existing residential homes, and the lack of access off Schaad. Mullins countered that the increasing traffic flow increases the need for commerce in the area and that a coffee shop would be appropriate for the area. Commissioners Larsen Jay and Andy Fox supported the appeal, with Jay noting the greenhouse and shop there were commercial concerns also. Commissioner Terry Hill noted the busy road as having "growing pains" and said the commercial development will come "when the time is right." The commissioners voted to deny the appeal, with Fox and Jay voting "Yes." In other action, the commission approved three dwelling units per acre along Ball Road, changing the zoning from agricultural to planned residential. Twenty acres of the property will not be developed, and the development will be for townhomes and attached dwellings. Four parcels along Hill Road were approved for low-density residential in request from Jason Strange for low-income housing. A property at 6933 Beeler Road was approved for low-density residential, and the same change was approved for 4925 Emory Road. Low-density residential was also approved for 323 Brakebill Road. A change from agricultural to planned community along Asheville Highway was postponed.

Smithwood Baptist Church celebrates 180 years

Smithwood Baptist Church celebrated its 180 years on August 10, 2025. Smithwood is proud to be a loving fellowship that has sought to proclaim Christ in the Knoxville area since 1845. The church has deep roots in the Smithwood neighborhood with its origins tied to the Smith family who settled there in the late 1700s. John Smith built the first brick home in the area in 1839 and the church was established on land he donated around 1845. Smithwood Baptist Church was founded on August 11, 1845. It had ten charter members: John Smith, Mariah Smith, Martha L. Smith, Israel A. Smith, Lucy Smith, Charles W. Karnes, Nancey E. Karnes, John Moody, Elizabeth Copeland and Rebecca Copeland. On October 2, 1846, John Smith deeded the land for the church building and graveyard for the sum of one dollar. A small, framed church building was completed in 1847 and was given the name of Adair's Creek Church on June 12, 1847. The membership totaled 14. The church minutes for 1857 have an interesting notation: the church paid the pastor $55 for a year's salary and $5 for the sexton's salary. The church gave $53.85 to home missions and $22.35 to foreign missions. The church gave more to missions than it paid its pastor. The first parsonage was purchased in 1913 and located on Rennoc Road. A brick auditorium was begun in 1915 and the first worship service was held on April 9, 1916. Through the Civil War, two World Wars, thirty-one presidents, the admission of seven new states to the Union, the invention of the telephone and the automobile, the moon landing, two presidential assassinations, and countless other moments of trial and triumph, SBC has been an ever-present place of solace on the hill. SBC continues to provide a mission for Operation Christmas

Child. Teresa Cooper heads up this service for reaching untold numbers of needy children. Year round, she and her husband, Dr. Harry, spend countless hours shopping for supplies, replenishing the shelves, making and packing the OCC boxes, and then delivering them to Boone, North Carolina, distribution center. While many volunteers help to carry out this task, the Coopers are the main inspiration. SBC knows without His blessings, the church would not be present today. They are praying for God's continued blessings and to remain to serve for another 180 years. As Dr. Strange's Sunday sermon synopsis states: "Smithwood has a Divine Appointment. It's our turn-around moment, and we are praying for our Heavenly Father to send more laborers to work with us as we reap a bountiful harvest."

County facing bleak budget as bonds come due

Continued from page 1 He repeated that the options are to increase revenue or reduce expenses, or a combination of both. He added that the state requires a "maintenance of effort" for many county-funded departments. He said the county has yet to issue new bonds to help defray costs.

"We're fortunate to have these reserves," he said. He also noted that county employees will get a 2% pay increase starting next January, but only for six months.

Chilhowee Park

Continued from page 1 and the moving of Muse to the Jacob Building as part of the East Knoxville Renovation and said that, except for the 10-day annual Tennessee Valley Fair, Chilhowee Park is "mostly a parking lot."

Council decided to postpone the Emerald Youth purchase vote for two weeks, and a further discussion is planned for the September 2 council meeting.

Muse Knoxville to move to Jacob Building

Muse CEO Allison Comer spoke about Muse outgrowing its current facility, which is located across the lake from the Jacob Building. She talked about a public-private partnership with the Clayton Family Foundation to put $25 million into the renovation of the structure and noted that when it is occupied in a few years, it will be operated 365 days a year. She answered questions from the council and said it is possible to permit the Tennessee Valley Fair to use the building for its 10-day run each year. Scott Suchomski, Tennessee Valley Fair executive director, spoke of the fair's 105-year history with the Jacob Building and said he hadn't heard about the Muse agreement until it became public. He said he and the fair board were left out of the consultations. The fair has two years left on its contract for use of the Jacob Building. Brace said there's no taxpayer money involved in the agreement and added, "There's room for both the fair and Muse" on the grounds. Councilwoman Seema Singh said that the fair organizers were "left feeling disrespected." Suchomski said he is now having to "look for other options." Parker attacked Brace's truthfulness and said the "city is working to push the fair off the site." The Muse's move to the Jacob Building was approved for 20 years with another 20-year option. The vote passed with Parker voting against it. The fair kicks off its 2025 season on September 5.

The Doctor is in a weekly column by

Vacation

Is the notion of a vacation irrelevant if you are retired and every day is a holiday from work? I retired from medicine after 45 years and a lifetime of meeting schedules. But now the publisher's deadline for this weekly column is my only mandatory task for the week. I still have other meetings, including two weekly Bible studies, a book club and church on Sunday. So, you might say I'm really not retired since I have events that anchor the days of my week. So, I have no excuse for occasionally being flummoxed about what day it is. I'm not concerned because my iPhone always knows the date, and my cohort also reports being occasionally day challenged.

Last week, I wondered if I was truly on vacation. Since I am a stickler for definitions, I turned to Mr. Webster, who defines a vacation as "a scheduled period spent away from home or business in travel or recreation." I traveled extensively all my life, but I have discovered that I no longer have anywhere I want to go because I'm already there. East Tennessee is God's country!

Last week was unusual for the Fergusons. I'm trying to finish the third novel in my Stellar Trilogy and decided to get away and write. I thought about naming this column "Sabbatical," until Mr. Webster explained to me that a sabbatical is "a period of time during which a person does not work at their regular job."

I don't have a regular job, unless you call this column a job. But since I write because I want to, not because I have to, perhaps this column doesn't qualify as a job. I may not technically be on vacation or on professorial sabbatical, but I have retreated to our mountain cabin above the

A view of the Smokies from the Ferguson vacation cabin in Townsend last week.

Townsend Valley to hopefully finish the first draft of "Qubits" (my novel's title).

The only distraction above the Townsend Valley is the beauty of the Smoky Mountains. However, we were also distracted by a bear that walked through our side yard. This is the second bear I've encountered in the last month or so. The first bear sighting was at my home in the UT Hospital area and was more unusual than the second bear sighting here on the mountain.

What's going on? Am I attracting bears? This does not seem to be a problem for others. When I used to trout fish in the Smokies, I was taught to be alert for bears, and you could often smell them. Either that was an old fisherman's tale or I've gotten older and my sense of smell has waned because I caught no pungent whiff with either of my bear encounters.

City folks like me forget the background noise of civilization until it's no longer there. Becky and I live about a mile from Alcoa Highway, and the hum of the highway is ever-present. Civilization's hum is absent here in the mountains.

Years ago, we were at Olympia National Park in Washington state. I vividly remember taking a hike to Hurricane Ridge, and when we stopped, the forest's utter silence was almost felt. I challenge you to get away in the woods to just listen and feel the silence. I preach to my grans to be alert, and they "might see something." And you might hear something unusual, like the sound of a cuckoo, I once heard while traipsing in a Vienna forest.

It felt like vacation when we went down to town for provisions. I like grocery stores. In my foreign travels, I enjoyed surveying grocery markets and found it a good marker of a people's affluence or their lack thereof. I've observed that different cultures stock shelves with things Americans might find unusual. I remember a market in Spain selling dried animal limbs for, perhaps, soup? I didn't ask. In rural Guatemala, there was nothing Americans would recognize as a market. Again, I observed that the poverty of an area could be judged by the paucity of farm animals or the absence of cats. In Guatemala, I coined the term "ribs on a pig" as a marker of poverty. I've never seen a skinny pig in America. I told my medical mission teams that when you see skinny pigs, it's a tell.

Becky took a break from cabin cleaning, and I left my prose to walk in the woods along the Middle Prong in Tremont. It is one of our favorite places, though it is not a quiet walk. Deep water runs silent, but a babbling brook, the Middle Prong, does not. Nonetheless, we enjoyed the power of water tumbling down over rocks sculpted over the ages. Geologists say that the Smoky Mountains were once higher and undoubtedly more majestic than the Rocky Mountains. The force of water is irresistible and has made our mountains round and curvaceous.

Becky and I have been a team for 50 years this September, and we're traveling to Oregon to celebrate with family and to return to Crater Lake, which is on my top ten list of wondrous vistas. But the view from our cabin is unparalleled. And you might anticipate some reflections of the West. Stay tuned...

Coaching football

At the Doyle High School 50th reunion, I saw students whom I didn't recognize after all these years. However, I did see a few football players who still had features from their teenage years.

At DHS and at Karns High School, I coached football. Those people with whom I grew up probably scoffed at my career as a football coach. As a freshman, I played the game. I went through practices, made plenty of mistakes, but for some reason, the coaches thought I was capable of holding down the right guard and linebacker position. To be honest, I think that the coaches credited me for the play of my twin brother. Offensively,

By Joe Rector
joerector@comcast.net

the demands of the position made sense. At linebacker, I just watched the line-men come after me and hoped none of them destroyed me.

During sophomore year, I developed headaches bad enough that Mother took me to a neurologist to make sure I didn't have a serious illness. I didn't, but my football career ended right then. I became a manager for a couple of years before deciding to go back to band.

My career as a high school football coach began out of necessity. My job wasn't guaranteed since I was a first-year teacher, so I volunteered to coach the freshmen team.

I worked with my good friend Jim Pryor, who had coached varsity ball for several years. We both were working on our master's degrees at UT, so practices were limited to an hour or a little longer. We kept the boys busy with developing skills and then had some contact drills before scrimmages and running. Jim had played college ball at Maryville, so at least one of us had some experience on game days.

Our freshmen teams performed well. The players seemed to have learned their roles and remained competitive in most games. The last freshman team that I coached (Robby Howard had replaced Jim Pryor by then included some big, strong, aggressive players. I left Doyle in February, but that group of boys had an undefeated senior year, a consequence of hard work and God-given talent.

I again volunteered to coach freshman football at Karns High. Doing so was again an attempt to remain an English teacher for the next year. At KHS, plenty of talent was present, but too much of it walked the halls and left for home after the final bell. Slowly, I begged and cajoled and flattered boys into joining the team. By the last year of coaching, 44 players were on the team. I insisted that freshmen learn the basics of the game. Footwork was the most important aspect, and close behind were blocking and tackling.

During my tour at Karns, I worked for three different coaches. The boys learned the varsity offense and defense, and they learned to enjoy the game. My promise to them was that if they showed up to practice that they would play in games. I had four teams set up on both sides of the ball. Yes, winning was important, but I decided my job was to teach fundamentals and the offense and to make sure that football was something they enjoyed enough to come back to the varsity team.

Unfortunately, in the first game of that last year, the new head coach and his staff usurped my position. I was left to the punt team. Few of the 44 players saw much playing time, and I was furious. After the game, we boarded the bus, and I announced that the next day the team would have a different coach because I hadn't been able to keep my promise about every-one receiving playing time.

That was the end of my coaching journey. I enjoyed it and missed the contact with teams. However, I had a different view of what freshman football was all about and no longer had that excitement that comes when a team takes the field.

I'm grateful for the chance to coach. I learned that playing the game was not necessarily a requirement for coaching. After all, coaching is teaching, and I could do one with no problem. I figured that sending on players who had the basic skills down could certainly help the varsity team. I appreciate all those boys who allowed me to coach them, and I hope I didn't make them dislike football.

How Contempt Works in Tennessee

When someone refuses to follow a court order in Tennessee, one of the tools available to address that issue is filing a motion for contempt. But what exactly does that mean, and how does it work?

Being held in contempt of court means that a judge has found that a person has intentionally disobeyed a lawful court order. Contempt is a serious matter, and it is one of the few ways courts have to make sure that their orders are respected.

By Jedidiah McKeehan
jed@attorney-knoxville.com

There are two main types of contempt: civil contempt and criminal contempt. Most cases involving people refusing to pay child support or not following a custody order fall under civil contempt. The goal of civil contempt is not to punish someone, but to make them comply with the order. A person can even be jailed until they do what the judge ordered them to do.

To prove contempt, the person filing the motion must show four things: 1) there was a clear and specific court order in place, 2) the other person knew about the order, 3) the other person had the ability to comply, and 4) they chose not to comply. That last part—ability to comply—is very important. A judge will not hold someone in contempt if they truly could not do what the order required.

Contempt hearings are held in front of a judge, not a jury. The judge will hear both sides, look at the evidence, and decide whether the other party should be held in contempt. If they are, the judge can order them to pay money, correct their behavior, or in some cases, serve jail time.

Filing for contempt is not something to be taken lightly, but sometimes it is the only way to get the other side to take a court order seriously. If you think someone is ignoring a court order that affects you, speak with your attorney about whether contempt is the right next step.

Homer T. Bone of Washington

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill
rayhill865@gmail.com

Homer T. Bone served just under twelve years in the United States Senate and sat on the federal bench as a judge of the U.S. Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals from 1944 until his death in 1970. A man devoted to his wife and son, Homer Bone's passions included locomotives and oysters, which he sometimes enjoyed for breakfast. Homer and Blanche Bone lived in an outwardly modest-appearing white frame cottage, which sat atop a green hill in a neighborhood once known as "Little Germany" in Tacoma. In reality, the house was quite large and spacious with a sweeping view of the city below and the sea beyond.

Bone was a small man of neat appearance and possessed a profoundly sardonic wit, which he used freely. Once Senator Bone took a fresh salmon up to the Senate Press Gallery for the delectation of the waiting newsmen, who proved unable to undo the wire wrapping around the case. "Do you mean that with all the knockers around here, you fellows haven't got a hammer?" Homer Bone wondered.

The most widely read news magazine in the world, TIME, described Senator Bone as "a round-shouldered, kindly little man with a gloomy viewpoint." Whenever the senator was discussing world events, evidently Bone frequently acknowledged to his listener, "This is a dark and somber picture."

Millions of modern Americans owe Senator Homer T. Bone a word of thanks. The Washington senator worked tirelessly on behalf of the creation and financing of a national institute for cancer research. Aided by a young congressman from his home state, Warren Magnuson, and by Senator Matthew M. Neely of West Virginia, who had lost three fingers to the dread disease, Bone personally made it a point to stop and seek support from each of his 95 colleagues. Perhaps as many as half of the leading cancer specialists in America testified on behalf of Bone's bill.

TIME recorded that the grounds of the new institute had been donated by Luke Wilson, the heir to a haberdashery fortune, and his wife, who was an heir to the Woodward & Lothrop department stores. Luke Wilson never lived to see Homer Bone's bill passed, dying just a few weeks before President Roosevelt signed it into law. Wilson died of cancer on July 19, 1937. It was Homer T. Bone who laid the cornerstone for the National Institute for Cancer Research that same year.

Years later, when the judge was honored by the City of Hope in San Francisco, Bone recalled, "Too many of my friends had died of cancer. This brought home to me the magnitude of the cancer problem, and I determined that the Government should do something about it."

So, too was the senator the author of the Bone Power Act, which allowed the creation of public utility districts for the first time. Bone was oftentimes referred to in the press as the "Father of Public Power."

As a boy, Bone had fallen down an elevator shaft, resulting in an injury to his neck, which remained rather stiff. According to TIME magazine, Homer Truett Bone sometimes looked "as rigid as his principles." Bone recalled the incident for Ann Guffin, a writer for the Tacoma News Tribune. "I was a youngster working in the Tacoma Post Office at the time I received my injury in the elevator." It was January 1904 when Homer Bone was headed for his brother's offices, which were located in the Bernice Building. A "young and robust" fellow, Guffin wrote Bone stepped out at the fifth floor "when the allegedly defective elevator manned by an alleged equally inept operator, shot up, catching him in the open door." Ann Guffin wrote, Bone "was pinned mercilessly and crushed into a heap on the floor of the elevator cage." According to court documents and what Judge Bone shared himself, it took a doctor over an hour to revive him. Bone filed suit and won a $3,000 judgment.

Judge Bone wrote a letter to a reporter for the Franklin, Indiana Evening Star, recalling, "My father served in the Union Army throughout the Civil War as a soldier in the 7th Indiana Volunteer Infantry. In 1862, he was a prisoner of the Confederacy for six months at the Belle Island Prison in the James River near Richmond, Va." The judge remained modest, abruptly writing he had held various public positions, "but probably any more specific information would be surplusage."

A loud and strong advocate for public power, Bone began the practice of law in 1911 and sought office unsuccessfully under a number of banners, including that of the Socialist Party. Bone was elected to the Washington state legislature as a member of the Farmer-Labor Party for a single term. Bone sought to win a seat in the U.S.

House of Representatives as a Farmer-Labor candidate in 1920 and was unsuccessful. Oddly, Bone switched to the Republican Party in 1928 and ran against Congressman Albert Johnson yet again. Bone only narrowly lost the primary by 1,550 votes. For the rest of his life, Homer Bone maintained he lost the GOP primary to Congressman Johnson because on the day of the election, Tacoma's streetcar line mysteriously lost power, leaving voters of more modest means unable to get to the polls.

Homer Bone was a good attorney and was the corporation counsel for the Port of Tacoma from 1918 until 1932, when he resigned. A forceful speaker, Bone was quite capable of spewing vitriol if angered.

By 1932, Bone was a Democrat and was running against Senator Wesley L. Jones, a veteran member of Congress who had served five terms as Washington state's congressman-at-large and won a seat in the United States Senate in 1908, being elected by the state legislature. Jones was reelected by the voters in 1914, 1920 and 1926. Wesley L. Jones was an institution in the politics of Washington state, but the 69-year-old senator was not universally popular. Worse still for the incumbent was the stock market crash and the onset of the Great Depression. Politics and voting patterns changed dramatically and forever in some instances. The residents of Washington state looked to Democratic presidential nominee Franklin Roosevelt as a source of hope in a world that was full of misery and despair.

The Democratic ticket routed the Republicans, and Homer Bone won election to the U.S. Senate, carrying every county in the state. Bone carried his home of Pierce County with better than 67% of the vote and won an overall victory of just over 60% of the vote. Senator Jones polled a dismal 32% with minor candidates making up the rest. The shock of his defeat was apparently too much for Senator Jones. Exhausted after his reelection campaign, Jones went to rest in a sanitarium and died of a heart attack on November 19, 1932.

Homer Bone entered the U.S. Senate, where he loyally supported most of President Roosevelt's New Deal program. The peppery Homer T. Bone bristled at the notion he was a rubber stamp for anyone and that included Franklin D. Roosevelt. Senator Bone did not hesitate to oppose the Roosevelt Administration when he disagreed. When FDR was openly backing Alben Barkley of Kentucky to become Senate majority leader, Bone supported Mississippi's Pat Harrison, who lost by a single vote. Bone was not an avid supporter of Roosevelt's foreign policy, especially as the Second World War began to rage. Senator Bone advocated for America remaining neutral and out of the war.

When the Senate wrestled with FDR's Lend-Lease Bill, Senator Homer Bone demanded on the floor of the Senate to know what could possibly be worse than war? Senator Warren Austin, a Republican from Vermont, solemnly replied, "I say that a world enslaved to Hitler is worse than war, and worse than death. A country whose boys will not go out and fight to save Christianity in the world and to save the principle of freedom from ruthless destruction by a fiend - - well, we do not find such boys in America." Even Homer Bone had no retort to that.

By the time Senator Bone sought a second term in 1938, he had spent little or nothing on his reelection bid except for the cost of gas for his personal automobile. The senator even returned a check for $500 to the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, saying he didn't propose to spend anything on his campaign. Bone had tallied more than 243,000 votes while a large field of opponents won a combined total of 196,000. Bone easily swept aside the GOP challenger in the general election. Homer T. Bone had become arguably the single most popular local politician in the state of Washington.

By 1944, Homer Bone had tired of the vagaries of politics, realizing the longer he remained in the Senate, the more difficult it would be to leave it. Nor did Bone relish the idea of campaigning for office every six years and having to raise the money necessary to win. Senator Bone was weary of making the long journey back to Washington state from Washington, D.C., at a time before jet travel. When President Franklin D. Roosevelt offered him a seat on the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, Bone accepted it. As is almost always the case with a colleague or former colleague, the Senate rapidly confirmed Bone's nomination.

Judge Bone lost his wife, Blanche, who had been suffering from what newspapers at the time referred to as a "long illness," on September 1, 1955. Blanche Bone died of cancer at age fifty-eight.

Two months later, Judge Bone announced he was assuming "senior status" as a federal judge. That particular status allowed judges to retire but also continue to hear cases, doing "substantial work," which allowed them to collect their full salaries of $25,000 ($284,000 today). Homer Bone was 72 years old at the time he announced his retirement.

One assignment as a "senior judge" took the 77-year-old Homer T. Bone to Honolulu, Hawaii, where he sat on the federal bench for two weeks. The Honolulu Star Bulletin marveled at the "spry" judge "who keeps young by working." Evidently, Judge Bone had gone to Hawaii to preside over trials where local federal judges had refused themselves. One trial involved a failed candidate for the state legislature who was indicted by a grand jury, and Judge Bone issued a bench warrant for the person's arrest.

Bone opened up a private practice, as well as continuing to sit on the bench until 1968. Throughout the decade of the 1960s, Bone was apparently in remarkably good health, especially for his age. Bone was honored in San Francisco by the local cancer society and had never forgotten his late wife's suffering and struggles; the judge still traveled to speak to local organizations on the topic of cancer research and advances in treatment of the dread disease. In 1962, the judge was the honorary chairman of the fundraising drive for the City of Hope in San Francisco. That same year, Judge Bone was honored in Seattle by the American Cancer Society, which presented him with the "Man Against Cancer" special award. Among those taking part in the ceremonies was actor William Gargan, who had lost his voice to cancer. After six torturous months of rehabilitation and effort, Gargan regained his ability to speak. Following his experience, William Gargan made time to speak to groups throughout the country on behalf of the American Cancer Society and its cancer-prevention programs.

The Washington House of Representatives voted in 1963 to send a resolution to the Evergreen State's congressional delegation asking that a dam be named for Homer Bone, but as the judge was still living and healthy, nothing ever came of the idea.

In 1968, at age 85, Homer T. Bone finally fully retired and left San Francisco, returning home to Tacoma. After a long and highly productive life, Homer Bone died two years later on March 11, 1970.

The Tragic Truth on Passive Parenting

There is a haunting tragedy that echoes through history: it is possible to win in the world and lose at home. A pastor friend recently shared with me the story of a father in his church who provided his son with every opportunity to succeed in football. He had the best training, resources, and support that ultimately led him from NCAA college championships to the NFL. Yet in all his efforts to prepare his son for success on the field, he neglected to prepare him for life off the field. Without a moral compass, the young man's career unraveled. In a moment of painful honesty, the father admitted, "I spent my entire life giving my son everything he needed to climb the ladder of success, only to find when he got there, the ladder I helped him climb was leaning on the wrong wall."

King David understood the all-too-common tragedy of winning in public while losing in private. Sometimes, Christian parents make the path too easy for their children, while others are guilty of unintentional neglect. While the Christian world often praises everything that David built, we frequently forget the price he paid in doing so. The shepherd who became a king established one of the most expansive kingdoms in history. He enhanced Israel's economy, empowered its military, and expanded its borders, yet he somehow completely neglected his family. Although we continue to preach and teach from the songs that David wrote, the giants he defeated, and the kingdom he built, we rarely, if ever, hear about his success as a father or the influence he had on his children.

To provide some context, David had multiple children from different wives. In an already complicated family dynamic and during a very dark season in his life, we see an instance in 2 Samuel 13 where everything David loved began to spiral out of control. Sometimes, when we delve deeply into the Bible, we encounter stories that can make even the most vile among us blush, stories that never make it into Veggie Tales cartoons or coloring books.

Here is a brief overview of the scene: David's son Amnon violates his half-sister, Tamar. David does nothing. Two years later, another son, Absalom, takes matters into his own hands and kills his brother, Amnon. Again, David takes no action. Absalom becomes a murderer, an arsonist, an insurrectionist, an adulterer, and engages in many other destructive behaviors. Still, David does nothing. Eventually, David welcomes Absalom back and continues to nurture him without imposing any corrective punishment.

David serves as a stark lesson on parenting for us; it is both okay and biblical to set boundaries and instructively discipline our children.

Parenting was never meant to be a spectator sport. Yet too many moms and dads today have slipped into the trap of passive parenting, just sitting in the bleachers while culture, peers and screens become the loudest voices shaping their children. What may feel like keeping the peace or giving kids "freedom to figure it out"

often plants the seeds of confusion, insecurity and rebellion. The truth is, passivity in parenting is not neutral; it is dangerous. When parents fail to actively lead, guide and correct, the vacuum is always filled, usually by influences far less loving and far less trustworthy than a father's wisdom or a mother's care. In us, as it was in David, our silence often speaks louder than our words. Parental decisions today set the stage for generational actions tomorrow.

It should haunt us that our children will often live out what we refuse to confront, and when we abdicate our responsibility, our children absorb the consequences. Parents, it's a great risk when we always say yes to all their wants, and we never say no to the dangers. If we don't learn from the mistakes of David, we may build financial and material kingdoms, but when we lose our children, we will be left to live in the ruins of regret.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL

The difference was like night and day as HVA rolls, 45-25

By Steve Williams

The Pride of Pellissippi Trophy was handed back over to Hardin Valley Academy after the Hawks topped off a 45-25 victory over rival Karns Saturday afternoon.

With lightning in the area Friday night, the season opener had to wait an hour before it was safe to play. The two teams got as far as halftime, but more lightning forced the game to be suspended until 2 on Saturday.

Hardin Valley had built a 38-12 lead in the first two quarters and extended the margin to 45-12 on its first possession in the second half on the following day on a 48-yard touchdown run by Chance Sharp and Logan Holbrook's PAT.

Karns didn't roll over by any means and Weston Ritter scored on a 1-yard touchdown play just under four minutes in the third quarter and Jonas

Levi Amey takes off on a touchdown run in Hardin Valley's 45-25 win over rival Karns Friday night at HVA.

Zimmerman capped off a 64-yard drive with a 14-yard TD catch from Austin Slover with 10 minutes to go in the fourth quarter.

Tyler Wynn, who is in his second year as HVA's head coach, was pleased with his team's first game of the season and added "our kids" were the key to the win. "You don't win Game 1 in August. You don't win Game 1 even in July. It's a buy-in from our kids from the last game last year.

"We finished the season with a bad taste in our mouth and a lot of kids that were hungry wanted to put in the effort it takes to take this program to the next level. We've still got a long way to go. But this is great to get that first notch. Like door No. 1 – strike it off. That's a big one."

Despite mistakes and penalties, Karns jumped out to a 6-0 lead Friday night as Slover threw a 21-yard touchdown pass to Ritter. That would be the Beavers' only lead.

HVA quarterback Riley Matz answered with a 5-yard TD run and Becks Allen's 2-point run put the Hawks ahead 8-6. Samuel

Warriors open season with a victory over Concord Christian

By Ken Lay

Driving rains and lightning strikes brought a premature ending to Christian Academy of Knoxville's home opener Friday night.

The Warriors, however, were able to get a win, but the game didn't go final until early Saturday afternoon as CAK defeated a young team from Concord Christian School, 24-7, at Warrior Stadium.

The game's start was delayed for more than an hour on Friday as rain pelted West Knoxville and sporadic lightning strikes lit the sky. Once the game began, CAK quickly seized the upper hand as it darted out to a 17-0 lead by halftime.

The Warriors took a 7-0 lead on their possession as they engineered an 11-play, 63-yard drive that consumed nearly seven minutes. CAK sophomore quarterback Seaton Moffett polished off the drive when he connected with Gabriel Linkous on a 28-yard scoring strike. Bennett Jelks added the extra point to make the score 7-0 with 5 minutes, 21 seconds remaining in the opening frame.

CAK (1-0) extended its advantage to 14-0 on a 3-yard scoring plunge by senior Ryan Gibson early in the second stanza. Gibson closed out the scoring in the contest on Saturday with a 1-yard run in the third quarter.

The Warriors led 17-0 at halftime thanks to a 32-yard field goal by Jelks, whose mother celebrated her 50th birthday on Saturday. Kelly Jelks is an assistant athletic director at the school, and following the season opener, the Warriors serenaded her

South-Doyle pours it on in second half to beat Austin-East

By David Klein

Friday night at South-Doyle High School, there were offensive fireworks galore in the first half as the South-Doyle Cherokees and Austin-East Roadrunners traded big play touchdowns and huge plays. Fifty-seven points were scored by both teams in the first half as Austin-East took a 30-27 halftime lead, but South-Doyle would crank it up in the second half to win 52-30.

The offensive fireworks started on the third play of the game as Roadrunner freshman running back Keyvon Booker took a handoff up the middle for a 66-yard touchdown run with 10:13 left in the first quarter for a 7-0 lead.

South-Doyle took its first possession and, after a 39-yard run from running back Isaiah Winfield, got the ball into Roadrunner territory. Quarterback Benson Brang flung a 14-yard touchdown pass to Kamariyon Rice to put the Cherokees on top 7-6 with 9:29 left in the first quarter.

Austin-East wasted no time in countering. Quarterback Jayden Norries threw a 61-yard touchdown pass to Braden Sands. The Roadrunners' 2-point conversion attempt failed, but they led 12-7 with 7:44 left in the first quarter.

Four plays later, South-Doyle retook the lead on Brang's 55-yard touchdown pass to Reed Reynolds. The Cherokees led 14-12 with 6:23 left in the first quarter.

Following an Austin-East punt, the Cherokees went four plays and ended their drive with a 62-yard touchdown pass from Brang to Rondell North to go back on top 20-12. The 2-point conversion attempt failed.

"I really give credit to the O-line and the outside receivers," Brang said. "Our receivers are some of the best athletes in the region. I mean it really feels like we're unstoppable on the outside," he emphasized.

The Cherokees pushed the lead to 27-12 after a second Brang touchdown pass to Rice with 9:49 left in the second quarter. "We came out executed, never gave up," Rice said. "My team did a great job, we executed well, we fought well to the end," Rice added.

Just when it looked like the Cherokees were pulling away, Austin-East's Travis

A GLANCE BACK AND A LOOK AHEAD

An inside look at pickle juice ... it really works!

By Steve Williams

It's not unusual for high school football players to get the cramps early in the season.

Oak Ridge junior tailback Damillyan Porter, who rushed for 97 yards on seven carries in the first half of the Wildcats' 28-13 win over Halls last week, spent all of halftime and much of the second half – if not all – trying to get a cramp out of his leg in the Rivalry Thursday game against the Red Devils at Blankenship Field.

He first tried sitting on the turf and rolling his leg back and forth across a tube over and over. When that wasn't working he asked Chris Williams if he would come over and help him out. Williams, an assistant principal, was nearby on the sideline. Now 54, Williams told me he had played football and basketball at Rockwood when he was in high school.

Damillyan laid on his back with his leg raised straight up in the air, while Williams tried to make the cramp go away by applying pressure in the affected area. But still no relief.

With intermission about over and the teams and coaches returning to the field, one of the coaches brought a cup with some kind of liquid in it and gave it to Damillyan.

Hmmm, I thought. Could this be what I think it is?

For as far back as I can remember, I had heard about pickle juice being good for getting rid of cramps. Damillyan took a smell of it and his facial reaction indicated he wasn't going to like it. But he started drinking it.

His mom had now come down to the sideline and was observing what was going on with her son. She was about two feet from me on the other side of the fence. Damillyan came over close to where his mom was and also close to me.

So I took this opportunity to ask the talented tailback a question.

"What does that pickle juice taste like," I asked, thinking he's going to reply with one word – pickles.

Instead, however, he paused and looked at me straight in the eye and said simply, "You don't want to know."

South-Doyle pours it on in second half to beat Austin-East

Tucker took a kickoff back 97 yards for a touchdown to cut South-Doyle's lead to 27-18 with 9:33 left in the second quarter.

Austin-East then recovered an onside kick and had the ball at the Cherokees' 31-yard line. Two plays later, Norries threw a 16-yard touchdown pass to Marcos McCord to cut the Cherokees' lead to 27-24.

The special teams' miscues for South-Doyle continued. Austin-East kicked another onside kick and South-Doyle fumbled the kickoff to give Austin-East the ball in Cherokee territory again. Five plays later, Austin-East took the lead on Booker's 1-yard touchdown run for a 30-27 lead just before halftime.

"We got to clean up, we'll clean it up and be better next week," South-Doyle head coach Larry Headrick said about the Cherokees' special teams' mistakes.

In the second half, the Cherokees held the Roadrunners scoreless and outscored them 25-0. South-Doyle took the lead for good on Mill Crenshaw's 6-yard touchdown run. The score made it 33-30 South-Doyle with 1:40 left in the third quarter.

it 39-30 South-Doyle. The extra point was good and South-Doyle led 40-30 with 7:46 left in the fourth quarter.

The Cherokees tacked on a touchdown run from Crenshaw and an interception return for a touchdown from Rondell North to make the final score 52-30 South-Doyle.

"We played a really good first quarter," Headrick said. "Second quarter, we didn't play. They got momentum, they got back-to-back onside kicks. We just didn't handle that very well. But we came back out in the second half and I thought our guys responded to the adversity. They grew up. We were a young football team last year. This year, we're a mature football team, and I think it showed in the second half."

Mann added a 3-yard touchdown run and 2-point conversion to make it 16-6.

Slover pulled the Beavers close (16-12) with a 22-yard TD pass to Ritter, but the 2-point pass failed.

Owen Vaughn intercepted a Karns pass and returned it 15 yards. Levi Amey then zig-zagged 32 yards up the middle for six points and Mann added the 2-point conversion with a tush push play to double the lead (24-12) with 9:30 left.

A penalty backed up the Beavers to their 20-yard line and a sack by defensive end Sharp pushed them farther back. Then Karns snapped the ball over punter Tanner Clark's head and Andrew Perkins recovered it in the end zone for a touchdown. Holbrook's PAT made it 31-12.

Brody Lamb's 61-yard TD catch from Matz gave the Hawks a 38-12 command.

Despite the huge deficit on Saturday, Karns Coach Lee Warren wanted his team to battle back and they did. "I'm proud of you guys," he told them in the post-game huddle on the sideline.

Ritter, a senior, said the team talked a lot about adversity in the summer and how we needed to respond to that. "I felt like last night the rain and all the delays kind of set that adversity. We came out today and it kind of really showed us where we are as a team and kind of responded as well as we could."

Hardin Valley and Karns, which are just 4.3 miles apart via Hardin Valley Road, restarted their rivalry in 2021 and have now played five games since then, with the Beavers leading the latest series 3-2. Overall, the Hawks lead 6-4 in all games.

with a chorus of "Happy Birthday."

Bennett made some key plays on defense, kicked three extra points and had the field goal.

"It feels great to do this on my mom's birthday," he said. "It was great to get a win against a good football team."

"They're a physical team, but today, we were the more physical team."

The Warriors held the Lions off the scoreboard over the first 24 minutes of the contest. Concord, however, got a shot of momentum early in the third quarter when Dasani Moulden intercepted a pass in the end zone and returned it the length of the field for a CCS touchdown, making the score 17-7. That would turn out to be the final play Friday. After another lengthy weather delay, the game was suspended.

"Football is a game of momentum, and I felt like we had the momentum right there," Lions' coach Steve Matthews said. "But then, the weather came in and we had to come back and play (Saturday)."

"We competed well, but we just had too many mistakes to win today. We started seven freshmen and an eighth grader on offense, and those kids competed well

CAK coach Chad Speck was pleased to see his team capture a victory to open the new season.

"This was a big win for us against a very good, very physical team," Speck said. "We're just blessed to be able to play football and develop young men using this great game."

"We played a really good first quarter. Second quarter, we didn't play. They got momentum, they got back-to-back onside kicks. We just didn't handle that very well. But we came back out in the second half and I thought our guys responded to the adversity. They grew up. We were a young football team last year. This year, we're a mature football team, and I think it showed in the second half."

- South-Doyle Head Coach Larry Headrick

The day was Oct. 22, 1977, in the year John Majors came marching home as head football coach at the University of Tennessee.

The series grew in intensity in 1969, with a 14-13 Florida win in the Gator Bowl. The game was overshadowed by the rumors, later proven true, that Tennessee head coach Doug Dickey was leaving Knoxville and headed to Gainesville.

Florida was back on the Tennessee schedule in 1970. It was the first regular season game between the Vols and Gators since a 20-0 Tennessee victory in 1955. Dickey's return to Knoxville was a major story, as big as a 38-7 Vol win.

In 1971, Florida decided to wear orange shirts instead of their traditional blue. The game would also be played at night. The Gators were winless when the Vols came calling, but the game was a war. Tennessee wore the white shirts with the orange collar and won, 20-13.

Then came 1977, with a significant event happening before the team even arrived at the stadium. Tennessee stayed in Silver Springs in those days. The Vol travel party was in three buses, motoring up Florida

By Tom Mattingly

Highway 315 to what was then called Florida Field. As they headed toward Gainesville, the motorcade neared a Seaboard Coast Line grade crossing without signals.

"Only a few people on the buses noticed that a fast-moving train was approaching," Russ Bebb wrote, "but not the Florida state trooper escorting the convoy, nor the driver of the front bus. They made it across the tracks without incident."

Bebb added that the No. 2 and No. 3 buses were able to stop as the train came roaring by.

"I was reading at the time, and I glanced up and saw this train coming lickety-split. It was right on us," Majors said from his perspective sitting on the lead bus. "We probably didn't miss getting hit by more than two seconds. I remember thinking that the No. 2 bus had been destroyed; there was no doubt in my mind. It was stupid on the part of the trooper, and I let him know it when we got to the stadium."

The incident had to have brought back memories of the deaths of John's brother, Bill, and fellow assistant coaches Charlie Rash and Bob Jones. They had died in a car-train crash in West

John Majors first established the white jerseys and orange pants as the road uniforms in 1977 – first against Alabama, then a week later against Florida.

In 1990, Steve Spurrier's first year at Florida, Tennessee led 7-3 at halftime. Dale Carter returned the opening kickoff of the second half 92 yards for a score, and the Vols reeled off 38 unanswered points to win 45-3. The second half performance was highlighted by tight end Von Reeves tossing a TD pass to wide receiver Carl Pickens.

For those of you who thought the intense rivalry between Tennessee and Florida started just recently, it goes back a great deal farther than that...back to six games between 1969 and 1977.

IN MEMORIAM: BILL WILLIAMS (March 22, 1934-August 18, 2025): It was my good fortune to sit with Bill in the Neyland Stadium public address booth during the years he was the public address announcer for the University of Tennessee "Pride of the Southland Marching Band." When Bill spoke, either on the air at Channel 10, in support of the community projects near to his heart, or across the expanse of Neyland Stadium during football Saturday halftime ceremonies with the band, thoughtful people paid attention. Requiescat in pace.

Knoxville, Cessna Drive at Westland, on Oct. 18, 1965.

The game itself was exciting. Florida jumped to the early lead, but Jimmy Streater led the Vols back to a 17-17 tie. He threw a TD pass to freshman tight end Reggie Harper. Then came a 99-yard run, the longest in Tennessee history, by tailback Kelsey Finch.

The Vols were backed up to their goal at the South end of Florida Field, third-and-10 at the Vol 1. The crowd was in full voice. Finch turned an innocent-looking off-tackle play into one for the record books.

"As I hit the hole, there was nobody there," said Finch. "I cut to the sidelines and remember Roland James hollering, 'They're going to catch you!'"

Late in the game, the Gators scored with 46 seconds left to lead 27-17. After a Vol fumble, Florida had the ball on the Vol 33, the clock counting down. Next came a run to the Vol 18. Three seconds remained.

Then, surprisingly (or maybe not) came a Florida timeout. Quarterback Terry LeCount then tossed an aerial to wideout Wes Chandler, who caught the ball deep in the end zone, but was ruled out of bounds.

That provoked a major skirmish at midfield.

Knoxville's Allen Williams was a senior punter for the Gators. He remembered the ensuing scene quite well, calling it "surreal."

"Kim Helton was the Florida line coach. During the timeout, he grabbed Terry LeCount and was talking about throwing the ball," said Williams. "When the pass was ruled incomplete, he seemed extremely disappointed."

Majors, whom Bebb described as "visibly annoyed," did say, "Our day will come." That day came, 13 years later.

HIGH SCHOOL SOCCER

Bearden opens 2025 campaign with shutout win over Lady Irish

By Ken Lay

Bearden High School girls soccer coach Ryan Radcliffe knows that he has one forward capable of finding the back of the net consistently. He also knows, however, that opponents will have a game plan in place to stop senior Jayla Blue.

Blue, a University of Tennessee commitment, scored one goal in the Lady Bulldogs' 5-0 season-opening victory over Catholic Wednesday night at Turner-Allender Field.

But the night was also an exercise in frustration for Blue. She had several touches and created multiple scoring opportunities, many of which went wide of the goal or over the frame. She hit the crossbar once and banged a ball off the post before she closed out the evening's scoring against the Irish.

"We know that Jayla is going to be marked, and we know that she's going to be double-and-triple teamed, and the big thing I told her was not to get frustrated," Radcliffe said.

The Lady Bulldogs (1-0) enjoyed the territorial advantage most of the night, and they dominated possession. The Bearden defense surrendered just four shots against the Lady Irish, who were playing short-handed. Catholic won its opener earlier in the week, defeating Oak Ridge at Blaine Stadium.

Despite the seemingly lopsided score, Catholic coach Josh Marin was upbeat.

"We beat Oak Ridge the other night and they're a really good team," Martin said. "But Bearden is a step above everybody around

"We're battling a couple of injuries right now, but our kids competed hard and I'm really proud of them."

The Lady Irish (1-1) and Bearden were locked in a scoreless deadlock before the Lady Bulldogs broke through in the 18th minute.

Junior Madi Bolin gave Bearden a 1-0 lead when she tallied off an assist from Blue.

The Lady Bulldogs extended their advantage to 2-0 in the 35th minute as Lauren Downey made it 2-0 with the final marker of the first half. The marker came off a set piece as Tyler Roth assisted with a corner kick.

Bearden scored early in the second half when Brooklyn Major made it 3-0 with her first marker of the young season.

Roth, who is returning for her senior season after missing the 2024 campaign due to an ACL injury, scored in the 61st minute before Blue closed out the scoring in the 65th minute.

Invitational.

The event, hosted by Bearden High School, takes place from Aug. 28-31. Matches will be contested at Turner-Allender Field and Bill Young Field. The host Lady Bulldogs have won three of the last four Class 3A state championships and appeared in the last four state championship matches.

They'll be joined in this year's field by Class 2A powers Greeneville and Alcoa, Maryville, Farragut, Division II-AA state runner-up Webb School of Knoxville, Knoxville Catholic, Heritage (now coached by former Central coach Chris Quinn), defending Class 3A state champion Houston, Chattanooga GPS, Oak Ridge, Gallatin, Station Camp, Liberty Creek and Central Hardin (Kentucky).

"What's The Basketball?"

(Sent by Kali Buckner of the Women's Basketball Hall of Fame)

It's nearly impossible to miss the Women's Basketball Hall of Fame's most recognizable landmark — its massive trademark basketball. Perched high atop the north rotunda of the building, this colossal structure stands as both a symbol of sport and an icon of the Knoxville skyline.

The basketball itself is an extraordinary feat of design and engineering. Created as an exact replica of a regulation basketball, it is constructed from durable fiberglass supported by a strong steel framework. The craftsmanship captures every detail, from the familiar pebble texture of the ball's surface to the precise panel lines, giving it the authentic look of the real thing — only on a much grander scale.

Weighing approximately 20,000 pounds, this towering sculpture is the largest basketball in the world. The fiberglass base skillfully features the illusion of a basketball hoop, making it seem like the ball is always in mid-shot. This eye-catching detail not only honors the sport but also creates a striking visual link to the Hall of Fame's mission: Honoring the Past, Celebrating the Present, and Promoting the Future of the Women's Game.

Visible from various points around the city, the giant basketball has become a beloved piece of Knoxville's identity, drawing visitors and sports fans from across the country. Whether you're walking downtown or arriving from the highway, it's a landmark that proudly signals you've reached the home of women's basketball excellence.

Area cheerleaders post top efforts at National Championships

By Ken Lay

A local cheer club recently had three of its teams compete in the National Championships in Cleveland, Ohio.

The Champion Force of West Knox posted three Top-5 finishes on the nation's grand stage. The club has been coached by head coach Jen Darby and assistant coach Jae Carr for seven seasons and under the duo's leadership the club has never failed to reach the National Championships.

Members of the championship-caliber squads range from ages 8-18.

The Wolf Pack Elite (Division 5.4) posted a second-place finish in Cleveland with no deductions.

The Wolf Pack Omegas (Division 3) came in third at nationals and the Wolf Pack Alpha Cubs finished fifth. One of the club's athletes, senior Kali McMahon, competed on all three teams.

"Her smile and above-and-beyond commitment to the Wolf Pack will be greatly missed," Darby said of McMahon. "These ladies have been together as a team for a couple of years now."

Any trip to the National Championships requires hard work and sacrifice and this was no exception.

"I'm absolutely thrilled for our girls," Darby said.

The coach had high praise for all three teams.

"Our Alpha Elite Team has practiced hard all season and put everything into their team," Darby said. "They are amazing teammates and have such great bonds with each other."

"With their attitudes and drive, there is no stopping them."

Darby noted that the team performed well against squads from Michigan and Indiana in Cleveland.

Of the Wolf Pack Omegas squad, Darby said, "In our years of going to national competitions, Division 3 is an extremely tough category. We have never seen these kids perform with so much energy and enthusiasm as they did on that nationals stage."

That squad won the state championship to qualify for nationals.

The Wolf Pack Alpha Cubs finished fifth as they faced some extremely strong competition.

"This team went through some tough ups and downs," Darby said. "Through it all, these ladies stayed positive and know they will come back stronger next season. We are so proud of this team."

Anyone interested in joining the club may do so for $10 and the teams practice one day a week. Inquiries can be made on the club's Facebook page, Champion Force of West Knox.

History of the tri-state area after the Civil War

By Jadon Gibson

Following the War Between the States, many of the returning soldiers found their home area to be a hazardous place to live. Many of the men who served on the opposing side held grudges against them. Some hid in the brush along the paths and took potshots at them. Those men who hadn't served at all were often bushwhacked by men who felt they should have done their share by fighting in the war.

Many of the veterans stayed in their home area and tried to keep a low profile during this period. Some felt it was too dangerous and gathered their families and belongings and left for Texas, Missouri, Kansas or other destinations. The acronym GTT, meaning "Gone To Texas," was noted in some courthouse files.

A new industry sprang up in the local area following the War Between the States. Wood was in demand for a multitude of purposes, and the tri-state area had vast virgin forests of white oak, black walnut, yellow poplar, chestnut, buckeye, ash, maple and others.

Many trees were cut to fuel the iron furnace in Cumberland Gap. John Newlee employed approximately 300 men and produced three to four tons of iron daily. That's about 45 units of pig iron weighing 150 pounds each.

Some were sold to local blacksmiths, but most were hauled to the Powell River and shipped to Chattanooga.

The availability of steel and simpler methods of steel production led to the discontinuance of production at the foundry in 1880.

Getting back to the logging industry, many logs were floated on the Powell River to the mills near the forks formed by the Powell and Clinch Rivers at Clinton; to the mills near the forks of the Clinch and Holston Rivers in Kingston; and to the Hart Loomis Lumber Company on the Tennessee River in Chattanooga.

Initially, the logs were connected in long strings, but after a few years, the method changed when the logs were bound together into large rafts, 100 to 150 feet in length. It took four days to raft logs to Clinton, six days to Kingston and nine or ten days to Chattanooga. After reaching their destination, the men would usually walk back home. After the advent of the railroads, the men returned by train.

Rafting was less common during the summer months because the water level was often inadequate.

The logging and rafting business reached its peak between 1880 and 1890, before the completion of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad resulted in a rapid decline. The last rafts floated down the Powell River in 1919.

Alexander Arthur, an Englishman and cousin of former President Chester Arthur, read an article about the tri-state area and its vast resources in Harper's Weekly in 1886.

Within days, he visited to see for himself and was impressed. He climbed to the Pinnacle and saw visions of cities, industry, railroads and development, and returned to England where he gathered financial backing to launch the American Association. This resulted in a large influx of workers and Middlesboro, Harrogate and several other area towns being built.

The railroad lines reached Pineville, Kentucky, on April 1, 1888. As the line was being built to Middlesboro, workers were digging the railroad tunnel beneath Cumberland Mountain.

Meanwhile, the new city of Middlesboro was booming with English capital pouring into the area. The population of Middlesboro was 6,200 by August 1889.

Tented cities sprang up on the outskirts of Middlesboro and at the present site of Cumberland Gap because accommodations couldn't be built quick enough to meet the demand. It took 18 months to build the railroad tunnel with digging from both sides simultaneously.

Alexander Arthur was present in the tunnel on the night of August 8, 1889, when the crews from Kentucky and Tennessee met inside the tunnel.

A large celebration followed with train whistles and shots fired into the air as workers went on a wild spree in Middlesboro and on Hell's Half Acre, a stretch of saloons that lined the southern edge of Cumberland Mountain.

The railroad from Corbin to Middlesboro was completed on September 1, 1889, and locomotives from Louisville and Knoxville touched cattle-guards (noses), sending workers and residents on another wild spree.

The arrival of the railroad spurred further growth, and Middlesboro reached a population of nearly 15,000 inhabitants in the following months. The L&N agent in Middlesboro reported brisk activity.

A disastrous fire in 1890 destroyed much of the business section of Middlesboro, but like a phoenix, it rose from its ashes.

The failure of the Bahrng Bank of England in 1892 and the resulting Panic of 1893 resulted in the investments in the local area drying up. Factories closed and construction projects were left uncompleted. Jobs were lost and people left in droves. Hundreds of homes and stores were left without tenants.

During the Civil War, President Lincoln told General Oliver Howard, a close personal friend, that he hoped to see something done for the residents of this tri-state area following the war. He felt their service to the Union cause was outstanding.

Several years later, Gen. Howard played a role in the formation of Lincoln Memorial University when 580 acres of land were purchased. The remainder of the elegant Four Seasons Hotel, the building which housed the sanitarium, became the nucleus of Lincoln Memorial University.

The railroad became the lighthouse in the storm of woes that faced the area after the demise of the American Association. The railroad brought passengers and goods, and it had a positive effect on the property values.

Much of the Wilderness Road was paved in 1925 and became the so-called Dixie Highway because so many north-south motorists used the highway. It became a secondary route later on with the opening of Interstate 75.

Meanwhile, industrial needs for coal grew, and our mountain area is blessed with an abundance of coal and men to mine it. With coal and the railroad system intact, the area would again embark on prosperous times.

The Tennessee Valley was a flood-prone area with many towns, farms and mills ravaged by high waters. Lives, crops and livestock were lost. After a catastrophic flood killed 16 people early in the last century, interest in the Tennessee Valley Authority developed. The bill was signed into law in 1933, and the resultant dams harnessed the rivers. They also resulted in electric power being sent through the hills and hollows ... bringing light, industry and jobs.

Congress authorized Cumberland Gap National Historical Park in 1941 as a memorial to the pioneers who passed along Wilderness Road. The history and beauty of the area have resulted in hundreds of thousands of visitors since the opening of the park in 1955.

With the completion and use of the Cumberland Gap tunnel and four-lane expansion of Highway 25E to the north and south and the four-lane expansion of Highway 58 to the Atlantic Ocean, Cumberland Gap and the tri-state area loom as one to be reckoned with for years to come.
